The recent financial readjustment of the industry necessitated much discomfort, as such processes invariably do, by throwing perhaps sixty-five per cent of our workers into idleness. Some of the screen's greatest artists numbered among the unemployed. There resulted, quite naturally, many applications for each engagement open, especially in the acting class. Then it was that the young director, whose memory could not include a previous happening of this kind, began to feel his self-importance and to deal high-handedly with performers who could teach him picture technique for several years without beginning to exhaust their knowledge of the subject. This he failed to recognize, seemingly, for a representative of the class referred to calmly confided to us not a week since that he "could have at his beck and call any actor in the business and most of them at his own price." It was another case of "take off your hat and turn around." We pity such ignorance a little, and on account of it we have set down the above that he may mark the end of the story which he is "redoing."

History has never, so it tells us itself, been partial in its repetitions. Again the film producing business is opening with what promises to be a boom. Once more our performers are going to enjoy the old time prosperity earned by willing labor, and then the director whose disrespect has been so much resented of late will be face to face with the same unhappy circumstances which nearly overcame his professional predecessors years ago. One should consider much the vicissitudes of one's chosen line of endeavor. Their causes should be traced and marked well. Injustice and undue conceit must be barred in all art. They inevitably eliminate.—F. R.

"The Queen of Sheba"

Philharmonic Auditorium

William Fox's elaborate spectacle, "The Queen of Sheba," which has its first Pacific Coast presentation this week, backs up its exploitation by being indeed a tremendous production, embellished, as might be anticipated, with mammoth sets, enormous crowds and all of the much-sung splendor of the ancient courts; consequently it is sure to delight all who lean toward the pageant.

That great care was expended throughout the filming of this picture in regard to detail accuracy is continually apparent, a fact which speaks commendably for the diligence of its technical staff; but our historical students are due to receive several jolts if they approach this Virginia Tracy version of Sheba's and Solomon's life histories with the idea that it is a faultless chronicle of the little that we know of the fair and wise rulers. However, that this is more or less an imaginative revision of several of their biographical chapters will mean little to those who are content to look upon "The Queen of Sheba" as an unusual entertainment in the romantic costume line, and nothing to the thousands who possess no mentionable knowledge of the famous beauty and sage, anyway.

Current Reviews

"THE GIRL FROM GOD'S COUNTRY"

Clune's

Clune's Broadway Theatre re-opens this week with an F. B. Warren release, "The Girl from God's Country," starring Nell Shipman. The story, written as well as played by Miss Shipman, is a very complicated melodrama which is, singularly enough, kept remarkably lucid in the scenario. It is altogether safe to state that we have never witnessed a thriller packed more full of breath-taking action and general deviltry requiring the utilization of everything from wild animals to aviation stunts above the briny deep than is this production, contrasting the Canadian wilds and California civilization. As might be expected it is a rather wildly imaginative tale which couldn't possibly occur, but then neither could "Go and Get It," and a great portion of Griffith's melodrama which is nevertheless "eaten up" by the multitudes. Recklessness in this type of thing injures its impression upon only the comparatively few film fans who are ultra practical. Even they will recognize that in this instance Bert Van Tuyle's capable direction does much to humanize the story by handling its more important characters as consistently as possible under the sometimes forced circumstances.

Some truly exquisite shots are the accomplishment for "The Girl from God's Country" of cinematographer J. B. Walker, who has assisted much of the aerial work to effectiveness with his excellent judgment of angles, etc.

Two well executed contrasting roles are the work of the star in this production. Particularly clever, however, is her characterization of Neeka Le Mort, the primitive little French woodswoman, who carries the plot's main interest. Neeka's guilelessness, her extreme capabilities for loving and hating, and her sincere repentance of the wrong she commits in her savage anger, were to us many times more diverting than were the countless moments of daring accomplishment in which her interpreter displays skill and courage possessed by few film celebrities of either sex. There isn't a doubt but that the average audience will disagree with us on this score and vote in favor of the more sensational work of this refreshing young woman. It ordinarily does.

Miss Shipman also portrays Marion Carslake, an affected representative of modern society, whose relationship to the little French girl is the chief problem to be puzzled over by the audience and cast throughout almost the entire length of the play. It is difficult to always classify this role, which is unfortunate. Mostly it is surrounded by unsympathetic circumstances; now and again it is a martyr. However, Neeka is the important interpretation of Miss Shipman in this picture. The latter means little save as opposing complication.

An exceedingly appealing part, Jean Couret, the aviator whose fame as the war's greatest ace has been purchased with his eyesight, is done by Boyd Irwin. This is one of the most interesting things in which we have noted Irwin, who is more than competent to care for it.

Owen Glendon, a romantic juvenile, is the effort of Edward Burns, who makes him maybe more human than heroically sympathetic, for which we wish personally to thank the actor. The old time storybook gallantry as a requisite of those males who would seem anything but vicious villains is becoming a bit passe. Anything that tends toward truth in our fiction is advancement.

Al Filson is appropriately situated in and amply handles the heavy, J. Randall Carslake, the kidnaper of another man's brain children.

Walt Whitman, who artistically enacts Carslake's brother, a demented inventor, is another and vital element in the plot unfoldment, while Lillian Leighton does some type-creating on her own in Notawa, Neeka's Indian nurse.

Ann May

George Berrell as Pierre Le Mort, C. K. van Auker as Otto Kraus and L. M. Wells as Sandy MacIntosh are all well placed in their respective roles.

The airplane work in "The Girl from God's Country" was, we understand, arranged by Emery Roger.

"GASOLINE GUS"

Grauman's

Roscoe Arbuckle's latest Paramount-starring publication is an adapted combination of George Patullo's two Saturday Evening Post stories, "Gasoline Gus" and "Dry Check Charlie." The screen version for which Walter Wood is responsible has been given the former title, which is no more sprightly than the action coming under its head. This comedy, another crossing of slapstick and farce, is up to Arbuckle's high standard in entertainment value and correct presentation. James Cruze's direction is of the just right variety that is almost always to his credit. Karl Brown's photography is also above reproach.

Roscoe himself is as usual—Fatty. Perhaps, at that, Gasoline Gus is a trifle more peppy than the bulky comedian's characters customarily are, by which we do not intend an insinuation that they are not always more nimble of movement than an amateur observer would be liable to judge possible from the subject's physical proportions. Seriously, Arbuckle is strictly at home as he slides easily through Gus' harrowing experiences right down to the very finish. He must be criticized for negligence as to his make-up, however, which is inexcusably and unpleasantly ragged in various sequences.

Lila Lee fits in remarkably well opposite the star. This time she appears in the role of Sally Jo Banty, a simple child of the village, whose unwavering loyalty to poor, abused Gus lends her considerable sympathy. We begin to think that Miss Lee has "located" at last.

Dry Check Charlie and Brother Newberry, the scheming crooks who do so much to "ball things up" generally, are very well done by Theodore Lorch and Charles Ogle. They form a great combination!

Fred Huntley makes a regular small town editor of Don Rayburn, and Wilton Taylor plays equally as well Judge Shortredge, the typical village crank.

Knute Erickson completes the cast as Scrap Iron Swenson.

"THE SIGN ON THE DOOR"

Kinema

Channing Pollock's murder drama, "The Sign on the Door," scenarized, is Joseph Schenck's latest presentation through First National, starring Norma Talmadge. The adaptation of the play is excellent and the Herbert Brenon direction of it is an immense improvement over "The Passion Flower," his previous recent attempt with the emotional star. Very good photography and carefully handled technical details in addition to some excellent performances will probably rescue this production from the "panning" that some portions of its stereotyped story deserve. The plot, however, is of the type and consistency to rivet the attention throughout, which is probably the main consideration, and the unexpected climax, in which the almost inevitable trial is mercifully omitted, is more than a relief.

Certainly Miss Talmadge is afforded a wide range for a dramatic interpretation by the circumstances in which Ann Regan, her vivid role, finds itself. She has not lately done more strikingly shaded acting than is to her credit here as the woman who would assume a murder committed by her husband rather than to live in safety without his love.

Charles Richman is the exact type to play Lafayette Regan, her uncompromising husband, of whose stringent ideals any woman might stand a little in awe.

Once again after several years traversing foreign shores, Lew Cody is at home in Frank Devereaux, the roue heavy in this picture drama. He enacts the part with his well remembered suavity right through to his murder by a just man. Cody means much more to any production in such a capacity than he does as the star.

Hal MacAllister plays cleverly the District Attorney in charge of the Devereaux murder and Helen Weir is seen as Helen, Regan's very young, rather indiscreet daughter. This youngster's personality is not particularly pleasing but she is sufficient here.

David Proctor completes the list of players as Col. Gaunt.

Some day we want to see Norma Talmadge, the screen's most popular emotionalist, in a really big vehicle. It would mean much to her at this time.

TEN MINUTES WITH OUR CORRESPONDENTS

Whether or not we agree with the following extracts from two vehement communications received at our editorial offices, their writers must be credited with thinking in lines that we could advantageously consider:

Dear Editor:—

I warn you, before you read further, that this is going to be a long and loud wail. If you read to the end—I hope that you will let others read it, too—it may be a relief to them, as I know many who are of the same opinion.

In the first place, I am a very busy person, and am not able to go to the "movies" as often as I should like to. When I do go I try to see the features. Last night I saw three.

"Dream Street." "The Great Moment." "The Conquering Power."

This is the real beginning of the wail. May I ask in the vernacular, "How do they get that way" when it comes to boasting of D. W. Griffith?

Of all the junk in the form of a story, "Dream Street" is it. The director has his people acting as if they were afflicted with St. Vitus dance.

It would be impossible for any actress, even one with the charm and versatility of Carol Dempster, to win any sympathy for Gypsy, the central figure of the play. The idiotic, jerky movements—all reminiscent of Lillian Gish—the everlasting stepping and twisting, the insane and inane repetition of action, the grimaces and the ferocious gnashing of teeth—which totally destroyed the otherwise splendid acting of the younger brother—the laughable (if it were not so tragic) pugilistic prancing of the unboxer-like boxer; and last, but not least, the smug, artificial and stagy Chinaman, was the last bet.

I have seen only three of the great (?) D. W. Griffith "masterpieces," and I hope the last. Saw "The Birth of a Nation" a few weeks ago, and only then fully realized the power of the press, and the truth of the slogan, "It pays to advertise."

"The Love Flower" is the best of the three.

In the case of D. W. Griffith—I'll say it with flowers.

After "Dream Street" I stepped in next door and saw Elinor's "The Great Moment." I happened to go in when Gloria Swanson was on the screen, in the scene with her father. The subtitle informed us that it was morning, in fact, Gloria had just finished breakfast. She had had a wild and woolly night the night before—naturally this should have been the "morning after," you know the sort of thing, fuzzy head and furry tongue, not that I wish to indicate that you have had that feeling, but, you, as I, have read about it. Savvy?

Gloria is a great girl, she can get up to breakfast, and not only that, but can stick her hair full of cart wheels, to me the dreadful things she had sticking in her hair looked like two wheels off a child's gocart. HEADACHE! Not at all.

Just as soon as I got a glimpse of Gloria, I relaxed, and enjoyed the show, very much interested in the remarks of a little girl, sitting next to me with her mother. The child was about nine years of age, and as you are an imaginative person, I am sure you will understand the questions asked, and the subsequent embarrassment of the mother. Result of the hour's entertainment—to me: Complete rest and relaxation — but would have liked twenty-five cents of my fifty-five back.

Now for "The Conquering Power." A classic, but why have Charlie Chaplin in it, when they have such a capable and splendid actor as Rudolph Valentino? I wonder if Rex Ingram ever met an educated Frenchman twenty-seven years old—or, in fact, a young man of any nationality—that did not know what an ear trumpet was for. When Charles dropped his ash into the ear trumpet, he, to me, faded right out of the picture, and Charlie Chaplin took his place. That, and the candle in the BOTTLE were the two things that were slips in the technic of the director, otherwise the picture was wonderfully well done; June Mathis, Rex Ingram, and all his company deserve all praise. Long may they reign!

If you have got this far, I may as well use the whole sheet. I saw "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," and I think that it is the most perfect picture I have ever seen. Unfortunately, our family lost all their menfolks in the first year of the war, and the very sight of a uniform brings it all back. That is one of the reasons I, and many others, stayed away from the first showing of the "Horsemen." Still, it is the picture "Supreme."

HYPER-CRITIC.

Mr. Nolan in his article in Saturday's Camera! on foreign atmosphere certainly said a mouthful, and as I have been somewhat of a globetrotter myself, I entirely agree with him. Of course, the average movie fan who fervently believes that every race or creed, yes, and even the angels in heaven, think, act and talk Americanese, will swallow anything, as he does not know any better. But to one who has seen the real thing, such pitiful attempts on the part of our darlings from Podunk Center, male and female alike, to portray some foreign character of whose language and customs they know less than nothing, seems to an experienced person a mixture of the ridiculous and tragical, mostly ridiculous. To cite one instance: Some time ago I viewed a picture where a none too intelligent actress tried to make the audience believe that, with her cold and meaningless, in fact, downright clumsy, movements and flappings of her arms, she was correctly interpreting an oriental dancer. Now, I ask every intelligent reader, how can a European, especially an Anglo-Saxon, whose physical composition is ninety-five per cent ice, and the other five per cent glass, be capable of acting something she can't feel, and never will feel? If you ever have an opportunity to watch a real oriental dancer, not the half-starved and tired-out slaves who perform before the excitement-seeking tourists in the coffee houses of Constantinople, I mean the real oriental who dances on the desert sand before an audience of traders and adventurers on their way to Samarkand, with their exquisite grace of every movement, and then come back and view the same dance a la Americanese, the only expression that comes to your mind and lips is "Oh! h———," and you leave the theater in disgust.

Yes, some will say, human emotions are all alike, no matter what race or creed; but are they? You may as well say that steel is alike, but how finely tempered is some and how common other grades! So I would say to the producer, if you want true artistic effects get a Latin for a Latin character, and an Asiatic or Oriental for an Asiatic or Oriental character. As for myself, I am going to steer clear of the "Queen of Sheba" and Mr. Kipling's "Without Benefit of Clergy." for I know in advance how impossible it is for our actors to think and feel the emotions of another race; they simply are not capable of interpreting correctly how an Oriental would act under like circumstances. I do not intend any disrespect to our actors and actresses; some are really very proficient in depicting the lives and loves of their own race; but trying to make us believe that an Oregon quince can also be an Andalusian peach, they make themselves ridiculous in the eyes of the initiated. That much for our foreign atmosphere.

MILLER COMPANY RETURNS FROM LOCATION

The Ranger Bill Miller Company has returned from the San Jacinto mountains, where it has been on location making exteriors for its present picture, a Northwest Mounted Police story, featuring W. J. "Ranger Bill" Miller. This is the third of a series of twelve pictures that this company is making for release through the Cinart, Inc., releasing organization of this city.

"ZULULAND" COMPLETED

A comedy, entitled "Zululand," in which George Rowe, cross-eyed comedian, "Sunshine Sammy," Mark Jones and Ethel Broadhurst appear in the principal roles, has been completed at the Hal E. Roach Studios. Bob Kerr directed, assisted by Jimmy Parrott.

PREPARING FOR SECOND

Richard Barthelmess, having finished "Tol'ble David," filmed in the mountains of West Virginia, has returned to New York.

"The Civet Cat" is the latest of the new series of "Adventures of Bill and Bob," which Pathe has scheduled for release the week of September 18th.

Beulah Livingstone, who went abroad last June, in the interests of Jos. M. Schenck, and the Misses Norma and Constance Talmadge, has returned and is again in charge of publicity at the Talmadge Studios in New York.

"The Great Impersonation," based on E. Phillips Oppenheim's story and directed by George Melford, opens at the Grauman Million Dollar Theatre Monday, Sept. 12th. James Kirwood is the featured player, with Ann Forrest interpreting the leading feminine role.

RECENT ARRIVALS FROM NEW YORK

Among those who arrived from the East lately are Hobart Henley, who recently finished directing Hope Hampton in "Star Dust" at his Fort Lee studios; Pauline Stark, star of Whitman Bennett's "Salvation Nell," which will soon be exhibited under the First National banner; and Chet Withey, who directed Constance Talmadge in "Wedding Bells" and "Lessons in Love." "Wedding Bells" is the next First National-Constance Talmadge picture which Los Angeles will see.

CINEMA PLAYERS IN COMEDY

The Cinema Players are presenting a three-act comedy on Monday evening, September 12th, at the Gamut Club Theatre, directed by Benjamin D. Sharpe. The cast includes: Andree Tourneur, Helen Hayward, Aimee Torriani, Clarissa Halstead, Estelle Gouldin, Walter Bytell, Rollin Rae Arenz, Joe Campbell, Robert B. Hadley, Edgar Sherrod, Benjamin D. Sharpe, Stanley Orr, Wm. Merrill McCormick, Henry Kruger, Harry LaVerne, A. Silver Harr, and Gilbert Henderson.

Katherine MacDonald recently returned to Los Angeles after a month's vacation following her completion of "Peachie."

Bayard Veiller has finished cutting and titling his latest Metro production, "Ladyfingers," in which Bert Lytell is starred.

Charlotte Merriam is at present visiting her grandfather, Major Merriam, who has been ill for some time at the Presidio of San Francisco.

"Spot Cash" and "Hocus Pocus," "Snub" Pollard comedies directed by Charles Parrott, have been shipped to New York for future release.

Charles Ray's "A Midnight Bell" holds the honor of being the first picture to pass the censorship rulings of the New York Motion Picture Commission.

Samuel Sax, formerly general sales manager for the Selznick Company, has been appointed sales manager for R.C. Pictures Corporation.

Gaston Glass, who leads the all-star cast of Louis B. Mayer's "The Song of Life," a John M. Stahl production, will make his future home in Los Angeles.

Eddie Polo was host recently at a barbecue which he held in Topango Canyon in honor of Gus Edwards, the vaudevillian's troupe and studio associates.

"Skirt Shy" is announced as the final title of the Roscoe Arbuckle picture originally produced as "Should a Man Marry," and later changed to "This Is So Sudden." James Cruze directed this picture.

John M. Stahl is at present supervising the cutting of "The Song of Life," and completing his plans for the making of his next First National attraction, "The Fur Bringers," a story of the North by Hulbert Footner.

Shirley Vance Martin has been especially engaged by George W. Stout, production manager for the Jackie Coogan Productions, to photograph Jackie in the Coogan picture, "My Boy," which Victor Heerman is directing.

WESTERN PICTURES TO HAVE TWENTY COMPANIES

Western Pictures Exploitation Company will presently have a minimum of twenty independent companies at work producing features for release via the state rights market. This company recently signed a contract with the Sterling Super-Art Feature Film Company for a series of twelve five-reel prairie stories, locations for which have already been selected in Southern California and Wyoming. John W. Doble represented the producing company in this transaction.

Western Pictures Exploitation Company is at present preparing prints on a novelty series of three-reels each, entitled "The Missions of California."

EXCHANGES ACQUIRE GUINAN SERIES

Among the exchanges which have recently closed contracts on the first Texas Guinan Western series are the Quality Film Corporation of Pittsburgh, the Lande Film Distributing Company of Cleveland and Cincinnati, the Metro Film Exchange of Philadelphia, Merit Films, Inc., of Detroit, Favorite Players Film Corporation of Chicago and the Merit Film Corporation of Minneapolis.

The first subject of the first series of twelve will be released to the exchanges on October 1st.

AT LASKY'S

"Saturday Night," an original story by Jeanie Macpherson, will be produced by Cecil B. De Mille as his next special. An all-star cast, which includes Leatrice Joy and Edith Roberts, will present this story.

Roscoe Arbuckle is scheduled to start work shortly on "The Melancholy Spirit," under the direction of James Cruze. Lila Lee, who has supported the comedian in his recent pictures, will again have the feminine lead.

"Moran of the Lady Letty" is announced as the next George Melford production, work on which will start shortly. The screen adaptation of this Frank Norris story was arranged by Monte Katterjohn.

Jack Holt is engaged on interior scenes for his first stellar vehicle, "The Call of the North," which Joseph Henabery is directing.

IN LINDER CAST

Max Linder's newest comedy, "Be My Wife," about to be released by Goldwyn, includes in its cast Alta Allen, who plays opposite the star; Carolyn Rankin, Lincoln Stedman, Rose Dione, Charles MacHugh, and Arthur Clayton.

LASKY ENGAGES HACKATHORNE

George Hackathorne has been cast as Betty Compson's leading man in "The Little Minister," a Penrhyn Stanlaws production, adapted to the screen by E. A. Bingham.

William Machin will enact a part in the forthcoming Jackie Coogan picture entitled "My Boy."

Jack Okey, technical director of the Robert Brunton studios, is vacationing in the northern part of the state.

Carl Gerard has been selected to play an important role in support of Alice Lake in "The Hole in the Wall," her new Metro picture.

Announcement

Mrs. Wm. Vaughn Moody witnessed two performances of Dan Crimmins' role in Ridgely Torrence's playlet, "The Rider of Dreams," at the Community Theatre, Hollywood, last season, and offered to negotiate for the rights—resulting in a signed contract giving Dan Crimmins exclusive vaudeville rights to the playlet.

Mr. Monroe Lathrop, of the Los Angeles Express, said: "The success of Ridgely Torrence's 'The Rider of Dreams' is largely due to the fine character acting of Dan Crimmins, who's virtuosity overshadows the good work of the cast. On the whole his work was splendid in detail and rich in general results."

Crimmins & Gore Company have played the colored folk playlet, and Western managers have placed their O.K's on it, negotiating a good report to the Eastern vaudeville heads, so the team will leave for vaudeville in October.

Crimmins and Gore wish to thank the many directors that they have had such pleasant association with during their stay here, and extend sincerest wishes for a big successful future to everybody connected with pictures in Los Angeles.

Crimmins and Gore will lease their beautiful home at 401 Brent Street during their absence.

J. Gordon Edwards has, everything considered, accomplished a remarkable piece of direction in this production, for the much that his story tells is always perfectly understandable and well balanced. Particularly well handled and sensational are the chariot races, which are fully worthy to challenge all that "Ben Hur" has to offer in the way of effectiveness. They not only provide great beauty but some of the photoplay's most thrilling suspense. Excellent photography of them and indeed of the entire action by John Boyle is invaluable to this story, whose picturesqueness is its keynote. Both the subtitles and art titles should have received different treatment for entire satisfaction.

The solo dances included in the wedding festival sequence, and the arrangement of the chorus work, are by Frederic Ko Vert, while Margaret Whistler is responsible for the costuming, some of which appears more rare than practical.

In the title role, Betty Blythe probably is given her biggest opportunity to date, of which in the second part of the production she takes more complete advantage than she does previously, when her regal bearing is not entirely convincing. Once well into her part, however, and a few more garments than are allowed her as the virgin queen, she comes to the fore and is every inch of the poised parent ruler in each attitude. Her renunciated love for Solomon lends the part considerable sympathy.

Fritz Leiber, in the role of the all-wise Jewish king, is possibly not so well cast to our minds as he is capable to handle—anything. His action seems a bit inconsistent with the famous Biblical character's disposition; but for that, of course, the actor cannot be held responsible. Nevertheless we maintain that Solomon usually obtained the woman that he desired. To have done so in Sheba's case, however, would have ruined the pathetic note in Miss Tracy's carefully constructed romance.

Pat Moore unquestionably possesses the greatest appeal in the story; and more than that, he gives one of the cleverest child performances recently shown, as the Prince of Sheba, whose unknown father is Solomon himself. Little Pat lives every foot of the part, giving us his best work.

A better type of ancient usurper than George Seigmann would be hard to imagine. He is vivid enough for anyone in King Armud, Sheba's bestial but mercifully short-lived king.

G. Raymond Nye and Nell Craig conduct most of the villainy through the footage as Adonijah, Solomon's brother, and Princess Vashti, an ambitious resident of the court. They are both satisfactory, while Hershall Mayall is exceptionally good as Mentor, the Minister of State.

Herbert Heyes, George Nichols, Genevieve Blinn, Joan Gordon, Claire de Lorez, William Handy, John Cosgrave, Paul Cazeneuve, Al Fremont and Karl Crane execute the remaining roles ably.

With proper advertising "The Queen of Sheba" should prove a tremendous drawing card.

NEW MERMAID COMEDY

Jack White will begin presently on the fifth Hamilton-White Mermaid comedy for Educational release. His latest picture, "For Land's Sake," recently completed, will have its premiere at the Kinema at an early date. This two-reeler presents Lige Conley, Marvel Rae, Earl Montgomery, Frank Coleman and others in the cast.

Doris Baker has returned from a six months' trip in the East.

IN NEW YORK

By Frank P. Donovan

Market conditions in New York are taking a new lease on life. There is a good demand for features but little call for comedies. Just a tip to the Westcoaster.

There is not one company making comedies here in New York. All that were making them were either "gyped" out of the money due them or went bankrupt. This is no place to make laugh-getters, and no place to sell them either, save on a percentage basis, and then you're in tough luck.

"Zit" is back once more with the Hearst organization. He was formerly General Manager, and returns to the publicity department to head that branch. Zit cannot be held in one position for long. He is some active gentleman and knows the game.

Tom Terriss, we learn, has left Cosmopolitan Productions, for which company he made two pictures. George Walsh will make some for First National, it is said.

The new censor board here is not so bad as it has been painted. Taken altogether it has been very nice to all pictures submitted.

A new weekly started here called "Camerascope" is made up like a newspaper. Dr. Lamberger is editor. The paper as yet carries no advertising matter. It is six pages.

Fox has three theatres on Broadway. One houses "Shame," another "The Virgin Paradise," and "The Thunderbolt." "Over the Hill" is cleaning up, so is Harry Myers in "A Connecticut Yankee." Harry is pulling especially hard.

Frank Bacon is president of the Green Room Club.

Oscar Lund is back from Sweden.

Burton King is directing "Houndini."

Albert Cappelani makes four a year for Hearst.

Eddie Dillon is making "The Beauty Shop" with Hitchy.

Louise Fazenda is here looking over the big city. Yep, with Hearst's movie outfit.

Edgar Selden will make his own features.

The U. S. Photoplay Corporation which spent a little shy of a cold million on "Determination," expects to have it completed some day. In the meantime people are buying the stock, while Loew, Goldwyn and Famous Players have a hard time selling theirs. You never can tell, Hector.

Loew's State Theatre will open in a blaze of glory by the time you read this.

The Hippodrome is playing a Clyde Cook Comedy weekly in conjunction with its regular show. This is something radically new.

William Faversham is advertised as a Selznick star in "Justice." Now we learn he never made a scene, nor is he going to play for Selznick.

"The Three Musketeers" opened here last week. Great box office sale. Also great reissuing of former makes of same picture. All will make money.

Lorna Moon is the latest addition to Realart's authorial staff. Miss Moon is responsible for the as yet untitled story which Wanda Hawley has just commenced.

B. B. Hampton will start shortly on a new production at the Robert Brunton studios, in which Robert McKim, Claire Adams and Carl Ganvoort will play the leading roles.

Another thing I have to my credit is working for Reginald Barker in "The Old Nest." I did not have a principal role, but appeared in the unimportant atmosphere. They could have used a dummy, only the said dummy had too much expression. I am sure Mr. Barker is a great director, and later in life I can say that I worked under Reginald Barker in "The Old Nest" and tell the truth.

Another Jolt

Once more the motion picture industry has been horrified by a bolt of terrible misfortune that has come crashing down from the apparently peaceful heavens into its paralyzed midst. Once again the world, from as many viewpoints as it may claim possession of, shakes its head dubiously, revengefully or disappointedly in our direction, while inevitably placing another mental black mark beside our name in its Book of Public Favor. And why? Because one of our oldest and most popular representatives has been indicted for a hideous crime, brought about under unspeakable conditions; because several formerly well thought of picture men and women were party to the disgraceful orgy that occasioned whatever vileness really took place; and because unsavory, even disgusting, records of the individuals in question have been brought to light, shattering all faith that may ever have been held in them.

We haven't the slightest idea as to whether or not Roscoe Arbuckle killed Virginia Rappe unintentionally or otherwise; but we have several unpleasant ones concerning the loathesome debauchery that could bring about any such circumstances as those which attended this sensational tragedy. We have nothing but the deepest scorn, not only for the participants in this degrading "booze party" about which the entire hemisphere is talking, but for every male and female in the motion picture business who so lowers himself or herself ever as to regard a high salary, popularity or even achievement as a license to act in a manner that would not be a commendable pattern for any private citizen to follow.

The sooner that every drunkard, dope addict and degenerate is thrown out of the studios into the gutter where they all belong, the better it will be for each serious minded, self-respecting worker in our enterprise. Art can never excuse rottenness anywhere, and the profession is at last fully awake to that fact, for there is no keener bitterness felt over the entire affair in any section of the country than there is in the Hollywood film colony today. The hundreds of decent actors about whom the world has so little opportunity to hear, who are happily married, home-loving, honest-to-goodness people, are finally on their feet to eradicate the filth that causes resentment to be directed toward their perfectly legitimate activities. They are the fathers and mothers of little children whose heritage is as clean and chances as rosy as any other babies' in the world. They must see to it that these innocent souls do not pay for their parents' art with any demonstration of disrespect from the prejudiced offspring of those who are too earthy to understand, to differentiate; and see to it they will, according to dozens of vehement expressions that have come to our attention this week.

We are justifiedly proud of these people and their worthy new determinations which, if carried out, will make it pretty hot for the deliberate sinners about us.

Perhaps, after all, this nightmarish experience with dirt and dregs will lead to a housecleaning that will sweep the unworthies far over our doorstep. In any event, it should be made thus to profit us.

For all of the indiscretions and errors which she could have committed Virginia Rappe has paid the greatest price known to man. Roscoe Arbuckle must now settle, is settling, in fact, his accounts. No matter what he may have done his greatest injury has been to humanity. Humanity will exact full repayment.

Meanwhile if such a painful lesson was needed by us in our extreme tolerance of conditions, let us receive it as philosophically as possible, while realizing that we must guard against the necessity for another. Hereafter it is imperative that all the entrances to our highly desirable circle be closed save the one that is only to be reached through unquestionable merit, artistic and moral.

Only upon an uncompromising foundation of this kind can our structure stand. It has to stand!

A Few Statistics

The Exhibitors' Herald furnishes us with the following statistics:

"In the fiscal year ending June 30 the government collected $6,008,108 on the five per cent film rental tax. For the preceding year the same source yielded only $4,381,276. These figures reveal that for the year preceding June 30 the amount of domestic film rentals was $120,162,160, and for the preceding year, $87,625,520—meaning an increase for the year ending with the past theatrical season of $32,536,640.

"There doubtlessly is no set of figures available at this time which more graphically depicts the tremendous commercial development of the industry during the past season. The exhibiting branch of the industry can admit without hesitancy that during the period in question it witnessed its period of greatest commercial gain, yet it contributed more than thirty-two million dollars additional for film rental over the preceding year.

"The government statistics have placed the amount of film rentals at a figure which is from ten to fifteen million dollars greater than the average estimate of grade experts—a matter which is both surprising and encouraging.

Current Reviews

"EXPERIENCE"

Grauman's Rialto

As it filmed "Everywoman" two years ago, Lasky has prepared for the screen that drama's allegorical twin, "Experience," which Paramount releases in Los Angeles for the first time now; and perhaps peculiarly enough, as was true in the case of its predecessor, although this George V. Hobart play has been given an elaborate production and has been kept fairly true to the original stage idea in Waldemar Young's scenario, it misses its impressiveness slightly and therefore falls a little tasteless upon our carefully trained, modern palates. This is probably further proof that the allegory, as we have known it, is not for the celluloid, for certainly George Fitzmaurice handles his subject with good understanding, making it a fairly consistent adaptation that, theoretically speaking, in view of the play's first popularity, should have contained complete satisfaction. It is to be regretted that this cannot be said in entire truth.

The dramatic matter in the script not only drags in several sequences to be strung hurriedly together in others, but the cast is greatly inferior to even the one that took "Experience" out upon the road.

In Youth's immortal role we see for example, Dick Barthelmess, whose artistic work as the Chink is "Broken Blossoms" the theatre-going world will long remember. Because, however, this young actor is fundamentally gifted for the accomplishment of character work—and for the further reason that he lacks much of the buoyancy, the spontaneity which we have come to demand in our histrionic Youths, he scarcely even echoes that which Conrad Nagel did for the same part when he interpreted it upon the boards several years back. Even so, Barthelmess gets considerable eagerness into this position, and had we never previously witnessed the part we might have more to favorably report here, but then we did—several times—in company, it is necessary to remember, with other thousands, who will make it just this once more.

Love, Youth's sweetheart, is played more sincerely than Marjorie Daw usually manages serious work, and with her sympathy the feminine lead is more than adequate.

John Miltern and E. J. Ratcliffe contrast with considerable effectiveness as Experience and Ambition, the only valuable friends whom Youth brings back to his home valley with him.

Kate Bruce is good as his mother.

Betty Carpenter, Lilyan Tushman, R. Senior, Joe Smiley, Fred Hadley, Harry Lane, Helen Ray, Jed Prouty, J. Furey, Charles Stenson, Edna Wheaton, Yvonne Routon, Ned Hay, Sybil Carmen, Robert Schable, Nita Naldi, Frank Evans, Frank McCormack, L. R. Wolheim, Agnes Maro, Mrs. Gallagher, Florence Flinn, Ina Barnes and Leslie King occupy the numerous symbolic positions which do so much for the story development.

The technical effects, including the art titles are quite superior.

"Experience" will pull through the box office on its title.

"THE BLACK PANTHER'S CUB"

Kinema

Ziegfeld Cinema Corporation's presentation of Swinburne's "Faustine," revised and prepared for the screen by Philip Bartholomae, is a dreary affair that is too morbid for general satisfaction. Being a story of the Black Panther, a notorious queen of Parisian night life, and of her daughter, who fills her place twenty-five years after the end of the mother's sensational reign without realizing her relationship to the woman whose identity she assumes, it is merely a chain of stereotyped situations strung together upon a sentimental line of philosophy concerning heredity's place in character formation.

There are countless errors in Emile

Ruby La Fayette

Chautard's direction of the picture, while the cutting eliminates all possibilities for transition. The photography varies and is mostly exceedingly poor.

Florence Reed is the starred member of the cast. She plays dramatically both Faustine and her child Mary Maudsley. Her poise is always interesting, but her material here is rather nil, while her make-up as the emaciated Black Panther at fifty is hideously unreal. Miss Reed is not popular enough with the film public to get away with such general unpleasantness.

Norman Trevor, a finished character actor, plays the uncomplicated masculine lead, Sir Marling.

The production's heavy work is the joint effort of Earle Fox, William Roselle and Tyrone Power, who enact Jack Maudsley, Hampton Graham and Count Boris. None of it impresses particularly.

The cast further includes Henry Stevenson, Paul Ducet, Don Merrifield, Paula Shay, Ernest Lambert, and Mlle. Dazie.

It is too much to expect that this kind of thing will be mutely accepted by the public, even if it is only happened upon now and again. It wants regular entertainment when such is paid for. There is nothing enlivening about "The Black Panther's Cub."

"THE GREAT IMPERSONATION"

Grauman's

E. Phillips Oppenheim's widely read mystery story of the world war, entitled "The Great Impersonation," as scenarized by Monte Katterjohn and celluloided by George Melford for Paramount release, may be seen at this time. It is a carefully handled subject dealing with mixed identities and German spies in an attention holding manner that makes exceptional entertainment.

Perhaps because the plot material is heavier than some, the cumbersomeness that marks so much of the work of this production's director is not noticeable. A surprise finish is invaluable to the picture, the development of which is deliberate enough to provide suspense and yet not dilatory to the point of tediousness. Well dressed sets, good cutting and pleasing photography by William Marshall assist the picture to further success.

The dual roles upon which the action is all based are played by James Kirkwood, who gives the audience a surprise on his own by fooling it with these characterizations. His portrayals of Sir Everard Dominey, the lead, and Leopold von Raganstein, the diabolical Teutonic heavy, are so equally good that it is literally difficult to keep them separated. Kirkwood's interpretations are unusually uniform.

Ann Forrest, who is ample in the role of Lady Dominey, the invalid wife of Sir Everard, contrasts interestingly with Fontaine La Rue, who fills the other romantic feminine position in the cast. Miss La Rue does colorfully the Princess Stephanie, whose love for von Raganstein leads her into political indiscretions despite her old world training.

A clever piece of team work must be credited to Cecil Holland and Temple Pigott, the players who characterize the hideous maniac, Roger Unthank, and his evil mother. Particularly alive is the former, whose extreme antics convince to the point of provoking audible comment from the audience.

Comedy is forthcoming from Alan Hale's enactment of Gustave Seiman, a less heroic German, while a few excellent moments by Lawrence Grant give us a very realistic Kaiser Wilhelm.

Winter Hall, Truly Shattuck, Bertram Johns, William Buress, Frederick Vroom and Louis Dumar all are well situated further.

Whether or not "The Great Impersonation" is a psychological release, it will make money because of its superior production.

"CHARGE IT"

Symphony

Without breaking over into a dangerously new field, Sada Cowan gives "Charge It," her original for Garson's latest Clara Kimball Young starring vehicle, as much alacrity of movement and as many novel twists as its title suggests. Being merely a story of an extravagant matron and her loss of all that is worth while through an inadequate perspective, "Charge It" isn't so vital as to teach any great lesson, but it is up to the standard as a diverting photodrama of modern life. Harry Garson's direction of the scenario is always sufficient, and he, fortunately, has an intelligent cast to deal with.

Julia Lawrence is a typical Young part. Just an average, discontented woman, she isn't played with any great display of sincerity, but in the name of what has gone before she will be accepted.

Herbert Rawlinson moves gracefully through the action as Philip Lawrence, and although he may not be considered perfectly cast in the genuine "he man," his technique is irreproachable, which lets him out.

Dana Herrick, the slick man about town, whose meddling causes all the trouble, is built to suit Nigel Barrie, as is he, it.

The delicate attachment between Robert McGregor, well done by Hal Wilson, and his daughter Rose, commendably managed by Dulcie Cooper, adds considerable heart interest to the story, even in view of the fact that it is not always relevant.

The cast is completed by Edward Kimball and Betty Blythe, who are seen as the troublesome Garreths, associates of the Lawrences.

Jacques Bizeul's camera work on this Equity Pictures release is more than satisfactory.

The Screen Writers' Forum

—Conducted by Ted Le Berthon
Editor of The Photodramatist

Atmosphere

What a queer world this is! Recently a prominent scenario editor remarked that the trouble with most of the scripts received from inexperienced writers was that they were like geometrical charts or slim, grey trees with bare, desolate branches; they were sans color, and as lifeless as fleshless skeletons. He said these stories as a general thing were plotted excellently, but that the characters were marionettes and the backgrounds drab. He advised young writers to put touches of local color and odd characterization in their photoplays—not to leave everything to the director's imagination.

A few days afterward a noted photodramatist disburdened himself of the following: "Too much deft characterization, too much atmosphere, that's what's wrong with the stories submitted by young writers. What we need is more good plots with big dramatic situations."

We have just a sneaking hunch that dear old America must by now be satisfied with the myriad conventional photoplays which are ground out daily through the mills of the Hollywood deities. "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," that weird cinematic monstrosity from the Rhine country, shattered a few box-office records here and there—in fact, practically everywhere its exhibition was permitted. This post-impressionistic photoplay struck a chord that most works of screen art never play upon, stirred up strange, lurking monsters in the misty labyrinths of consciousness, the gloomy hinterlands of the invisible world. Is it not just possible that the producers would make a great deal of money from the filming of a few fantastic "original" screen stories that would rival "Caligari" and "The Golem"? If an Edgar Allen Poe of screen writers should arise ghost-like in the fields of the silent drama, and approximate the eerie horror of "The Fall of the House of Usher," isn't it probable that the public—carrying on its shoulders the dismal, lumpy twin burdens of Puritanism and Philistinism—might welcome the contrasting stuff from "Night's Plutonian shore"?

A Happy Ending Theory

Thompson Buchanan, author of "Life" and "Civilian Clothes," has pretty well analyzed the American inclination for optimistic photoplays with happy endings. He says: "The Yankee is living in a country of the utmost intensive commercial fervor, where he must, in order to wrest a living from art, industry or agriculture, work 'like the very devil.' His workaday life is brimful of heart-aches, greater and lesser tragedies, struggle for existence. Therefore he prefers to spend his hours of relaxation amid scenes of color, light, music, humor, gayety. Only the wealthy classes—who have no struggle for bare existence—feed constantly on Scandinavian and Russian drama, on thoughts of numbing sadness and pain. They chemically require this element for the same reason that the people who are living dramas of sadness and want and struggle require the antidote of mirth."

The Beginner's Plaint

It is pathetic, this sobbing self-pity on the part of some young screen writers who warble distraitly over their sad plights, such as, "I've been trying to write salable photoplays for over a year and am about discouraged." What poet, playwright, musical composer, essayist, novelist, or artist in any field ever achieved success or recognition within a year? Very, very few have garnered laurels inside of ten years, or even crumbs of fame in less than five.

The Reason Why

The Moving Picture Theatre Owners' Association recently convened at Atlantic City. There was quite a bit of contention among exhibitors as to the cause of the recent slump in movie theatre attendance.

Peggy Blackwood

Some said it was due to the mistake in sheering off from the star system; these experts pronounced Americans a nation of hero-worshippers, and opined that the story was purely incidental. What a charge to level at American intelligence! What a blow to our conception of or sensitiveness to art! When actual facts prove that the great majority of "stars" were absolutely dead as doorknobs after suffering three successive "weak" stories, it would surely seem that the star system was on a sandy foundation—and that the strength or weakness of the story was the thermometer of even commercial success, laying aside all artistic considerations.

However, Sydney Cohn, president of the association, indicted the present movie output on the grounds of its unhumanness. He deplored the frigid pageantry of our histo! ically panoramic spectacles, and predicted a bang-up smash-up for the M. P. industry unless the producers went back to the real stories of modern life, love and romance—sans thrills, acrobatics, freak settings, and other artificial stimuli. The head of the movie industry in Sweden expressed a belief that the American movie art-industry was being ruthlessly sacrificed upon the altar of "the happy ending." He believes that real suspense is impossible wherever and whenever audiences know for a certainty that all's bound to be well at the final clinch-up.

Photodramatists who have any artistic ideals aching for expression will revel in the Swedish magnate's spunky truth-telling; surely, the cinema loaf needs leavening. If stage plays and short stories and novels, transcribed to the screen, fail to elicit the nation's patronage or approbation, in what obvious direction lies the salvage of "cinematization"? Perhaps the harvest moon will soon shed its mellowing glow upon the workers in the fertile fields of "the original screen stories," while a not far distant springtime will find the erstwhile fledgling industry a truly individual art.

Fossilized Editors

There is a certain type of newspaper editor who damns without reservation any thing he cannot fully comprehend or that he is only remotely aware of. Having grown gray, bald or white in years of tedious service, such men are inevitable cynics of gloomiest warp. Most of them have attempted to write fiction or plays, and having signally failed, await the procession of years with an embittered viewpoint. Many of them become critics—paradoxically and tragically enough; others become high and mighty arbiters of public taste and conduct, and like all mediocre men, consistently inform erroneously the vast mobs of humanity. For instance, one poor fellow on a paper in a section of the midwest hinterland that is Sahara-like in its art paucity, recently indited a heavy-handed epistle in which he declared that the only great photodramatists of the future would be men who had already mastered stage technique. With a magnificent sweep he affirmed that the real demand at the studios was for men like Clyde Fitch, George M. Cohan, Augustus Thomas, and Eugene O'Neill. He admitted that the "great" novelists had flopped most flabbily, and conceded a measure of greatness to C. Gardner Sullivan—a man who would have been a rare artist in any modus of expression. But, last if not least, this newspaper scribe went out of his way to rap correspondence school scenarioists.

The statistical facts are that worth-while playwrights have failed more dismally than transparent authors in attempting photoplays. If the newspaper editor in question could mention one playwright who has achieved a cinema masterpiece, we will agree that the moon is made of Camembert and that E. P. Roe outclasses Shakespeare. Two ex-playwrights, Thompson Buchanan and Bayard Veiller, are making intelligent headway as supervising directors, and both represent a sound type of man who achieves a place in the sun irrespective of the field of artistic endeavor.

Furthermore, there is only one correspondence school of photoplay writing which has achieved any recognition, and this organization has turned out more successful "new" photodramatists in two years than have all the studios combined in the last five years. This is borne out by statistics, which are available for those who question this statement. It is a sad fact that human vanity prevents many an established screen author from acknowledging the wellsprings from which he first quaffed the waters of inspiration and instruction—which may be due to the way correspondence schools have been joshed on the vaudeville stage, etc. But, nevertheless, the fact remains that not only in screen writing, but in various professions, the correspondence school has been and is a most effective institution.

The chap who can't afford to attend college is surely justified in studying by mail. In fact, many dull old pedagogues make a subject hopelessly uninteresting in a classroom, utterly destroying an erstwhile enthusiastic student's incentive; whereas, the student who concentrates on an Instruction Book has no such impedimenta to contend with, providing the work is fairly interestingly written.

Furthermore, many of our young are initially coerced into halls of learning; but the duck who pays out his hard-earned kale for a correspondence course—whether in law, business efficiency or photoplay writing—is necessarily in earnest. He is predisposed to a liking of his text-books, having a distinct goal in mind, while the fellow whose folks unwind a few bushels of greenbacks on behalf of instruction and culture may be as aimless as a cigarette butt on the bosom of the Atlantic ocean.

There is nothing to warrant a belief that great photodramatists will be made-over novelists and playwrights. The old adage about "there are as many good fish in the sea as ever were caught" still holds true. In another generation—perhaps before—we will have men and women writing exclusively for the screen who are the peers of not only Cohan and Fitch and Augustus Thomas, but of Hauptmann and Moliere—and let me hasten humbly to add, Eugene O'Neill.

The Eternal Controversy

Tolstoi once wrote a most Christian essay under the caption of "What is Art?" in which he set out to prove that all conceptions of art were purely arbitrary, and that it was impossible to give Art a fixed definition. The typical average American is simply not concerned with the subject; he is not an analyst, and prefers to wander blissfully, child-like through life—laughing, crying, stumbling—in an objective universe. Ask him: "Is the motion picture an art?" and he'll think you're getting silly, as though you'd asked him: "How high is up?" But inquire as to his favorite movie star, and he'll regale you with eulogistic remarks concerning the Fairbanks smile or the Swanson coiffure.

We are for the most part a nation of success-worshippers; most Americans liking Fairbanks or Ray or Hart or Mary Pickford through a wish to be like those successful people. They resolve the motion picture around a few personalities, and attend De Mille or Griffith photoplays because they anticipate a certain color and sentimental reaction. They know instinctively that they will see an interesting screen story, subconsciously realizing that these eminent directors are discriminate in their story selection—but they also want to see the story because of the distinct personal flavor with which these directors liberally saturate it, and because the story ends happily and poetically.

When one considers the immense popularity of such magazines as The American, The Saturday Evening Post, The New Success—and the popular interpretation and usage of such widespread ethical movements as Christian Science and New Thought—it is readily seen that what the American is primarily interested in is health and wealth.

Read the advertisements in the popular magazines, realize the tremendous vogue of Dr .Frank Crane, Orison Swett Marden—and the answer is written crystal clear; the average American is not interested in Art, which connotes a study of Life, but in struggle and achievement. He prefers being an actor to a spectator. He would rather be a poem than write one—a poem of material success. And success must never be tinged with naughtiness or unhappiness.

In the Los Angeles Examiner there recently appeared an article under the caption "Pity the Poor Producer," in which that worthy was pictured as manouevering his frail cargo of scenarios between the censors and the public, with a result that only six of the thirty-six primary situations were left—the other thirty being naughty or unhappy and therefore subject to taboo. The ancient Greeks were pictured as laughing in their graves at the censors, for they—the Greeks—"thought it more important to have ideas than censors." Can you imagine one of the early Greek intelligentsia sitting through "Pollyanna"? He would feel his mentality insulted in a world where "everything turned out happily," and would promptly gulp the fatal hemlock to force an unhappy ending on literature.

But the ancient Greeks lived before the age of Gene Stratton Porter, Harold Bell Wright, or even E. P. Roe. The Pagan conception of Art and Beauty transcends considerations of so-called good and evil, refusing to limit the view of life to a window on the right side of the house.

What is Art? Is it to be perceived by that grotesque mental gyration which prompts H. L. Mencken to attribute higher worth to a single chapter in Conrad's "Heart of Darkness" than to all the children born in Iowa since the Civil War—or is it to be perceived through the faithful exercise of the modern version of Christian virtue?

The question will never be decided. In the meantime, it will behoove photodramatists to write from their hearts—and evolution will take care of the whole art problem, recording progress (or change) through the line-ups in front of the box offices.

Censorship

Censorship will affect the writer considerably, despite the rather surface considerations of the matter indulged in recently by one of our film stars of "the deadlier sex." She carelessly disposed of the subject by stating that the directors would be affected, not the writers. Her conclusions were based on the assumption that it is never the story itself, but the interpolations and naughty interpretations of the directors that make the story subject to the censors' scissoring. Perhaps she is partly correct. However, the issue is really deeper rooted. There are two factors in this country which are at each other's throats continually—those whose natural conservatism leads them to respect traditions and customs, and

"Determination," the big screen production which took more than a year in the making, will be put out as a super-special this fall.

Allen Holubar has left for New York to confer with First National executives concerning the scenario on which Mr. Holubar will commence production shortly.

The Charles R. Seeling Company has returned from Mt. Shasta where exteriors were filmed for "The Curse of the Timberlands," featuring "Bigboy" Williams.

Bob Horner, directing for the western Classic Film Company, has left for mountain locations with his cast, including Bill Patton, Tom Pickford, Edith Rush and Fred Hirons.

June Elvidge, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Aileen Manning and Martha Mattox are among those cast in the Cosmopolitan production, "Beauty's Worth," starring Marion Davies.

R. A. Walsh is engaged in filming waterfront scenes for his photoplay version of Peter B. Kyne's novel, "Kindred of the Dust." Forthcoming logging camp scenes will be made in Northern California.

Grace Davison, whose picture, "Love, Hate and a Woman," has just been released, is at work on a second feature production under the direction of Charles T. Horan. It is tentatively titled, "The Girl That Came Back."

and those who are trying to change the social, economic, and political order of things. It is the first group who are favoring censorship, paradoxically enough, because the American motion picture has for the most part adhered to the codes of Pollyanna and Horatio Alger; however, the World War and ensuing events have made them panicky, distrustful, wary. The other group has perhaps a too militant minority for its own good; it has scornfully derided monogamous love, and advocated a modus of living and thinking that is free as air and as unrestrained; it laughs at what it terms the Puritanism and insularity of the American consciousness; far from wanting motion pictures censored, this group has singled out such film productions as "Way Down East" and subjected them to the barbs of wit and irony, branding them as stiflingly conventional, and false to life.

It is not my purpose to champion either group; there is unquestionably a middle path to follow. However, I do say that if the conservatives enforce censorship a death-blow will be struck at American art, for they will not stop at the photoplay, but will in all probability advance against letters, sculpturing and other arts. They represent for the most part a moderate living, stolid citizenry, who in the past have contributed much to the sturdiness and business enterprise of the race, but theirs is not the poetic or dramatic conception of life. To them all art must subserve a moral end, i. e., moral according to a definition of morality as an arbitrary code of ethics.

The other group adheres more to the Grecian ideal of Beauty as the only morality; it is from this genius that Shelley, Byron, Keats, Shakespeare, Moliere, Wagner, Chopin have sprung. The photodramatist who shares any of the liberal thought of the day will find every avenue of expression closed to him if censorship is enforced—with the concurrent relapse into the stupidity of the Middle Ages, for the very nature of Conservatism precludes creative art. Our Epworth Leaguers cannot paint life in bright hues, nor the drama of love and death in convincing perspective.

If censorship is defeated, the public itself by its attendance will always proclaim its sympathies; probably neither group will totally enforce its philosophy and psychology. Moreover, those who have faith in the Master Adjuster do not want censorship; for in the last analysis only that which is essential survives. The photodramatist must write a story that will meet with public approval if he wishes to continue selling his stories to the studio editors. But if hemmed in by the numerous "don'ts" of censorship he won't achieve artistic results—and he won't please anybody.

Evolution Is Slow

In its infancy, music borrowed much from the literary and painting arts for its sustaining framework; history today repeats itself, with the cinema borrowing from literature and the drama. The early art of drama and music is forgotten; just so, some day, will the formative period of the photoplay be dimmed by Time. The photoplay has taken root in the soil of literature and the stage, but its topmost branches will flower with the new art of the photodramatist. When the motion picture is an art "on its own"—say a decade from now—the film plays of that day will surpass our own as far as those of today outsoar the efforts following upon the cinema's inception. The photodramatist who has a few unsold scripts in his desk may soon dispose of them at a bigger price than he expected, just as does the owner of land who has held on until a boom period. Those not so sanguine should study their Darwin more thoroughly, realize the stages all forms of life pass through in attaining individuality—then closely analyze the history of the motion picture to date. The motion picture, like the individual in the processes of nature, must get before giving. It must build into itself many favorable elements, all of which will blend into a new and different thing, a new art—which will then commence to give the world new sensations of beauty out of its own fullness; then the song of the new and true photoplay will be sung by the photodramatist.

GOLDWYN STAFF ADDITIONS

Additions to the Goldwyn scenario staff include: Agnes Smith, former motion picture critic, who will write sub-titles; Emile Forst, linguist and photoplaywright, who has been engaged as an expert in foreign literature; Hope Loring and Mrs. E. Magnus Ingleton, continuity writers, who will adapt stories to the screen.

PANTHEON PICTURES ENGAGES FRENCH AVIATRIX

Mlle. Andree Peyre, aviatrix and French screen star, has been engaged for the principal feminine role by Pantheon Pictures Corp. in their next feature production, as yet unnamed. The story and scenario has been written by George Dubois Proctor.

"TRISTAN AND ISOLDE" PICTURIZED

Grand opera will again be on the screen for "Tristan and Isolde" has been picturized by Louis Najpas and a French company of players, and will shortly be shown in this country as a special. The music score will be based on the famous Wagner opera.

EXECUTIVE ON SCREEN

W. S. Smith, general manager of Western Vitagraph, recently appeared as a judge in "The Come Back," William Duncan's forthcoming picture.

S. E. V. Taylor is to produce a Jack London story, with an Indian girl as the star.

Theodore Kosloff will handle a principal character role in "The Lane That Had No Turning," starring Agnes Ayres.

Dorothy Dalton will be the featured player in "Moran of the Lady Letty," George Melford's forthcoming Lasky production.

"This huge increase is due directly to higher rentals—a condition which increased production costs required and which greater patronage at higher admission prices permitted.

"When statistics for the current year are available it will be found that the producers' revenue has been lowered materially. Even if conditions during the coming Fall and Winter permitted of a return to the old order, the record of the past two months is such that the mark of last year will be missed by many millions.

"The government's record during the fiscal year ending June 30 last doubtlessly will stand for some time as the high-water mark of distributors' receipts. And it is with this thought in mind that operations for the coming season must be carried on."

Lillian Guenther's Notes:

It was an oversight not to tell you where I am from. The best state in the U. S. is my home state. The reason I say it is the best state is because it is the only state in the U. S. mentioned in the Bible. It reads like this: "And Noah opened the window of the ark and saw." There you have it—Arkansas. I am not the only person in the picture game from that state. I think that apple spoken of in Genesis was an Arkansas Black, and where there are delicious apples you can depend on Eves galore.

Pictures for Los Angeles' Unfortunates

We, of the cinema producing business, are accustomed to speak often and at great length upon the motion picture's extensive influence for good, both from the standpoints of general education and diversion. This we point out pridefully as a natural result of the fact that our audiences, whose various desires and needs are always so carefully considered by us, contain representatives of every phase and stage of life. You see there is much to be said upon the subject of our assistance to struggling humanity, and we are wont to say it all, for we derive much gratification therefrom. But, as we talk, do we stop to realize the full extent of our following and our responsibilities to at least one division of it? Some of us have so done; many of us probably never will.

A small group of the former class some years ago decided that if the photoplay was the healthy juvenile's most popular form of entertainment, it should prove doubly enthralling and broadening to the unfortunate hospital children whose long days of dreary existence were so inadequately filled. Then developed plans for the advent of projecting machines and suitable screen material in the Los Angeles Childrens' Hospital. All funds were privately contributed and the good work commenced and progressed. Its success and expansion into other types of institution may be read below in a recently received letter from Mr. George E. Pelton, whose interest and industry has engineered without recompense the project of increasing our scope in this city. Mr. Pelton's field is exceedingly wide and must have constant care in consequence of which he will continually be in need of funds to keep it covered. Here is an excellent opportunity for some of us to back up our favorite theory and conversational topic with an experiment as to just how much our accomplishments actually benefit the work-a-day, suffering world.

Those who have it in their hearts to help a good thing along, a thing peculiarly our own, may communicate with Mrs. Fisher, Superintendent of the Los Angeles Orphans Home.

Mr. Pelton's letter should serve as inspiration to the many big hearts for which our profession is famous.

"My Dear Mr. Cannon: On the first of August, 1919, I began showing motion pictures to the children at the Children's Hospital. Weekly since then about 9:30 each Sunday morning, I have shown them pictures. Through your assistance and the assistance of your friends of the Griffith company, and a small contribution from myself, I was enabled to buy equipment for the shows at the Children's Hospital.

In the early days I paid my own expenses and used my own equipment to also show pictures regularly twice a week at the County Hospital and at the Barlow Sanatorium. Mr. Jesse Lasky very generously paid for a new machine for this Sanatorium and has for a long time defrayed all of the expenses in connection with the semi-weekly shows and has furnished all of the films used, entirely at his own expense. He has given hundreds and hundreds of tuberculosis patients much joy.

For about a year and a half there have been weekly shows for the people at the County Farm and for the past six months there have also been weekly shows for some of the mental cases at the Farm.

Also pictures are shown from time to time by Mr. Haring, of the County Hospital organization, at the sanatorium for tuberculosis patients at Olive View. It is our hope to get these shows on a weekly basis and to have permanent equipment installed at the sanatorium.

Mr. Lloyd R. Macy, of Pasadena, has given the greatest assistance in making the shows permanent. He has enlisted the interest of his friends and is in charge of the funds which maintain the shows.

Just recently we have begun showing pictures at the Los Angeles Orphans' Home on El Centro in Hollywood, and with the co-operation of Mr. Bert Lytell, of the Metro Studio, and Mr. William Keefe, of the Brunton organization, each of whom has agreed to help pay for the machine needed, it is going to be possible to make this show a permanent feature of the Orphanage.

The various film companies through their distributing offices, have furnished their best films without one cent of compensation and I feel deeply indebted to them for their co-operation.

Eight machines are in use each week, upon my schedule, showing pictures to sick and helpless people who otherwise would not have this mental diversion, which they so greatly need and which helps them to forget their pain. If well people with many daily interests get joy from the pictures at the theatres, how much more must

Current Reviews

"CAPPY RICKS"

Grauman's

Peter B. Kyne's brisk sea story, "Cappy Ricks," which has been made into an exhilarating screen production by Paramount, stars Thomas Meighan in a more vigorous and far more pleasing role than he has held down for some time. The flavor of the briny deep, for the picturing of which Kyne is noted, has been caught from his original and interpreted into the celluloid with all of the freshness which should attend it for satisfaction. Tom Forman's direction leaves nothing undone and the photography is very good.

Meighan's personality, as has been suggested, could have few better opportunities than it has in the virile Matt Peasely, mate on one of Cappy Ricks' ships, who gains for himself a captaincy. In this position he is well supplied with romantic love interest, fistic encounters and the to-be-expected rescue sequence. Altogether Peasely is most likable.

Many appropriately handled feminine leads on the order of Florris Ricks have won for Agnes Ayres a more deserved stardom than several that the Lasky-Zukor combination has seen fit to effect in the past year or two. Miss Ayres is typically charming and easy in the part.

Bull Montana had best look to his laurels if he wishes to retain them for a new countenance upon the order of his, set however over what must surely be seven feet of solid framework, has appeared abroad, or rather upon the silversheet. We have not this eccentric individual's cognomen, but he plays exceedingly well the Swede captain who would disposssss Matt of his newly acquired authority. He is a good touch.

Several such offerings as this will mean much to its star at this time, for he has been slumping a bit.

"THE CHILD THOU GAVEST ME"

Kinema

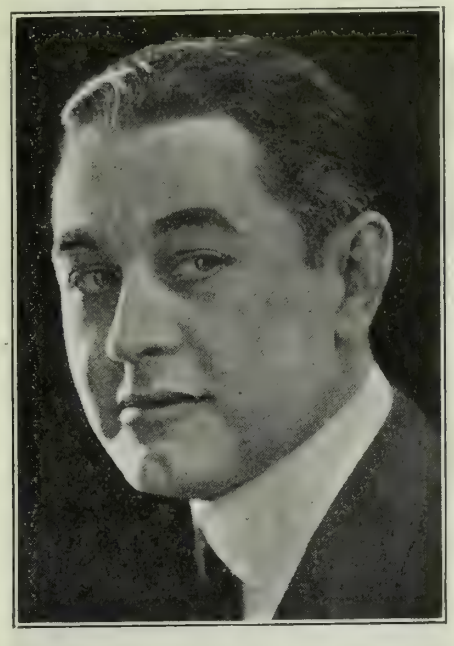
Louis B. Mayer's production, "The Child Thou Gavest Me," is that type of heavy problem play which is at present quite out of date. However, Perry N. Vecroff presents in his story several new angles that may justify its picturization to some. The unusually involved plot is too very coincidental to convince the more incredulous and too vague in some of its explanations to be clear to the less imaginary. Other weak points are unnecessary repetition in the subtitles and a dragged out suespense that loses a great deal in the process.

John M. Stahl's intent is not always perceptible in the direction, but this work is a marvelous improvement over his guidance of "The Woman in His House" and other of his work that we have observed.

Little Richard Headrick in the name part is featured and he is the picture's best asset. That Bobby, his offering, is shamelessly padded is really an excellent thing in that it is the one entertaining, happy piece of action in the play. Little Richard is exceptionally competent and has a real future ahead.

Barbara Castleton as Norma Berkley, the married mother of the illegitimate child, has some beautiful dramatic acting to her credit. She always does a great deal with such work.

An equally strong interpretation is Edward Berkley, her husband, who is played by Lewis Stone. Berkley is almost a violent character and although the male lead, he is a hero who is never quite forgiven for his lack of sympathy by the audience.



Clyde Fillmore

Much more appeal is held forth by William Desmond who portrays with quiet grace Tom Marshall, a man falsely accused.

Winter Hall and Adele Farrington are well placed as Norma's parents, while Helen Howard, Mayre Hall and Mary Forbes complete the cast.

First National releases "The Child Thou Gavest Me."

"MOONLIGHT FOLLIES"

Tally's

Marie Prevost's initial starring production for Universal is "Moonlight Follies," a Percival Wilde story scenarized by A. P. Younger. This jazzy little romance of a flip little flapper contains no apparent reasonableness and by far more light entertainment than wholesomeness. Without coming under the classification of "farce" it "kids" all of the seriousness of life which is not especially wise, but it is bound to prove more than pleasing to the thinner calibre of audience.

King Baggott has treated the inconsequential subject fittingly in his direction and with real foresight he keeps things progressing evenly to the end.

Miss Prevost's characterization of Nan Rutledge is comparatively consistent and always animated. The fact that just such a girl as the new star portrays here doesn't run at large often or long is of little import and not her fault, anyway. Miss Prevost is an able comedienne and will speedily collect an admirable following.

Clyde Fillmore in our mind is by far too valuable to waste upon such a role as Tony Griswold, the male lead. However, Tony is an aggressive asset to the list of characters in the story, and Fillmore's personality bears him easily through his situations.

George Fisher in Rene Smith, one of his typical "unnecessary" heavies is even more amusing than usual. Perhaps his "crying jag" calls forth more "serious" mirth than any other part of his work.

Cissie Hallock, Nan's sympathetic divorcee friend is pleasingly done by Marie Crisp, who could not be better cast.

Lionel Belmore in the enthusiastically rendered blustering father, Rutledge, Sr., completes the list of players.

Bert Glennon photographed "Moonlight Follies" with an uneven result, i. e., some of the camera work is above average; again it is quite unsatisfactory.

"ACTION"

Superba

A speedy western romance which, although cut out upon the old, old order, relieves itself somewhat by utilizing a goodly amount of unadulterated comedy in its story development is "Action," Hoot Gibson's first five-reel Universal starring picture. Jack Ford has handled this comedy as well as several very realistic thrills in the scenario to very good advantage and altogether has done a great deal with the J. Allen Dunn story. It is unfortunate that so much Universal cutting should be careless for often, as in this case, it forces that organization's work out of the technically correct class. The photography is average.

Gibson is a very agreeable cowboy to watch and his work as Sandy Brouke, the agile hero in this story, is more than sufficient. His suitability to a variety of subjects is to be questioned perhaps, but he will always draw the young male element, and a very large one by the way.

Clara Horton in the ingenue lead, Molly Casey, an orphan with a ranch and three men on her hands, is happily placed and dispatches her footage with extreme ease.

Amusing and well proportioned team work is accomplished by Francis Ford and J. Farrell MacDonald in Soda Water Manning and Marmon Peters, Sandy's Partners and pals. They control the comedy of the piece and display some real technique.

William Robert Daly and Dorothea Wolbert form the opposition in the roles of J. Plimsoll, the inevitable saloon proprietor and Mirandy Meekin, a town busy body. They are both excellent.

Charles Newton, Jim Corey, Ed Jones and Byron Munson do minor parts.

There isn't a doubt but that "Action" will attract and please those who yet lean toward its type of photoplay.

NEW CHRISTIE FOREIGN CONTRACTS

NEW HORIZONS

In the average play or photoplay, the problem or problems confronting the characters are solved before the final curtain or fade-out. In this way the audience is enabled to depart at the end of the performance or presentation without taking away any measure of perplexity.

The photoplay dealing with the utterly obvious, with all its elements sharply defined, and with a "satisfactory" ending which is a complete solution, may be relished by the majority of people, but I have a sneaking hunch that a few screen tales a la "The Lady or the Tiger?" might successfully woo a populace essentially changeable and capricious.

Of course, as far as artistic qualifications go, the higher type of photoplay will be the one wherein no attempt is made to solve any problems; where the very ending is vague, nebulous or even dimly, intangibly terrible! Consider the feelings of an audience after witnessing a photoplay which terminates with a young man and a young woman on the brink of a moral precipice, in an entanglement which allows of no extrication—except—and here the very faintest breath of hope could be allowed to lightly stir within them—reflected in their eyes or in a sudden gesture, as the scene fades into the word "Finis."

What conjecturing could be possible around family firesides! Such a photoplay would be as Life itself, always unfinished, always incomplete. It would linger in people's memories, it would invite discussion, and provoke wide comment and wider attendance. The problem has been transferred from the shoulders of the characters on the screen to the audience. It is theirs to ponder, to wonder if——.

In all great works of art there are blurry depths, horizons beyond horizons, some strange, remote element that does not exhaust interest at one seeing or hearing. I have yet to see the photoplay capable of arousing the uneasiness of spirit which results from a reading of certain books in which there is a shadowy feel and movement towards the unknowable—or even the unthinkable! In anything obvious one is consciously aware of the finite hemming-in. In a work of art where the vein of thought reaches into the profound, there is always a dimly suggested beyondness, in realms of rarefied beauty—or ugliness.

I am thinking of two short stories I read during the past year, both of which moved me deeply. I believe both of them could be transcribed to the screen. There might not be sufficient material in either of them for five-reel photodramas, but what astounding, revolutionary two-reelers could be made from them. The stories I speak of are "The Lost Phoebe," by Theodore Dreiser, and "The Planter of Malata," by Joseph Conrad.

In the third and final episode of "While New York Sleeps," which Fox produced, there was the terrible figure of the old paralytic—a choked and smouldering volcano, suggesting sinister possibilities—possibilities that were never realized, to the everlasting artistic glory of that celluloid fragment of Life. But the old man was ever an inscrutable, potential force—his very rigid, fixed attitude and the power of his intense presence constituting a nervous, sustained suspense. Here was the life of Everyman, never quite accomplishing, always on the brink of a miracle, but always eventually baffled, an impotent insect in a seething immensity.

Let us hope that the idea originated by Marshall Neilan in the inception of "Bits of Life"—that of introducing one strange, unusual or tragic story in a chain of five distinct stories, the other four representing romance, comedy, adventure, melodrama—will spread, opening up an endless vista of subtler art expression for screen writers whose imaginations seek new horizons. And some day, in future distant centuries, there will arise from this germ the screen writer who will abolish—all horizons.

TRASH

Every photodramatist should by all means see "God's Country and the Law"—in fact, should be forced to see it, in order that he may leave the theatre cursing inwardly, but somehow chastened; the more he turns this photoplay over in his mind, the more will he be determined to never, never, never write anything like it. After the American intelligentsia has been partially won over to photoplays, after witnessing "The Kid" and "The Four Horsemen" and "Broken Blossoms," along comes this horrible example of asininity. If it had been intended as a half whimsical, half grotesque comedy, it might have "gotten by" but . . . well, what's the use?

With educational institutions from coast to coast offering courses in photoplay writing—conspicuously Columbia and the University of Southern California—and many of the young idea studying the same through correspondence, there should be a law passed against such earnest students being in any way intimidated to believe that "God's Country and the Law" is the kind of story to write. For such a photoplay reduces Life itself to an absurdity.

Mr. Curwood or the scenarist wasted no time in "subtle art" when brewing this bad tasting concoction; a typical Mack Sennetish villian with Mack Swain mustachios and Hank Mann eyes, is introduced as the one "snake" whose wriggling shadow darkens the bright sunshine of God's own country. God's good taste and choice of peoples has been questioned often, but I am inclined to absolve the Deity in this case by believing that he has been unable to give Northwestern Canada and its inhabitants to anyone, so has made another of His customary sacrifices and kept the country for himself.

Now, for the story. A young married woman—very, very sixteenish and very, very pretty—is seen disporting with wanton abandon through beautiful groves and on the marge of a woodland lake. Her apparel is very abbreviated, displaying to consummate advantage delicately formed bare legs; this little married elf's flimsy bit of dress is of postage stamp proportions, perhaps covering slightly more of her anatomy than a one-piece bathing suit would have covered. She has a gay, cheerful, wholesome young French-Canadian husband.

I have traveled a bit for a young man, even through Canada, and have never encountered a young lady so utterly deshabille as the heroine of "God's Country and the Law." There are many times I would have liked to have encountered such a one, but I never had the good fortune to run across even a foolish, young unmarried thing who flitted over cool trails attired so delectably. Once, right here in our own Sierra Madres, I stumbled across the Norma Gould dancers traipsing artistically about, but they were practising and didn't actually live in the mountain fastness in which I chanced upon them. Well, anyhow—

The "snake" entered this modern Eden, and was welcomed to the shanty of the happy young couple; while wholesome hubby snored, the "snake" told the girl about "the great city;" she almost weakened, but just then hubby woke up, so the "snake" postponed his sinister intentions. Another day dawns and while hubby is out shooting breakfast, we see wifey coquettishly swishing her abreviated skirt, much to the visible agitation of the stranger—i. e. "snake." She stands on a chair to reach for something, disclosing much more of her delightfully formed limbs; the stranger's significant glances at this point leave little doubt as to what he is thinking of.

Inevitably, he pounces upon her—but his fell design is never accomplished, due to Fate, the mounted police and her husband.

Now, here are a few of the discords struck; no gal as beautiful as this little Northwood's flower, would have ever given a second glance, despite remarks pertaining to the great city, at anyone so obviously hideous as the "snake;" no virile man, since Time and this sad world began, could have failed to have been mysteriously disturbed by the flighty and flimsily clad young woman. Why blame the villian for the automatic workings of Nature? Of course, there are always a few highly developed men in any community gifted with a sense of humor; this type of man would not have molested our heroine, but his holding off would simply be on the grounds of his not wishing to become entangled with any feeble-minded woman.

False phychology is ever a distinguishing mark of trash. The screen version of "God's Country and the Law" is the kind of photoplay that causes the fun to be poked at all photoplays. Its appeal is essentially sensual, especially in the scene where the heroine is poised on the chair. The significant glances of the villian are, and are meant to be, carnal. They are also—ridiculous.

Herein is revealed the damnable stupidity of censorship; such a photoplay is passed intact—probably because of virtue's triumph, while a screen play based upon a story dealing with passion and romance outside of wedlock, no matter how exalted and circumstantially justified, would never "get by" the censors. Neither will most honest, dignified stories which happen to do with

EQUITY RESOLUTION

At a recent meeting of the executive committee of the Actors' Equity Association, the following resolution was passed:

Whereas, a deplorable event in San Francisco has called forth wide comment and discussion, and

Whereas, the fact that a prominent member of the motion picture profession is the central figure involved, and,

Whereas, the eyes of the world are upon the profession as a whole, be it

Resolved, that the Executive Committee of the Actors' Equity Association, in meeting assembled, unanimously condemns the wholesale odium and castigation that is being heaped upon its honorable profession because of the alleged, and as yet unproved, actions of one of its members.

We earnestly request that in the present unfortunate, unsavory and universally known affair, the press and public will not condemn our profession as a whole.

Statistics bear out the statement that the proportion of undesirable individuals in the acting and motion picture profession is no greater than in any other line of enterprise or endeavor. In justice to the high average of clean, admirable, right-living and right-thinking individuals engaged in acting and in motion picture work, we deplore the stigma that is being cast upon us and, in the name of decency, justice and equity, we

that struggles to get out

The right one is worth big money. You may have it. Will you accept a free, confidential test?

Hundreds of original stories, for dramatization on the screen, are urgently needed to keep the motion picture industry alive.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation is the accredited agent of the leading producers in a nation-wide search for story-telling ability. Not literary skill, but creative imagination and dramatic insight—the ability to think out and tell a good story, dramatically.

It is a talent many people have who never suspect its presence. You may possess the gift yourself, and not be aware of it. Will you let us test you free?

Send for the Van Loan questionnaire. In your own home by a simple psychological test you can learn whether you have the native ability for which the motion picture industry is anxious to pay liberally.

This questionnaire has started hundreds on the path to fame and big income. Just use the coupon below. You incur no obligation, of course.

Lillian Guenther's Notes:

You remember I said I was not the only one from Arkansas in the picture game; the Talmadge Sisters, I understand, are from Ft. Smith, Ark., Pauline Frederick, Jonesboro, Ark., Betty Francisco, Little Rock, Ark., Barbara Castleton from some part of the State. The men there are so busy raising crops and families they do not get far from home; two managed to get away and got into the picture game, Mr. Will Rogers from Rogers, Ark., and William Anderson (Bronco Billy) from Pine Bluff, the same city I selected for my birthplace fundamental motivation, or reveal those elements of life which most influence the individual career.

The screen writer who has sold several intelligently conceived "originals" for small sums, must often wonder, must often be completely flabbergasted—even crushed, when he reads of producers paying huge prices for the screen rights to trashy novels.

OLLIE SELLERS PRODUCTIONS

Featuring Gladys Brockwell, Ollie Sellers Productions has put into motion pictures "Double Stakes," the Saturday Evening Post story, by Wm. R. Leighton, which will be released October 15 by the Pacific Film Company. The cast includes Jack Curtiss, Earl Schwenck, Al Hart, Geo. Hernandez and Hazel Dunning.

This is the first of a series of six five-reel features to be produced by Ollie Sellers Productions for release by the Pacific Film Company. Casting has started for the second picture, as yet unnamed, and production is expected to begin around October 1st. Subsequent pictures of the series will be made at the same studio, all being directed by Sellers. Present plans are to release one every six weeks, in connection with a single reel "Folly Comedy" weekly.

the shows mean to those who are for years bedridden, or little children who are crippled or deaf or deformed. Always we are reaching the people who most need pictures. At the Children's Hospital every Sunday many see them from their beds.

I have the greatest feeling of gratitude for the courtesies extended to me in my work by the motion picture companies and by the members of the organizations of the different Hollywood Studios.

Thanking you, I remain,
Yours very respectfully,

DAWN AT CATALINA

Norman Dawn is at Catalina Island with a company making the final scenes for "The Street of the Flying Dragon," with Sessue Hayakawa.

Later Mr. Dawn leaves for Yosemite to make some double exposures, and to Monterey for scenic art titles.

Upon completion of this feature he will at once start work on a Chinese story called "The Vermilion Pencil," from the novel by Homer Lea, and starring Sessue Hayakawa.

It is a thrilling tale of romance and adventure in old China, and includes tremendous earthquake and volcano scenes.

Mr. Dawn is a master of volcanoes, a remembrance of "The Fire-Cat" will testify to this.

A Gentleman Expresses Himself

One Dr. C. A. Briegleb, a local preacher and president of the Ministerial Union, has this week aroused probably the most general, and certainly the most justified indignation ever felt or expressed by the motion picture profession with his vicious stand upon the Los Angeles censorship question, a subject which his organization is quite naturally and for many perfectly obvious reasons agitating at this time as a follow-up of Mayor Cryer's recent much publicized attempt to resurrect a forgotten statute providing for a City Commissioner or Censor of Films.

This resentment has not been occasioned by the fact that Briegleb is either sincerely or selfishly our adversary, but because he has attacked not only the work of our brains but our characters, our outlooks, and our motives, with what we can only take to be the most willfully malicious as well as senseless untruths.

In the extracts from his ridiculous speech at Monday's meeting of the Union to consider its campaign for the accomplishment of art strangulation, as condensed for us by the Record, he takes upon himself the responsibility for statements which we would enjoy seeing him forced to either prove or retract. It will be noticed that one of these wild thrusts is to the effect that the motion picture is "a greater menace to American childhood than the legalized liquor traffic," which latter he so proudly claims to have been "successfully stamped out." It may be that Dear Doctor Briegleb has not all of his faculties of observation or it may be that his line of vision extends far above the common herd, but in either case his ignorance upon the liquor situation in America eliminates the advisability of his dragging promiscuous references to it into even his most spirited discourses. It is to laugh! Still greater amusement may be produced, however, by his gentle remark concerning the alleged instances in which children recognize photographs of screen luminaries, while failing to do the same for those of Christ, which suggests the possibility that photography may have advanced in the past nineteen hundred and twenty-one years, and therefore has become more attractive and so conducive to more concentrated study.

Again Briegleb asserts with picturesque abandon that there has been no repudiation by the profession of Roscoe Arbuckle's notorious and repellant Labor Day "booze" party, which latter he seems to put forth triumphantly as conclusive proof that immediate censorship of Los Angeles-shown photoplays is imperative. Besides becoming incongruous at this juncture, the self-appointed and energetic reformer over-reaches himself, for not only the entire film colony, but scores of disinterested parties have condemned his deliberate lie, the nature of which loses for itself all propaganda value. It is not possible that eight trade paper editorials in addition to the various published actions taken by picture organizations against the principals in the Rappe tragedy and the almost unanimous horror expressed by the theatrical world over the unhappy affair, have been "missed" by this man who is apparently that type of intolerant upon whom democracies have come to look as dangerous to normal humanity. To our knowledge no one has upheld Arbuckle or his associates, but let us now go on record for criminals of any class, in stating that their injuries to civilization have rarely taken on the proportions assumed by the blunders of such bigoted combinations of perverted religion and artistic illiteracy.

That Briegleb and his ilk are set to accomplish their ends at all costs has continually pointed to the idea that their interests are overly affected in the matter, which is further borne out by the fact that they suggest to the City Council not one but a board of seven censors, the chairman of which is to receive fifty dollars a week compensation for his "valuable" services to the general populace.

Yes, the situation is both simple and complicated according to one's vantage point, but it is liable to become unexpectedly involved for all those who slander indiscriminately and too much.

We are greatly gratified by the several refutations of Briegleb's irrational calumnies, among which numbers an excellent one by Wm. C. de Mille. We will also appreciate those which are to come, and we would recommend them to the haughty president for the improvement of his soul and particularly his mentality. It is evident from the following that he is in sore need of some such stimulation to worthier efforts.

"Amid great applause, Dr. Briegleb vehemently denounced motion pictures as a greater menace to American childhood than the legalized liquor traffic, which 'has been so successfully stamped out.'

"After quoting statistics, which he said proved that motion pictures were a menace, Dr. Briegleb told the gathered ministers that he knew of instances where a photograph of the Christ was held up before children and went unrecognized by them, but that these same children immediately recognized the faces of various motion picture stars.

"Dr. Briegleb called upon every minister to be present this morning at 10:30 o'clock in the council chamber.

"I'm not afraid of the motion picture people," he cried, "but I am afraid of a weak-kneed preacher's trying to carry water on both shoulders, so it is the business of you everyone to be present in the council chambers tomorrow morning and protest against any evasion of duty with respect to censorship."

"What we hold against the motion picture industry because of the Arbuckle incident in San Francisco," declared Dr. Briegleb, "is that there has been no repudiation of him or his type by the motion picture people. But let a minister go wrong and in twenty-four hours the en-

Current Reviews

"NO WOMAN KNOWS"

Superba

Outside of retitling the screen play, miscasting and re-doing two-thirds of the characters, murdering the fine points and omitting the most valuable details in their scenario of Edna Ferber's story, Universal and Tod Browning haven't done a thing to "Fanny Herself." It would seem that such was sufficient. However, by the above we do not intend to imply that the performances in "No Woman Knows" are not in the majority of cases most superior, or even that the production which attends the rather unmeaning title is not a very fair drama with an entertaining theme and some expectional moments. It is all of that, but unhappily Ferber's rare breath and keen visualization have been drained out of it, and "No Woman Knows" will never be that subtly-told story of a noble, sensitive, Hebrew girl that is "Fanny Herself." It is rather, an unusually diverting production by Mr. Browning and George Yohalem which Universal has seen fit to pay a popular author's price for. That, of course, is not our business; only our disappointment.

The general technique of the picture is commendable. Browning's direction is well handled and the photography by William Fildew is good.

Mabel Julienne Scott offers us some surpassing work as Fanchen Brandeis, the predominating spirit in the story. Although this, the title role, is played somewhat weaker than her creator pictured her, and even though some of the best opportunities for characterization in the part are not provided the featured player, still she deserves all credit for capably interpreting a pleasing screen personality.

It is, regretably, impossible to say the same for Earle Schenck who is seen opposite Miss Scott in the position of Clarence Hyle. In the first place his original business has been wrecked; in the second he robs what remains of anything that might attract with a stiff unconvincing manner which never gains an ounce of sympathy clear through to the end. Two equally finished renditions, however, are accomplished by Stuart Holmes and John Davidson, who enact respectively Fencer, the opposition and Theodore Brandeis, the complication. A performance by either of these men will very nearly redeem any picture.

Grace Marvin, a Vera Gordon type of Jewish mother, plays effectively Molly Brandeis, the woman who meets with sacrifice the toll of genius. Miss Marvin is excellent as is Max Davidson in his few scenes as Papa Brandeis.

Other enjoyable characterizations are Bauer, a country music teacher and Shaublitz, a "great" violinist. These situations are gold mines for Snitz Edwards and Josef Swickard.

A very expressive piece of work is also done by Bernice Radom, who is seen as Fanny at ten. The little girl has good transition and absolutely lacks any measure of self-consciousness.

Raymond Lee is ample as Little Ted while Joseph Stearns "gets over" in a very little footage a clever touch in the Hyle youngster.

Baby Maxine Tabanic as Mizzi, Fannie's delightful little niece, E. A. Warren, Dick Cummings and Danny Hoy complete the large cast.

Even yet we wish that this were the story we thought it was to be. Oh, well! What's the use?

"WEDDING BELLS"

Kinema

The comedienne Talmadge is with us again in another of her airy presentations by Joseph Schenck entitled, "Wedding Bells." This moderately amusing farce is an adaptation of Zelda Crosby's play by the same name and it is a Chet Withey production. Its star's fans will find nothing radically new or startling in this latest vehicle of the celluloid's most precocious feminine decoration, but the story will several times pay for itself because it has a certain degree of merit, because its star would attract in far less, and because "farce publics" aren't generally over particular anyway.

Claire Windsor

Playing in "The Blot"

Constance as Rosalie Wayné ,an unreasonable young Palm Beach charmer is, well —Constance in action as usual, the occasion for the entire effort. It is something to please thousands by one's mere presence.

The masculine lead opposite the bobbed one, is, after an absence from his old position for many months, no less an one than Harrison Ford, Miss Talmadge's able feeder of other and just as happy days. The well remembered team will evoke pleasant exclamations from many. Ford is seen to advantage in Reggie Carter, Rosalie's strange, young divorced husband.

Emily Chichester does considerable with the odious Miss Marcia Hunter, chief disturber of Rosalie's "dog in the manger" peace of mind; while James Harrison and William Roselle undertake to everyone's satisfaction more minor roles.

An exceedingly amusing figure is cut by Dallas Welford who plays Jackson, Carter's painfully scrupulous butler.

Ida Darling, Polly Vann and Frank Honda end the list of players.

From a technical standpoint as is to be expected in Schenck offerings, there are no complaints to register. First National releases "Wedding Bells."

"THE INVISIBLE POWER"

California

"The Old Nest," after a three weeks' run has finally made room upon Goldwyn's local releasing program for "The Invisible Power," Charles Kenyon's drama of a woman who loved a crook. Since it is very full of heart interest and possesses much well placed suspense, this Frank Lloyd production escapes the criticism for being over melodramatic, which it might otherwise receive.

Irene Rich and House Peters are co-featured in this story and let it be stated that they make a suitable and thoroughly pleasing team. Particularly sympathetic is the work of Miss Rich who fills the role of Laura Chadwick, a simple village school teacher, whose love although powerful enough to convert an ex-convict cannot protect him or their child from the menacing influence of old adversaries. The predominant thing about this actress' personality is her unfailing sincerity, a characteristic which is happened upon only too infrequently in all art.

Peters gives a no less fitting portrayal of Sid Chambers, the husband whom "the bulls wouldn't let go straight." It is altogether worthy of his high standard.

The heavy work of the photoplay is the very excellent effort of Dewitt Jennings, whose characterization of Mark Shadwell, the typical "ambitious" plainclothesman could scarcely have been improved upon. Even his exaggerated action is so managed as to carry complete conviction.

Another praiseworthy role is accomplished by Sidney Ainsworth in Bob Brake, a criminal whose appeal lies in his loyalty and misfortune.

Others in the cast are: William Friend, Gertrude Claire, Lydia Yeamans Titus and Jessie de Jainette.

"PASSIN' THRU"

Grauman's

A vivacious mixture of the serious and ridiculous that ruthlessly sacrifices reason and even comedy logic to gain several lively effects is Douglas McLean's newest Thomas Ince screen release, "Passin' Thru."

At that, the story by Agnes Christine Johnston although basing its climax upon a mule's ability to kick through the walls of a building and a steel safe is in spots lucid enough to serve the great majority of our entertainment seeker's outlooks and agile enough to please generally. The subtities are especially good laugh getters, while one or two of the situations are unadulteratedly funny.

In the position of Billy Barton, an inevitable "goat" in any situation, McLean is exceedingly comfortable and as is customary with that pleasant young man quite at home. He proceeds briskly through his action, pausing now and then to send over a rather weak gag line, which nevertheless gathers effect with repetition. Doug must watch out for too much sameness in his performances.

A pretty, big-eyed little ingenue, by name Madge Bellamy, is seen opposite the star as Mary Spivins, a child of the rustics. She may be said to do nothing remarkably well.

Otto Hoffman as Spivins, Sr., town celebrity and tightwad, is a good type as is Willis Robards for Silas Harkins, Spivins bitterest enemy.

The opposition is largely centered in Fred Kingston, a young man with cash lifting tendencies. The part is filled by Louis Natheaux who "gets by" with it.

THE ORIENT

Any half way observant person must be cognizant of the gradual introduction into our national life of things Oriental; the mysticism of the East has a tremendous pull upon even the average American, although his objective philosophy may render him immune to a sympathetic understanding of it, or even a wish to comprehend it. Many of the newer homes in metropolitan centers are being designed with an Oriental touch or flourish here or there; almost every home today has its incense burners, its Japanese prints, its Buddha statues. Few songs are more popular than Finden's Indian Love Lyrics, based on Laurence Hope's poems—themselves immensely popular in even the table lands of culture. In popular music, much is composed on Oriental themes, such as Oliver Wallace's famous "Hindustan," the sensation of two years ago. In literature, the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam is perhaps more popular than any poem of length extant; Sir Edwin Arnold's "The Light of Asia" is immensely popular in cultured circles.

Today two film companies are making versions of "The Rubaiyat," and many of our best known plays and photoplays of the past two years have been based on Oriental themes or laid in Oriental locales. Thomas H. Ince recently released "The Bronze Bell"; Pathe just released a screen version of "Without Benefit of Clergy"; we have had "Broken Blossoms," "The Eyes of Youth," and others too numerous to mention. Photodramas based on the activities of white people in India, Japan, China, Persia, Burma, or Siam—if written intelligently and sympathetically—should find a market.

FEW SCREEN WRITERS

A wild chimera is frisking about in certain deluded noodles to the effect that all the way from thirty thousand to a hundred thousand humans on the North American continent are plying their pens and talents in writing scenarios. Newspaper reporters and editors with elastic imaginations have printed very fantastic, extravagant state ments along these lines; where they obtain these bits of guess work and misinformation is a mystery.

The fact is that recent statistics compiled by an individual who was given access to the files of the scenario departments at leading studios, show that slightly over ten thousand persons have submitted screen stories to these representative studios during the past three years.

True, one organization received about thirteen thousand scenarios during the year 1920, but these consisted of many stories which had been sent to other studios; and many individuals submitted from two to around two dozen scenarios in the course of the year.

When it is realized that—conservatively—one hundred thousand people are signing their names to stories, poems, essays, and editorial and news matter in our newspapers and periodicals, it will be seen that the real problem before the motion picture art is the gaining of more intelligent writers for the screen.

It is evident that the great difficulty lies in interesting ten times as many people in screen writing—and at the same time interesting primarily those whose mental and emotional forces are at least normally developed. There is more money in writing for the screen than there is in writing for the magazines, eventually wider fame, but there are too few people attempting to write photoplays to enable the producers to depend on them for their stories. The producer is sure of a large weekly magazine output.

There is just as big a percentage of stories rejected by magazines as there are scenarios rejected by the studios. But with the greater number of people choosing the printed word as their medium, the magazines are able to secure some wheat from the immense amount of chaff. The studio can't at present secure enough "wheat" from the original screen stories submitted, so they turn to the already culled magazine stuff.

In exact ratio as the American intelligentsia take up photoplay writing will the American public be spared the present day wretched interpretations of novels, short stories and plays—and the motion picture itself become an individualized art.

Another fact to be considered by those who have hitherto been intimidated by the supposed huge number of people attempting photoplay writing is this: most of the ten thousand who dispatched their brain children to the studios were absolutely untrained in the technique of screen writing. With even ten thousand first rate screen writers storming the cinema citadels, the result would be very different.

REAL RELIGION

The Reverend D. H. Jones resigned as the pastor of the Huntington Park Baptist Church because of the fanatical stand taken by most of his flock in demanding the Sunday closing of motion picture theatres in Huntington Park, which is a suburb of Los Angeles. Following his action, steps were taken toward expelling him from the Baptist Church. Here are some of Pastor Jones' epigrams, run on the screen of the Huntington Park Theatre, which caused all the trouble:

"I prefer to dwell with the worldling and be true to my inner self than to live with the saint and betray it."

"There is a way to make the church the super-attraction; but it will never be done by coercing the consciences of men. The Cross of Christ is proving to be the greatest magnet in the world, but use it as a club, and it will become a colossal failure."

"Killed professionally, yes. But, frankly, I would rather be a man than a minister. Character is greater than profession."

"I would just as soon believe that the perfume of the rose comes from the polecat as to believe that the spirit of the blue laws comes from God."

"Christ whipped men out of the church, but never into it. 'Professional reformers' and 'Christian lobbyists' at Washington may mean well, but most of them are misguided swivel-chair heroes of the Cross."

"'Close every other door except the church's,' cries the reformer, forgetting that open hearts are greater inducements than closed doors."

"The doctrine behind the blue laws is this: 'I am in the right and you are in the wrong. When you are stronger than I, you ought to tolerate me; for it is your duty to tolerate truth. But when I am the stronger, I shall persecute you; for it is my duty to persecute error.'"

"All the proposed Sunday legislation is simply a human attempt to whitewash what God designed to wash white. To condemn movies because some things may be objectionable is like refusing to eat fish because it contains bones."

"When human passion is subdued, when the turbulent tide ebbs, we see that the big thing that lies at the bottom of the opposition of theatre opening on Sunday, is simply bigotry."

"It is a wonder to me how many bad things good people see in the movies; fortunately, if you are so disposed ,you need never be disappointed. The product of a legal religion has ever been and ever will be either hypocrisy or persecution."

CONGRATULATIONS, MR. LEHR

It is a fact that many of the country's largest universities have recently inaugurated classes in photoplay writing, notably New York University and Columbia. Now Temple University, Philalelphia, comes forward with a course that will cover all branches of motion picture production.

The institution in the City of Brotherly Love is to have the co-operation of the Goldwyn Studios, according to Vice-President Lehr, who has already complied with their request for photographs of all branches of the magnificent Goldwyn Studio. They will be made into lantern slides and will be used at the university to illustrate lectures.

In the Goldwyn news bulletin for July 9th, Ralph Block, in charge of Goldwyn's New York scenario department, says: "The Goldwyn Company is now looking for aid in its search for material of high entertainment value from the thousands of men and women throughout the country, who, with a little effort, could find the screen a profitable profession to follow. The Goldwyn editors carefully follow current fiction and the modern stage. But they believe the screen has now reached a place that will make it worth while for persons of imagination to shape their paths in its direction."

This statement by Mr. Block makes Abraham Lehr's expression of good will and cooperation towards the university quite significant.

Mr. Lehr has pointed the path. He unquestionably has the big vision, and is to be generously commended for his intelligent initiative.

Pickups By the Staff

STANDARDIZED LABORATORY SERVICE

The Los Angeles Rothacker-Aller Laboratories and the Chicago Rothacker laboratories are henceforth to operate as one through a system of standardization. The two plants are to be so synchronized that a portion of the prints on a release can be made in one laboratory and the remainder at the other—and all the prints will have identical screen brilliancy and tone values. On his trip east Joseph Aller, resident head of the Los Angeles plant, conferred with executives of the Chicago plant and states that henceforth when the negative goes eastward to the Rothacker Chicago plant, the producer will get this same degree of darkness in all prints because the time cards which are worked out on the Coast will go eastward along with the negative. Because the exposure will be made in printing machines tuned to operate in mechanical precision with the Coast printing machines. Because, after leaving the printing room, the film will go into a developer identical to that on the Coast—identical even to the same brand of distilled water. And so in the tinting or toning tank. A standardization of the New York and London Rothacker-Aller laboratories is also in preparation.

LETTERS OF A SELF-MADE CAMERAMAN TO HIS NEPHEW

By John Leezer

Glen Cedar Ranch, Burbank, Calif.

My Dear Nephew:

Expected a letter from you on my return from location, but suppose you are too busy with other things. Had no idea I would be this long in Bear Valley, but the fishing was so good that the gentleman who is being featured decided to stay a week longer.

We have one of the usual Western stories calling for an immense herd of cattle in a mad stampede from which the male rescues the female. Our director got the idea that if the cattle were in the timber, we might pull a stampede with about twenty-five instead of twenty-five hundred. "It would give the impression that the woods was alive with 'em," said he. If I ever write a book entitled "Funny Happenings in Filmland," I will surely include our experiences with that bunch of dairy inmates in the Big Bear timber. I have always been under the impression that the cattle ranging the western plains were not the same kind we used to let the bars down for night and morning back in Iowa. That is, I thought they were all gentlemen cows, or had been, but these animals were all equipped with milk reservoirs. Another thing about a stampede, as I understand it, is that the aforesaid cattle ought to be hitting around twenty or twenty-five miles, but we couldn't get these Holsteins and Jerseys out of intermediate, and no two in the same direction at the same time. Every plan that was suggested we tried. Red flags, smoke pots, barking dogs, firecrackers and flares. Even the director's goat failed to start 'em. Up to the time lunch was called there was nothing doing, and we were ready to give up. I was wrastling with my Meiling near the camera when all of a sudden there was a snort further back in the timber, and then that bunch of ornery critters came tearing down the line right past the camera. With one foot in my potato salad, your Uncle got the stampede in the box, but we can't use it, on account of the buckaroos and members of the technical staff on the set. They were trying to get off the set, of course, but were more or less hindered, in their efforts to leave nothing behind for the Bessies and Daisies and Gertrudes to tramp on. The director was speechless, partly because of his surprise, but mostly on account of having his mouth full of canned gooseberry pie. It must have been very humiliating, after working all morning to get the very thing that had just happened, not to be able to yell, "Camera!" As soon as the gooseberries permitted it, he remarked that he would give five dollars to know what scared 'em. It wasn't necessary to offer any financial inducement, however, for everybody, except some of the cowboys who had gone after the dairy, was working up in the direction from which the cows had come. "Red" Connors, assistant props, was away ahead of everyone else and was soon out of sight. Not for long, however. The vibrations of a wild yell hit the air in all directions, and "Red" reappeared. He was throwing his feet so hard and so fast that it seemed he was all feet. "It's a bear; it's a bear," he shouted. It sounded something like the old popular song, only more so. Things looked serious, but as nothing else appeared the human stampede was averted. The leading lady, in a sweet, tremulous voice, asked "Red" if he had really seen a bear. "Look!" he yelled, and there, sure enough, was a bear coming slowly through the underbrush. The trees were too big to climb, but there was plenty of room to run in, and I guess there would have been some unofficial records hung up if it had not been for George Corby. "Wait a minute—wait a minute. I know that bear," said he. "Whadda ya mean ya know the bear," asked the director. "Well, I ought a know her," said George, "I've worked with her enough," and he went over to meet the animated rug, and to renew his acquaintance. He went without escort, to be sure, but as the animal seemed to be glad to see him and allowed all kinds of liberties, we soon were all engaged in the salutation. George advanced the opinion that some company must have been using the animal in the neighborhood, and that she had wandered away.

"Well, as soon as we get the cattle back, we'll make the stampede scene," said the director.

An hour passed by and no cows, while the bear was happy among her new-found friends. The man who owned the cows appeared about this time, and informed the director that he was in the habit of extracting the lacteal fluid from said cows about five o'clock every morning, and that he wished to adhere strictly to schedule on this occasion. He was sure peeved when informed of what had taken place. Another hour of waiting and the director got a happy thought.

"Forget the stampede," said he. "We'll rescue the girl from the bear."

The set was cleared for action. The bear was to come on and off dragging the girl. She was to drape herself about the bear's head and shoulders in such a way that it would appear the bear was really making off with her. George was off the side-line opposite with a piece of pie, and when the bear was turned loose she made splendid time, considering what she was carrying, in his direction. It was so good we made it twice, but as there was only one more piece of pie it was necessary to save it for another location.

We next shot a scene where the leading man sees the poor girl in this sad plot and rides to the rescue. Then it was necessary to show the wild and untamed beast about to devour the fair maiden. George said it would be simple. We see our heroine in a heap on the ground, a piece of pie down her neck and the bear munching therefrom. The hero rides in and tries to dismount, but his spur catches in the back of the saddle, and by the time he gets it disengaged the pie is gone. No more pie! What can be used for the retake? Somebody with brains offered Mrs. Bear a stick of grease paint. She liked it, so half of it was rubbed on the back of the fair one's neck. This time there was no hitch. The hero dispatched the bear with a thrust from a butcher knife which he took from his boot. A quick fade, and the episode was in the box.

Our director is very original and very versatile. He works much better without a script than he does with one.

Outside of this there ain't no news. Hoping to hear from you soon, I am as always,

YOUR UNCLE DUDLEY.

"VENUS AND THE CAT" THE LATEST AESOP'S FILM FABLE RELEASE

In the series of Aesop's Film Fables, produced by Fables Pictures, Inc., Pathe has scheduled "Venus and the Cat" for release on October 9th. Cartoonist Paul Terry brings this fable up-to-date by comically driving home the meaning of the popular phrase, "and the cat came back." A bewhiskered old bachelor sits comfortably in his shirt sleeves reading the newspaper. The house cat, feeling the need of affectionate attention, annoys him much. Presently he grabs her and throws her out of the door. Kitty sheds a few tears and comes back through the window. Again she is thrown out—and comes down through the chimney. At last she is treated so roughly that she feels the need of revenge on the heartless bachelor.

Ah, if she could only be transformed into a woman—a strong-minded, managing sort of woman—and marry the cruel bachelor!—

Well, pussy's desire is gratified. Venus comes sailing along in a cloud near the ground, get's the cat's attention, performs some hokus-pokus, and, behold the cat is a woman—and Venus sails away out of sight.

Knowing the premises as well as she does, it is easy for the cat-woman to get access to the bachelor—and do her worst. But as a married man the old chap seems quite happy and comfortable. The cat-woman finds herself bored, and her mind again turning to the rat subject. When she sees a rat she starts in pursuit and wishes she were a cat. Pretty soon Venus obligingly comes on the scene and gives her wish—much to the consternation of the husband, now a bachelor again.

Moral: It is quite useless to try and change your nature.

GOVERNOR OF MAINE APPEARS IN HOLMAN DAY FEATURE

"Wings of the Border," a Holman Day two-reel drama, has as one of its leading characters Percival P. Baxter, the Governor of Maine. Mr. Day's publicity department proclaims strict adherence to type in these two-reel Maine woods dramas which he is filming for Pathe.

TO FILM "THE DUST FLOWER"

Goldwyn is preparing to start production on "The Dust Flower," Basil King's latest novel, which is now running serially in a national magazine.

The adaptation of the novel to the photo-drama has been entrusted to Charles Kenyon, and consulting with the screen dramatist is Basil King himself, who will follow the progress of the picture to its completion, sharing the task of supervising the cutting with Mr. Kenyon, the director, and the film editor. An all-star cast is now being selected.

Frederic KoVert is suing The Cinderella Roof for cancellation of contract.

Director Fred Caldwell has just completed shooting, "The Mystery of Ferndale," a seven-reel drama, with an all-star cast.

DEAR DIRECTORS, CASTING DIRECTORS, ASSISTANT DIRECTORS AND OTHERS:

I wish you knew me so well you would dream of me. At first you might think you were having a nightmare, but I really could not be a nightmare. My ears are too long. I do not claim to be beautiful or brilliant, but I do photograph very well and am a hard worker and an obedient little girl.

Hoping to see you soon, I will close.

while up in the mountains of San Jacinto finishing some scenes, was engaged by Finis Fox, who is directing one of his own stories, "Man's Law and God."

Miss Melville will be remembered for her work as the mother in "Treasure Island," Holubar's "Man, Woman and Marriage," and many other parts in support of some of our big stars, including Geraldine Farrar, William Farnum and others.

Miss Melville is better known for her under-world and foreign types.

Mr. Fox claims Miss Melville is the exact type of a Frenchwoman of the north woods that he had in mind when he wrote his story, and as to her ability Mr. Fox says she is an artist to her fingertips. We think as a writer of some of the most successful photoplays, Mr. Fox knows what he is talking about and hope to hear of Miss Melville doing some very big things.

Here's good luck to the little actress!

MR. DAWN has completed the shooting of this picture, which he believes to be regarded as the most beautiful vehicle that Hayakawa has ever had.

The next Hayakawa picture which Mr. Dawn will direct will be "The Vermillion Pencil" a brilliant Chinese love story by Homer Lea.

EQUITY AGAINST CENSORSHIP

The Los Angeles branch of the Actors' Equity Association, of which there are sixteen thousand members in America, at a meeting held in Hollywood recently, adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas, it is the sentiment of this organization that censorship is an un-American, unjust and unnecessary measure, and therefore, for the City of Los Angeles, at present the home of the Motion Picture Industry to go on record as being in favor of any film censor-board or film commission, would work an injustice to the entire industry.

Therefore, be it resolved, that this Association is opposed to the censorship measure now pending before the Los Angeles City Council.

And it is further resolved, that a committee of eight members of this Association be appointed to wait upon the City Council and to confer with the Producing Managers' Association and other interested civic organizations to oppose censorship or film surveillance in Los Angeles.

FRENCH PICTURE NOTES
(From Variety)

The Cie Generale Francaise de Cinematographie held its annual meeting last week, when Benoit Levy occupied the chair and declared profits for the entire nine months of the concern to be 397,088 francs. Some criticisms were heard, particularly concerning the working of the Salle Marivaux. In 1919 there was a deficit of 290,386 francs at this hall, but during the direction of the company which took it over in April, 1920, a profit of 210,000 francs was recorded, and for the first quarter of 1921 there is already a profit of 186,000.

It was explained some of the productions of the Film d' Art have not yet been sold, and a sinking fund of 300,000 francs was allowed for the stocks of this branch of the concern. The business of the Agence Generale Cinematographe, also part of the company, which reached 2,830,710 francs in 1919, and 4,807,000 francs in 1920 reached 1,645,000 francs for the first three months of 1921. An increase in capital was proposed, to take up loans.

The French Paramount is working on "Perpetua" here under the direction of Robertson, with Ann Forest as principal. The work is being done at Caudebec-en-Caux, where the free aid of the inhabitants is readily recruited, the rural inhabitants being tickled to death at the mere idea of being seen on the screen. The troupe of a traveling circus, the Cirque Pinder, in the district, is comprised in the cast.

M. Etievant is producing in the Ermolieff studios at Monstreuil-sous-Bois, near Paris, a serial of twelve reels by Jules Mary, entitled, "La Fille Sauvage," with R. Joube and Mme. Lissenko. M. Volkoff, of the same company, is producing another serial, "La Maison du Mystere," with Mojoukine, Vanel, Koline, Benedict, Mmes. Silvia Grey and Helene Darly. The Eclipse Society has now terminated "La Petite Fadette," from the novel of George Sand, but date of release not decided.

Joseph J. Dowling is playing a principal character role in Katherine MacDonald's forthcoming picture entitled, "The Infidel."

June Mathis' next adaptation for Metro will be a story for Alice Lake which Maxwell Karger will direct.

The John M. Stahl Company has returned from the Mojave desert, where it has been filming scenes for "The Song of Life."

Very good moments are afforded by Cameron Coffey as the precocious Spivins infant, and Fred Gambold who is seen as Hezikiah Briggs, Culverton's "constabule."

Edithe Yorke, Margaret Livingston and Al Filson do the remaining roles excellently.

William Seiter is responsible for the direction of this Paramount release as is Bert Cann for its good photography.

"A MOTION TO ADJOURN" (Preview)

If there is a producer in Los Angeles who has not in his possession a Peter B. Kyne story, let him rise and be observed. They're all doing it.

The latest Kyne picturization, however, is Ben Wilson's production, "A Motion to Adjourn," which will in due course of time be released by Arrow. The story contains some human interest, comedy and a fairly diverting romance, but it gets a bad start and stumbles along for the first two reels until it gathers sufficient momentum to swing progressively ahead.

Roy Clement's direction is noticeably uneven, as is King Grey's photography.

Roy Stewart heads the cast in a breezy young ne'er-do-well, Silas Warner, Jr., and he waxes quite juvenilish in his part, using his congenial personality to good ends. The action allotted him would scarcely be designated as difficult, but his ease does much to set it out.

In the leading feminine position Sallie Bleeker, Marjorie Daw is humaner than she can usually be depended upon to be, and her almost awkward movements are well suited to this role, since it is an illiterate little backwoods girl.

Sidney D'Albrook has been much better cast than he is as Silas' younger brother Archie; Evelyn Nelson is satisfactory in Louise Warner, their sister. Norval McGregor makes an interesting old character of Sallie's uncompromising father, while Peggy Blackwood in the comedy character, Valentine Hummer, gets several laughs. William Carroll, William White and Jim Welch, all in picturesque parts, complete the cast.

The material in "A Motion to Adjourn" justifies no more than three reels, although it is "padded" into five. Such an error is as serious as it is ordinary. It should be more carefully guarded against.

tire ministry will strip him of every vestige of his office and repudiate him. If the motion picture industry desires to clean itself from within, why does it not repudiate Arbuckle and his like?"

Would it be unkind or inconsiderate to suggest that had the picture people been sufficiently interested or active to have voted in support of their own candidates at the late election there would have been no such menace as censorship threatening our scope and well being at this time? Experience is indeed a dear teacher.

JEAN RILEY HER OWN MOTHER

How does it feel to be your own mother? This is the question Jean Riley is being asked since she started work in "Eyes That Know," a Schwartz production, starring herself.

In this picture, Miss Riley plays two parts, those of a sixteen-year-old girl and her mother. The portrayal of the mother marks the first time in her career that Miss Riley appears in a character role.

"The Affairs of Anatol," Reviewed

It may be that Cecil de Mille has an exaggerated sense of humor; surely he knows the mental trend of his own particular following and with "The Affairs of Anatol," his current, most-advertised production, it would seem that he has indulged each to an extreme. By the foregoing observation we mean simply that in this, the most lavish picture of an extravagant producer, the public is being treated to a sensual, degrading treatise upon promiscuity which has been handled so cleverly that it may laugh with studied innocence in the face of average stupid virtue, while giving Mr. Worldly Wise one of the unhealthiest "kicks" of the cinema season.

Always an exponent of the most voluptuous side of America's unwholesomest social stratum. Cecil de Mille has finally attained a position in which although it may perhaps be desirable from the standpoint of financial remuneration, and perhaps holds something of fame, the possibility of his becoming a master or even a great man in the motion picture profession is precluded. We say this with due respect for the minds of the technical wizards with whom he is surrounded and who have done so much to accomplish his elevation to an enviable rank, and for his own brilliant ability along commercial lines. For his work, for his outlook, however, we entertain little but distaste.

In his choice and arrangement of Snitzler's original subject matter he has found and developed an opportunity to exploit that rankest type of animalism which is daintily shod, suggestively draped and fascinatingly set amidst mythical luxury for the earthy gratification of the man who, we quote what we take to be the director's own press department in a trade weekly, "reads between the lines;" meanwhile excusing to his more "simple" fans that which is perfectly evident to be the theme of his unworthy creation by triumphantly denying its existence in subtly worded subtitles.

Admittedly this covering two ends was a shrewd business measure as well as a technical feat but in attempting to satisfy a field as extensive as is the screen public's, there are more angles to take into account than the pair mentioned.

The first and by far the most important one upon the list of those overlooked in the picturization of this story has to do with the attitude toward it of such members of society as, being intelligent enough to grasp the underlying idea of the play as well as the reason for the methods employed to disguise that idea, and fastidious enough to resent the whole, depart from the showhouse running this Lasky special of specials with a feeling of disgust for not only one producer and his picture, but in all probability for the work of an entire industry. That that industry contains far more worthy intentions and achievements than otherwise, is an easy matter for disapproving humanity to pass over. Thus Mr. de Mille is not fair to his profession when he presents a play that is low.

Another very real injury in the imbecilic Anatol's adventurings as screened, is to those who will never perceive the debasement in the story. For there will inevitably be individuals, particularly among the more empty headed females of the poorer classes who will witness the ridiculous sumptuousness of the residences in the piece with their foolish displays of trick trappings, and the gorgeously significant costuming of the various feminine charmers also utilized, with no less a feeling of discontent because of the fact that decent men do not maintain households on the order of Anatol's any more than self-respecting people exist or conduct themselves as the capricious Mr. de Mille would have us believe. Nor is there probably anything in the backgrounds of such unfortunates to discredit the inexcusable waste which is displayed in the sequences through which the hero is upheld in the smashing of an apartmentful of costly furniture in his anger and is justified in insisting upon the destruction of thousands in jewels for the gratification of a personal whim. That the general reaction of such incidents is insidious to those who accept them seriously, as we must remember many will, must be conceded as readily as the fact that the attraction held forth by such atmospheres is dangerous. Therefore in preaching waste in his picture, Mr. de Mille harms his public.

Another vital wrong is committed by any producer who holds up before his brother artists a clever, well handled creation which has as its basis just so much gilded filth. And that wrong is to himself, a man whose position is thereby unquestionably lowered. He has proven that he is capable of big things while choosing to be associated with trash.

If the photoplay in question were a drama containing the points which might easily have been made with it under serious circumstances, there would be little of which to complain, but de Mille has made of "The Affairs of Anatol," a comedy founded upon situations which are not funny and depending upon innuendos to both daringly disclose and carefully conceal his story, according to the viewpoint involved.

We believe that he has squandered much money and reputation for Lasky and himself as well as two hours too much of our personal time with this picture.

Certainly our profession has at this time enough to battle in the way of outside menaces, that those within the industry should not be permitted to make our position more difficult.

Current Reviews

"AFTER THE SHOW"

Grauman's

An intensely interesting drama of theatre life is William de Mille's production for Lasky of Rita Weiman's "After the Show," this week's local Paramount release. Including in its theme three great loves, namely the tender one which must everlastingly protect, the fundamentally youthful one which adores, and the mighty love of desire, the story treats mainly of the bitter battles resultant from such a strenuous combination. These conflicts which have been placed in highly dramatic situations by the authoress, are treated with their director's characteristic delicacy which provides them with unusual artistic value. Trashy sentiment and conventionality have no place in this photoplay; but in it an age-old idea is developed naturally, if quite sensationally.

Hazel MacDonald and Vianna Knowlton are credited with the smoothly running scenario which gets on faultlessly; while Guy Wilkey's photography is rather above average than otherwise.

A small but excellent cast (all star) conducts the very human characters through their various actions and accomplishes an admirable piece of serious entertainment.

Eileen, a simple hearted little chorus girl and the leading feminine position, is filled by Lila Lee, who achieves with this portrayal the most intelligent and pleasing emotional acting which she has ever been able to offer the public. This fact goes to further disprove the idea that actresses are born oftener than trained. A comedy drama star at fifteen or so, Miss Lee was generally conceded to be hopeless; as one of several featured players in this picture she is at ease and convincing. The answer is three or four years of education. We are herewith recommending concentrated study to about sixty per cent of our ingenues (of all ages) as the only way out. First defeats are quickly forgotten in this as in other lines of business when a deserving record is once established. Miss Lee bids fair to commence, at this time, her real career.

Jack Holt in the semi-unsympathetic leading male role, Larry Taylor, is his dependably correct self, both with regard to technique and to his typical interpretation of the fascinating rounder who learns unselfishness from another's sacrifice. Holt's popularity has grown until he now stands among those older leading men who are foremost in the ranks of public favor.

But leaving the others, the most appealing work in the play belongs to Charles Ogle, who represents all that constitutes protective love, as Pop O'Malley, Eileen's foster father. Years of just such sensitive playing usually, however, in less prominent parts than Pop, have also won for him the affection of thousands, not to mention the greatest admiration of his professional brothers. There is little need to criticize the roles undertaken by Ogle. His executions are always right!

Eve Southern, Carlton King, Shannon Day, Stella Seager, Ethel Wales, Bertram Johns and William Boyd each in a competently handled minor part, complete the list of players.

While "After the Show" is not a film which children should witness promiscuously, it will attract greatly in solid minded adult circles and should therefore make a good average throughout the country.

William Courtleigh, Sidney Bracey and Arthur Hull are playing in support of Constance Binney in her current Realart photoplay.

"DANGEROUS CURVE AHEAD"

California

There is certainly nothing about the comedy drama, "Dangerous Curve Ahead," that is big enough, human enough or superior enough to suggest its relationship to "The Old Nest," although they are both the brain children of Rupert Hughes and both deal, of course from varied angles, with domestic relationships; however the former Goldwyn production is withal an entertaining photoplay possessing many superlatively clever subtitles and one or two exceedingly funny situations which by themselves would "get it by." That part of the action seems to have been hurriedly "ground out" and that the cutting is more or less "chopping" in this instance is of course deplorable but scarcely as tragic as it would have been under less beguiling circumstances.

Pauline Curley

E. Mason Hopper's direction is a disappointment in that a considerable amount of it seems to have been turned out under a time pressure of some kind. It is unprofitable always to "manufacture" pictures and from the effect it is almost certain that this one was so treated. John Mescall's photography is standard.

Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix are co-featured in "Dangerous Curve Ahead," and although we wouldn't judge that either of them were inherently comedians, even their lightest action gets along remarkably well, especially in the case of the latter. The cutting precludes many opportunities for valuable transition for both of these performers, but that cannot possibly be laid to their doors.

Miss Chadwick as Phoebe Jones, a continually discontented but presumably an average wife, collects no sympathy for her part and indeed to do so would have required more subtlety than she has yet displayed to us, but there is nothing basically wrong with her work which may, indeed, even please the ordinary female audience.

Mr. Dix, on the other hand, as much through his opposite's action as his own, is rendered something of a hero in Harley Jones, Phoebe's better half.

Lefty Flynn did not strike us as being particularly well cast as Anson Newton, "the millionaire," who pursues Mrs. Jones. Certainly he directs against his opposition only a placid animosity, if any.

Little Virginia Stearns extracts many pleased exclamations from the feminine observers as the Jones baby, while Robert de Vilbiss and Newton Hall enact the other children. Several convincing sick scenes are the work of Master de Vilbiss.

Kate Lester, Edythe Chapman and James O'Neil all play small roles well.

"Dangerous Curve Ahead" is essentially a woman's picture.

"THE RAGE OF PARIS"

Tally's

"The Rage of Paris," Miss Dupont's somewhat "Universally" entitled initial starring vehicle for that organization could scarcely have been a more inauspicious one in which to launch an entirely new star at the unsuspecting public. Basing its plot upon a series of situations featuring Sex unpleasantly capitalized, which are given far too little excuse for being, this Du Vernest Rabell story drags in many indelicate subtitles and scenes which rather establish its suitability to lower Main street, as it is a bit too "messed" to meet with general appreciation.

It is apparent that Jack Conway has worked industriously with the direction, but it has been impossible for him to lend the scenario much that is either interesting or wholesomely entertaining.

Especial pains have been expended to give "The Rage of Paris" an elaborate production without much effect save one exceedingly well done sand storm sequence which is very realistic. Harry Vallejo's photography is somewhat above average.

As might be expected the star is not seen to very good advantage in the hackneyed role, Joan Coolidge, which is hers. We privately fear that the Du Pont lady's screen personality is rather negligent, but she is attractive after a fashion and in more fortunate parts may get by satisfactorily. As an unemotional "wife in name only" with a sweetheart in far-away Arabia, however, she lacks much that is desirable in those who carry stories in star parts.

Talbot, the male lead, may be said to be far better filled by Jack Perrin, whose work is dependably even. He makes his portrayal as natural as possible here, although he is also handicapped by an unstable character.

Ramsey Wallace seems to enter into the spirit of his super villainous role, Handley, with an eye to a little burlesque for which we blame him not at all. If one were to take him seriously he would suffer a criticism for exaggeration as the man who desires to tame his "icy" wife.

Elinor Hancock is excellent as Joan's mother, while Leo White completes the cast.

We'll look for an improvement next time.

Nigel Barry is playing the "heavy" in "The Little Minister," a Lasky picture, starring Betty Compson.

Mrs. May Curren and her six children appear in "The Prodigal Judge," which Edward Jose is directing for Eastern Vitagraph.

Gene Lowry is at present engaged in filming 2-reel kid-westerns. In his recently completed "We Were Young," Will and Jim Hatton and George French enact the principal roles.

The Screen Writers' Forum

—Conducted by Ted Le Berthon
Editor of The Photodramatist

CREATURES OF CELLULOID

The screen writer has, in common with the actor, many problems. For one thing, both are subject to the law of economic determinism—both are more or less limited in art expression, in a truly ultimate sense, by the surface-thinking, unbeautiful-minded custodians of the box-office: the motion picture exhibitors and exchange managers. It has been found necessary to hire exchange managers whose mentalities were keyed low enough to contact the exhibitor-mind on its own plane.

A motion picture trade paper is a publication which is addressed to and circulates among motion picture exhibitors and exchange managers. Any other circulation is negligible, incidental.

William A. Johnston, editor of the Motion Picture News, in an editorial captioned "Creatures of Celluloid" in the News of September 24th, criticises motion picture stars with considerable severity. Among other things, he says: "Few, very few, of you are artists, an artist being an individual who by dint of tremendous work, patience and long and supreme self-denial brings to perfection some particular endowment of talent. You are—most all of you—just human beings. Your picture stardom is largely the result of someone's else brains and money, plus, especially, the magic circulation of the motion picture. Many of you are mere photographic types. . . . You bedect yourself and strut with all the simple vanity of a peacock. You become as captious and cruel as any ship's sailor elevated by chance to the Sultanship of a South Sea Island. You think you've been touched by divine fire, whereas you've only been touched with celluloid. . . . . The serious menace of your stardom is this: You think your celluloid fame lifts you above man-made laws and the decencies of society and the sacred precepts of the home."

This world is a hall of illusions! Here is the editor of a magazine which stands for exploitation and intensive advertising of motion pictures and motion picture stars. In this magazine, advertising is accepted and printed which often exaggerates the merits of most mediocre photoplays, thereby creating a demand for shoddy wares. In this way the exhibitor is enlisted for further advertising co-operation—with the result that the extensively and intensively advertised picture invariably scores more heavily with the box office than does the purely artistic picture. The amusement-hungry public is led to view an inferior photoplay because of its intensive advertising, while the artistic photoplay perishes on the dismal shores of exhibitor and distributor indifference. The kind of advertising given many photoplays creates unsound values, ultimately accepted and absorbed by the public. Is the Motion Picture News concerned in any way with artistry or the fostering of art?

I know many screen actors and actresses who have been longing to appear in screen plays of a higher artistic order, and who deplore the lack of public demand—via the exhibitor, of course—for aught that is classic or dignified art. But the screen drama is shackled by exhibitor opinion! And exhibitor opinion is greatly governed by the organs dedicated to commercial development—to the development of a motion picture industry, but not a motion picture art.

It is an amusing though maudlin spectacle, that of the editor of a motion picture trade journal venturing an opinion as to who is and who is not an artist. What can a man whose eyes are of necessity clogged with gold-dust know of art? When a man has for years conducted a publication leveled to the comprehension of film exchange managers and motion picture exhibitors, and has SUCCESSFULY done so, it is proof positive of his constitutional incapacity for an understanding of Art. If a man through a series of misfortunes was reduced to editing a trade paper as a temporary bridge, a makeshift, he might still validly claim artistic perception—but not so one whose soul has not rebelled against the grosser vibrations, against consorting with money-making automatons for any considerable period of time.

In the first paragraph of Mr. Johnston's editorial he refers to the Arbuckle case. In fact, it is the foundation for what follows, for an arraignment by one who, being without sin, feels called upon to throw stones.

The fact is, the actor and actress represent a far higher type—generally speaking—than does either the exchange man or exhibitor. I know many actors and actresses of culture and sapience — people whose varied emotional and intellectual experiences make them a delight to meet; I have met but few—a negligible few—such exhibitors and exchange men. Most of them are exceedingly vulgar and stupid. In fact, the average exhibitor—and I've met hundreds of them—ranks socially lower than the average butcher.

That there are a number of motion picture personalities indulging in a fast and furious high life is beyond question. Personally, I think a little high life now and then is most acceptable. And I'm convinced that exhibitors, exchange men and the employees of trade journals essay the high life in exact ratio to their amount of personal graces, extent of bankroll, opportunity, and season of life. Like all other humans, they are deterred from frolicking by such factors as fear of detection, shortage of the income, lack of good looks, and old age. Frequently the last two deterrents, through devious processes of ratiocination, are not taken into consideration, and, grotesquely enough, make for high virtue!—usually self-conceded.

So far as strutting goes, I have never seen matched the arrogance and insolence of certain successful motion picture exhibitors—in the presence of men and women of superior artistic and intellectual attainments. The poor exchange men and movie trade-journal employees have nothing to strut about and no one to strut before. They're seldom in the public eye, and their activities are of utter unimportance.

I believe Mr. Johnston should be completely forgiven for his faux pas, for one never can tell what prompts a man to do a ridiculous thing—especially to indite so dull, solemn and hollow an editorial as "Creatures of Celluloid." Sometimes it's a gastronomical problem. In other words, what had Mr. Johnston been eating and drinking before he composed this grotesque? What does a motion picture theater exhibitor feed upon who addresses his advertising to humanity? What damnable diet was responsible for the creation of so horrible a popular song as "Ain't We Got Fun?" These are vexatious yet fundamental problems.

In a saner or more humorous moment Mr. Johnston would not have lambasted motion picture stars, but would have placed the blame for the Arbuckle incident and all other incidents where it intrinsically belongs —on the shoulders of the GREAT UNKNOWABLE POWER which is responsible for all things, from the spilling of planets and suns into space to the creation of such an absurd thing as a motion picture exhibitor—created artistically blind.

There must be solidarity in the motion picture art-industry. How could screen writers conscientiously continue to function if it can be proven that motion picture stars are mostly "creatures of celluloid"? Can one write for those one does not believe in? Art demands sincerity, even if the marketing and exhibition of motion pictures does not. Motion picture stars grow artistically and intellectually through enacting roles of depth and subtlety in intelligently conceived photoplays.

Mr. Johnston may believe that a defense of the acting fraternity by the editor of a magazine of interest to screen writers is hardly appropriate. But to let Mr. Johnston's statements go unchallenged would be to reduce the writing of photoplays for motion picture stars to an absurdity.

Mr. Johnston employs the grand gesture most futilely in discussing the "magic" destruction of stars. The career of a star or a bootblack or a trade paper editor or the editor of the PHOTODRAMTIST is susceptible of sudden destruction—just as is one's life proper. Destiny is eternally capricious.

Screen writers, actors, directors and cinematographers will continue to live colorfully and interestingly, despite Brother Johnston's warnings. Yes, they will be somewhat lax; rigidity produces Puritans, arch-enemies of Art—next to the motion picture exhibitors. Artistic folk will continue to "take no thought for the morrow," will remain generous and easy-going and tolerant, failing to conserve their finances—occasionally functioning at benefits for fellow artists—or outsiders!

Let us hope that never again will anyone have the presumption to hold the actor up to scorn before motion picture exhibitors and exchange men—those sluggish sailors on the stagnant streams of commerce. And let all commercial-ites know this:

When the most inconsequential actor's earthly career closes, he leaves at least a faint trace of beauty on Life's horizon, as a ship passing forever from sight leaves fading figures of smoke suspended beneath luminous clouds.

For actors—real actors—do not take themselves seriously. Unlike moralizing editors, they do not mistake their shrill pipings for the music of the spheres.

When Pavements are "Greasy"—

When the pavement is slick as waxed hardwood—as it will be many a day out of the next four rainy months—look out for the dangers of skidding!

Weed chains keep your car going straight ahead—SAFELY. And every motorist needs them during the rainy weather. We repair Weed chains or accept used chains in part payment for new ones.

LETTERS OF A SELF-MADE CAMERAMAN TO HIS NEPHEW

By John Leezer

Glen Center Ranch,
Burbank, Calif.

My dear Nephew:

Your ever so welcome letter at hand and contents absorbed. Me and you both so far as what you say about How to be Decent Though in Pictures. I suppose a good many folks think that none of us are decent. In the face of circumstances we will have to admit that some of us have been rather careless about hitting the straight and narrow. So careless, in fact, that from a distance it looks as if we were all more or less unsymmetrical. When I found a flea on one of those pups you saw the other day, I right away suspicioned the whole bunch. I don't mean to infer that there are any fleas in our business, but there must be some kind of a germ bug at large. Maybe it's one of those with a dollar mark on him.

We make believe so much, and some of us are such good actors that I reckon we forget we're not taking direction, and go ahead and crab the scene. Anybody can see how a bird playing a he-vamp for several consecutive pictures just naturally becomes one of them things. And there comes a time when he can't hear the camera, but pulls a scene just the same, and the next day there's a Censorship Board somewhere where there wasn't one before. Believe me, Boy, if I had anything to do with the directing of pictures there wouldn't be any he vamps or anything that I didn't want the kids to see, and as you know, your Aunt and I are pretty particular about such things. Putting in "rough stuff" because it is true to nature is the "bunk." A chicken is provided with a bunch of feathers, but when we are going to eat him we dispense with the feathers.

Every day or so somebody gets a ride at the expense of the city, and registers at the municipal hotel as a motion picture actor or -ess, as the case may be. The sooner this habit is overcome the quicker. I say, give everybody actually making a living—(no, that won't do)—everybody actually working in pictures a tag of identification, then the police court reporters won't have so much to say about our personnel. Any time the traffic laws or laws of decency are disregarded, take up the tag; revoke the license for all time.

A party once volunteered the information that where there's smoke there's fire. Figuratively speaking, there is quite a little smoke arising from the Movie camp right now, and I figure it's up to us who didn't start the fire to put it out before the fire buggies arrive. Again, figuratively speaking, the fire department I have alluded to is made up of censors, and they have got just enough sense to not only put out the fire, but to put the business out, too. We wouldn't even collect the insurance. When we have a real fire in a cutting room or laboratory, we don't go over to the barber shop to get a shave before trying to put it out. The combustibles in our business are "reel" combustibles, and we always try to get there before we can. The alarm is already turned in, so let's go.

With best wishes, will close for this time. Write again soon,

YOUR UNCLE DUDLEY.

Marjorie Daw, Winter Hall and Doris Dawn have been selected for the supporting cast of "Barry Gordon," Herbert Rawlinson's next starring vehicle.

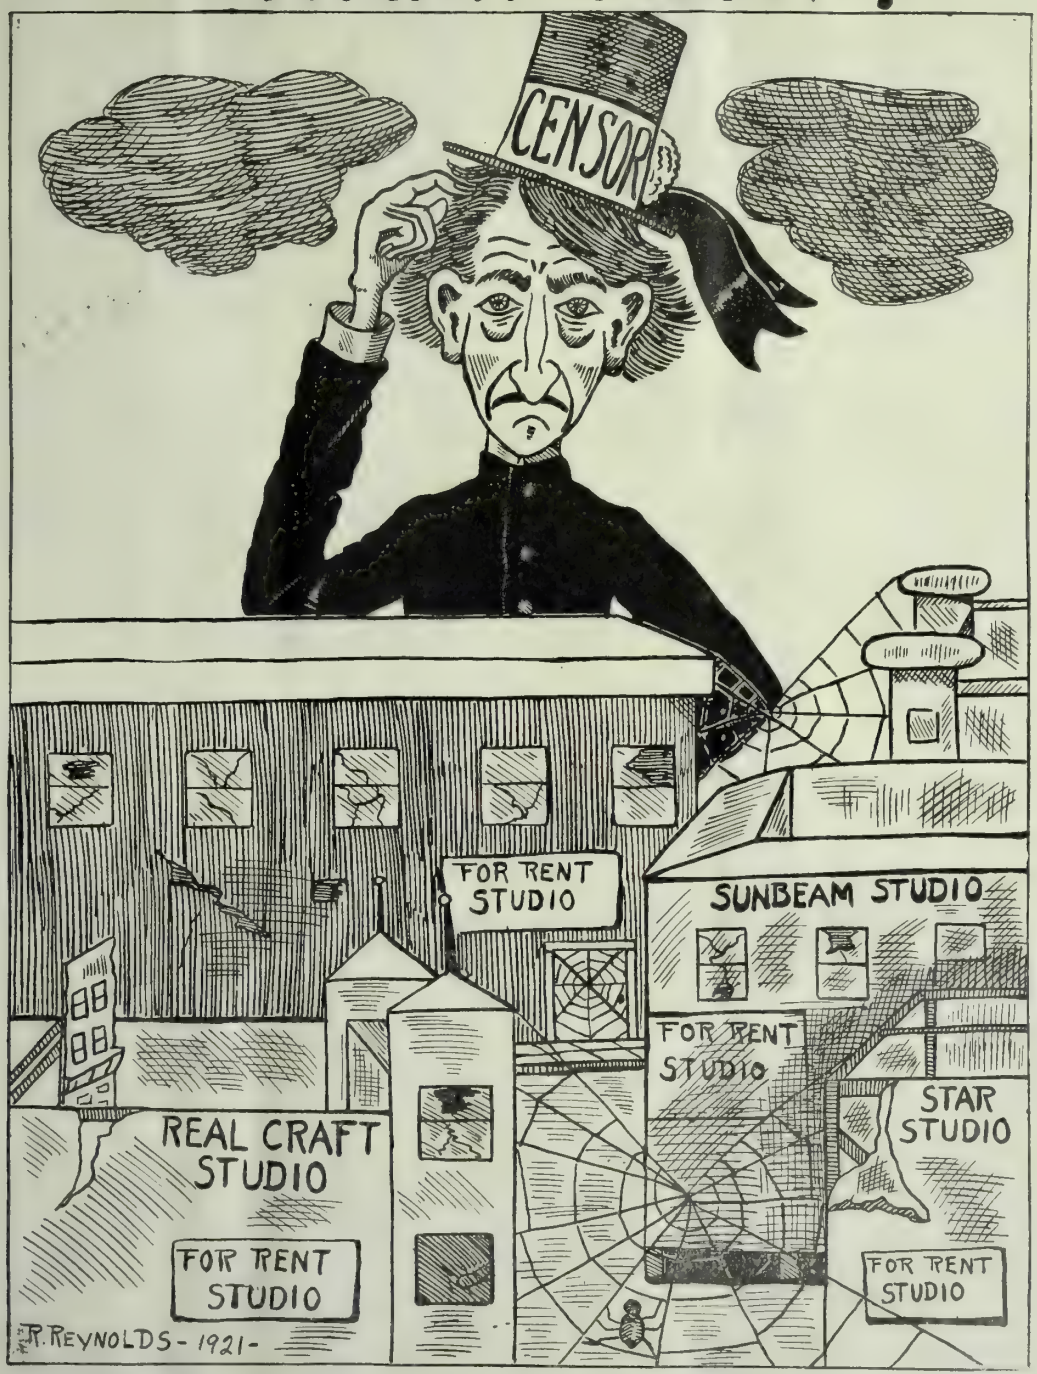
Those in the supporting cast of "A Sailor-Made Man," Harold Lloyd's recently completed comedy are Noah Young, Mark Jones, Charles Stevenson, William Gillespie, Wallie Howe and Gaylord Lloyd.

WHAT NEXT?



Business has been bad. Do we want it to be worse? The eyes of the world are upon the development of the censorship question in Los Angeles. Are we going to allow a precedent to be here established that if used as a pattern will paralyze our art and wreck our business?

This week settles the controversy in the City Council. Get together with the protestors!

Vol. IV. SATURDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1921 No. 27

Who Will Reach the Actor?

It is the time, as it never has previously been the time for the final explosion of the age-old tradition which holds that, politically or any other way, the theatrical profession cannot be organized. This is because the Censorship and Blue Law Advocates, who are themselves banked threateningly together against us, are looking for an opportunity to strike when our interests are most scattered and our resistence is resultantly at lowest ebb.

Some months ago we felt that we had cause to indulge in much elation over the formation of the Affiliated Picture Interests, an association including in its membership a representative of each organization already existing in the motion picture industry, and dedicated to the opposition of all legislation detrimental to the proper progression of the cinema.

Certainly it was a material step toward the achievement of a political conscience, but as frequently comes to pass in the case of such undertakings, it has not proven vital or even sympathetic to the industry generally, and the actor particularly. Of the several reasons for this fact we find ourselves concerned primarily with only one, which is, that speaking individually the professional's support has not yet been invited in a manner convincing to him, so that while he has, in all probability, favored many of the projects and approved some of the accomplishments of the Affiliated Interests, still a knowledge of that body's attitude is far from being in any way essential to his immediate happiness. Therefore, the actor, the mediocre actor, yes and the extra man, whose valuable numbers must be taken account of by those expecting to attain for the picture business anything like artistic independence from the blue-complexioned gloom spreaders who, given the opportunity, would quickly eliminate us, has not yet been fired with the desire to align himself with his kind for the final safeguarding of, if not his art, then his bread and butter.

This is the man who should have the deplorable conditions of today pointed out to him as they affect his personal comfort and the comforts of his friends. He should be registered immediately that he can have no excuse or reason for not using the power allotted him as a United States citizen for the great good of his industry. When the Affiliated Picture Interests or any other association with an intelligent outlook reaches these lesser or least members of the motion picture industry, then it will have really shown something to be accomplished of which we are now in dire need. The subject will well bear our concentrated consideration.

"Gypsy Blood," a German made production, the work of Ernst Lubisch and Pola Negri, has a Los Angeles showing at Tally's Theatre, commencing October 16th.

Since noting the announcement we have wondered whether this fact were generally known. Or do our viewpoints change as rapidly and our enthusiasm die as quickly and as futilely as any others'? Who can say?

Overtime

Some of our companies are forgetting, apparently, their liability to prosecution for working women over eight hours a day and their allotted time per week. It would almost seem that we have enough with which to contend as it is, but human nature, even when manifested through the machinery of a corporation, enjoys to create difficulties for itself. In any event the overtime policy is its own worst enemy in California, and the studios aren't overly popular in some of our courts. What about it?

Martin Johnson's Jungle Picture Attracts

Unusually keen exhibitor interest is said to have been aroused by Martin Johnson's "Jungle Adventures," the initial production of the Exceptional Pictures Corporation, which recently played a pre-release engagement at the Capitol Theatre, New York City, receiving the praise of metropolitan critics, including daily newspapers, weekly newspapers and the trade press.

Telegrams and letters from exhibitors in every section of the United States are said to have been received at the offices of Exceptional Pictures requesting information regarding this unusual feature production and expressing the desire to book it at an early date.

It is known that several of the largest national distributors are in consultation with Alexander Beyfuss, vice-president and general manager of Exceptional Pictures Corporation, at the present time, with the object of securing "Jungle Adventures" for release.—Ex. Trade Review.

Current Reviews

"THE MIDNIGHT BELL"

Kinema

As a follow-up of "Scrap Iron," Charlie Ray's first personally directed starring vehicle for First National, his latest release, "The Midnight Bell," is sadly lacking in several respects. To begin with, depending as he does upon the "loudest" and most inconsistent of melodramatic "hokum" for the heavy element in his plot, Charles Hoyt, the original's author, eliminates all possibility of advantageously incorporating into his play the character development, the human interest angle, or the simple theme, all of which have done so much to make Ray films "live" more persistently in the public's mind than, perhaps, have those of any other male star. Furthermore, his melodrama is not "gotten away with," for never once even throughout some mighty well handled suspense does the audience lose sight of the ridiculousness of the story. It finds strenuous comedy where comedy is not meant to lurk and therefore it is not convinced. One rarely takes seriously that which has ever been seen in the light of burlesque and while "The Midnight Bell," as scenarized by Richard Andres, was scarcely intended as a weighty celluloid drama, neither was it, we think, expected to be absurd. That it is just that is largely the responsibility of the five heavies, who stalk obviously about an exceedingly "young" village indulging in menacing "mugging" and communicating their dastardly deeds to one another a la the deaf and "dumbers" code. Quite naturally it would be a mere nothing for such unusual individuals, for the sake of gaining a secluded rendezvous, to convince an entire town that what appears to be its only church is inhabited by a brigade of "spooks." This they do and more, most of which is too absurd to consider. Almost it is reminiscent of the serial thrillers.

"The Midnight Bell" also seems to have been given a more careless production than is the case with most Ray films including the last, which we mentioned above. For example there are three or four instances in which some unusually effective comedy business is almost entirely lost because of the incompetency of the "bit" players to whom it is intrusted. It is inexcusable that their work should ever have been passed upon at a time when real performers are obtainable for every type of thing. The photography and cutting are both unnecessarily uneven.

Charlie himself is of course Charlie, whom the fan world would accept under a much greater handicap than is Martin Tripp, which personage (a member, by the way, of that large class so picturesquely labeled "born salesmen"), is an odd mixture of the dauntless stage hero and the diffident, much-loved clodhopper. The star's pantomine contains all of its old charm, however, a thing which will of itself "pack 'em in."

Doris Pawn, while not particularly sympathetic in the leading feminine role, Annie Grey, attends to it that perfect satisfaction accompanies her action through to the end.

If it were not a crime that Donald MacDonald's superior ability should be squandered upon Stephen Laberee, the nonsensical heavies' chief, it would be a week's laugh in itself to observe his marked dignity dashing about on petty errands, letting himself in and out of cellar windows, and crawling through dirty underground passages on his hands and knees. It is singular that almost every actor of his type has at one time or another had some such thing wished on him.

Van Dyke Brooks is exceptionally good as Abner Grey, Anne's guileless old father, while Clyde McCoy, Jess Herring, S. J. Bingham and Burt Offord get more or less in one another's way as the remaining spook-villains who find a remarkable amount to occupy their talents in a one business block community.

Laura La Plant

On the whole we should have better stuff than this from our real artists and their organizations.

"THE CASE OF BECKY"

Grauman's

We may honestly state that Realart's production, "The Case of Becky," is by far the most enjoyable Constance Binney starring picture which we have ever witnessed and it is furthermore considerably above its company's standard in entertainment value. Based upon the Edward Locke stage play by the same name, the photoplay deals with dual personalities as affected by hypnotism and while there are moments when its theory is not overly convincing, it, nevertheless, rivets the attention from start to finish. The direction by Chester Franklin is very good and the picture would be otherwise irreproachable from a technical standpoint were it not for a very obvious painted drop which contributes a stary moon and many stars to several exteriors.

As Dorothy Stone, a harmless young girl, who, through the hypnotism of her stepfather, becomes all that is evil in his nature expressing it always as the personality Becky, Constance Binney does her most interesting work. Particularly good is her characterization of the restless, contrary Becky who is,in fact, a revelation of what this actress might be capable provided with real opportunities.

Glenn Hunter, a youngster with a wonderfully appealing face, shows advantageously in the juvenile, just a country boy who loves Dorothy stubbornly throughout her vagaries.

Montague Love in an exaggerated heavy is really quite shiverishly delightful. He plays with unusual abandon, Balamzo, a hypnotist. Love is excellent in the rather strained part.

Dr. Emerson is a capably handled sympathetic touch in the hands of Frank McCormick, while Jane Jeffrey completes the cast which interpretes this J. Clarkson Miller scenario.

"QUO VADIS"

Clune's

F. B. Warren is releasing at this time a revival of George Kleine's Italian production of "Quo Vadis," by Henry Sienkiewicz. It's improvement over the original "Quo Vadis" as presented on the screen, lies mostly in its Doty Hobart titling and Warren Newcombe art titles. Otherwise it has suffered or enjoyed little change as we remember it through the eight years which have elapsed since its first showings.

As all those who are familiar with the subject will remember, the story treats of the struggles of the Christians under the bestial Nero, and through it all runs a love story, which, despite its desperate opposition will, we fear, occur to the 1921 audience as exceedingly commonplace. Also the ability of twenty lions to devour five times as many human beings in fifteen minutes without leaving so much as a bone behind, will possibly be questioned in a day when animal thrillers are a bit passe.

A very clever piece of work is offered by the actor, who plays Chilo the beggar, and several of the male characters have agreeable poise, but the women are hopeless and few will admit the suitability of the portrayer of Nero to his role. Otherwise the cast is inconsiderable.

While some of the massive sets gain something of an effect, the painted interiors make a bad impression.

The photography is more than unsatisfactory. At that, this revival will more than pay for itself, the more, perhaps, because the inattentive public will not realize in a majority of cases that it is not a first run

"BEYOND"

Tally's

William D. Taylor's film production of Henry Arthur Jones' story, "The Lifted Veil," is now released by Paramount under the title, "Beyond." It is a fictionized treatment of the return to earth of the spirits of those who have departed this plane and includes the rather old situation in which a missing wife believed to be dead returns to find that she has been replaced in her husband's life by another. Taken by and large, it is an entertaining photodrama despite its lack of anything like unto a new angle. Julia Crawford Ivers' scenario and Taylor's direction are largely responsible for this fact. The camera work by James C. Van Trees is more satisfactory by far than is the print which we saw at Tally's.

Ethel Clayton, this production's star, interprets Avis Langley, the wife who is divided in her duties, with all of the earnestness of purpose and grace which have so long set her portrayals out. She has unusual sincertity.

In the leading masculine role, Geoffrey Southerne, Charles Meredith is hardly well cast, for it is impossible to imagine in his always apparent youth, the dignity or mature tragedy that belongs to Avis' husband.

Winifred Kingston as the piquant Viva Newmarch, utilizes to the fullest extent her charming personality, while Earl Schenk proves his suitability to characters in Alec Langley, Avis' drink victimized brother.

Lillian Rich, Fontaine La Rue, Charles French, Spottiswoode Aitken and Herbert Fortier are all excellent in the remaining roles.

The Screen Writers' Forum

—Conducted by Ted Le Berthon
Editor of The Photodramatist

I have often wondered as to what classes of people were best adapted for screen writing, aside from those few who have always been identified with creative writing—who started out as fictionists.

There are, of course, the newspaper reporters; their varied and rich experiences should develop in them dramatic insight and creative imagination, as well as endow them with a wealth of story material. Criminal lawyers: they should make excellent screen writers; they are indeed father confessors, repositories of the secrets and motives of thousands. Every case in court has something of the drama of love and death involved; what an opportunity the criminal lawyer has for a study of motivation when a client lays the cards on the table! He should know much of greed, and vanity, and hate—and should know of love and sacrifice. When he plays these cards against those of the prosecutor in the court-room, what suspense, what intrigue, what drama! Here indeed is a kingdom of themes and plots and characterizations.

Doctors, priests, preachers: all have their intimate experiences with life. All women have—especially pretty women and more especially beautiful women; for theirs is indeed a battle of wits, inducing a knowledge of human motivation. They have, as mere flappers, as sweethearts, as wives, as mothers—many colorful experiences beyond their homely sisters. Their lives are dramas or tragedies, and who is better fitted to express these dramas via the screen than themselves?

However, I have come to the conclusion that the motion picture actor or actress is qualified beyond any other class or group of people to write screen stories. Why? Well, to begin with, the actor is right on the ground; he is daily interpreting characters in protoplays; he is part and parcel of the drama.

Most of all, however, the actor has a keen sense of dramatic values; he knows the sort of stuff that makes the best "acting" material, the sort of characterizations players can make the most of; he knows the situations and crises the players can rise to highest histrionic heights in.

The actor has the "inside" or intimate touch. He knows the modus operandi of transferring the written scenario to the screen. Furthermore, he knows studio policies, knows that certain studios are in the market for only certain types of stories—to fit certain stars perhaps, or in accordance with a basic plan of activity.

Through enacting varied roles, the actor or actress learns much of the customs, traditions, and viewpoints of numerous nations and peoples. Traits, characteristics, temperaments: all are familiar to the player of some experience. Local color is another possession of the observant actor.

All stage or screen folks live fairly interesting lives; their vicissitudes are sometimes quite out of the ordinary. Most of them have bumped up against and rubbed shoulders with the economic problem—even to the extent of foregoing meals. All of them have suffered as well as portrayed the sufferings of others.

Actors and actresses of scope, who are rich in imagination—their emotional natures are stimulated far beyond those of other people—should write excellent, salable scenarios. From the stars to the "extra" folk, all have some spare time; why not employ it?

There is scarely an actor or actress in Picturedom who is not somehow and somewhat discontented with the roles he or she is called upon to enact. Almost every one has some "ideal" story tucked up his sleeve—some story with wonderful acting possibilities, some life dream that needs expression.

Vesey O'Davoran

The players themselves are conversant with types, and with other players who can play them; they can suggest other actors and actresses whom they believe ideally suited to the characterizations.

Few actors and actresses are not yarn spinners. Some of the most successful Broadway plays of the past two seasons have been written by stage players. I've been on too many studio "lots" and "sets" not to know at first hand that screen players are natural story-tellers—and vivid story-tellers.

A NEED

The world is ever seeking new equations; whether things progress, retrogress, or stand still is a much mooted problem—but new balances, new equations are ever the order of things.

I have recently had a vague hunch that perhaps what is wrong with the Movies is the presence within its ranks of people who, while apparently opposed to censorship and things Dr. Brieglieb and others stand for, are actually of the same essence. Therefore, when show-downs come, they wilt before such "divines." And why is this? Probably because they are in accord "way down deep" with what these reformers stand for in most things—therefore what little force they bring to bear on the points of difference is largely neutralized.

The battleground right along has been in the realm of morality and immorality. On these grounds the advocates of censorship have all the advantage, because a "holy" man sees almost anything beyond his horizon as "immoral." Furthermore, he has authority on his side. He has Bibles and commentaries to quote from, which he will interpret as suits his purpose.

Frankly, all ideas of morality and immorality are arbitrary, and there is no "solid" or sound ground for discussion. Any such ideal as tolerance springs from a recognition of the unmoral, the beyond-moral plane of existence and thought. What the movies need is an infiltration of Paganism, in the interests of vigor, imagination, and humor. Apostles of the unmoral are not concerned with either pandering to sex instincts or to removing sex; they are concerned with faithfulness in the portrayal of episodes and incidents from life—in correct psychology, in the exact tracing and placing of reactions, motives, impulses.

There can be no tolerance where there is a monopolization of the God-idea, where a man's highest glory is conceived to lie in his ability to convert other men to his modus of thinking. For instance, although only thirty-six per cent of the population of the United States are registered as church members, the chronic church-goer considers the man without as highly misguided—in some instances as slated for hell-fire. Censorship is an outcropping of this spirit.

I do not mean to infer that the motion pictures should be Paganized, although I believe the Pagan influence would be an artistic and aesthetic influence; too many people attend the motion picture theatres whose tastes are on a different plane. But I believe the use of such words as moral and immoral should be taken with a grain of salt—for the sake of tolerance.

Within the ranks of the motion pictures, a few non-conforming spirits should arise and transfer the issue to another battleground, or make a new issue, along the following lines:

Motion picture people do not advocate the closing of churches or censoring of sermons; many of them attend churches, and most of those who do not would not rob those who do of any solace or pleasure thus derived. In fact, the motion picture people leave the churches and church-members to work out their own salvations, and ask in return the same courtesy.

I would never vote to abolish churches or censor sermons. What is congenial to me may be very uncongenial to others. I simply do not feel the need of a church; others do—and are entitled, in all tolerance, to the fulfillment of this need. Nothing in itself is either moral or immoral, sublime or ridiculous. Religious dogmas and practices which strike me as being poppy-cock are exalting and solacing to others. Is it not the same with motion picture plays? What one thinks excellent, another considers trashy? Who's right?

I thought "The Miracle Man" the greatest photoplay I'd ever seen; I still think so. But a local editor assured me it was the most maudlin, nonsensical thing he'd ever seen. Again, Quien sabe?

Frank Thorwald and William Marion are included in the cast of "Wards of the North," Frank Mayo's current picture for Universal.

Katherine McGuire, Lydia Knott and Harriet Laurel are cast in "Sandman," starring Gladys Walton, under the direction of Dallas Fitzgerald.

Grace Morse, formerly a member of the Morosco Stock company has been selected by Director Harry Beaumont, for an important role in his newest Metro production, "Seeing's Believing," in which Viola Dana enacts the stellar role.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENTS

Editor Camera:

I read with considerable interest and complete accord your review of the "Affairs of Anatol," the crowning effort of the High Priest of Decadence.

It is exactly such pictures as this, that go so far to disprove the contention of the Producers that they are perfectly competent to censor their own productions.

The entertainment contained in this picture is such as to appeal most forcibly to the prurient minded. It has not the subtle suggestiveness of the Schnitzler play (for be it understood, subtlety has no part in the mental equipment of Miss McPherson) but runs rather to frank indecency. This director can be relied upon to emphasize to the full, all the points given him by the continuity writer.

The Hypnotic scene, inoffensive enough in itself, is made sure fire by the lavish display of the Swanson legs, even to a tantalizing glimpse of an intimate garment beneath the skirt.

To those, who "read between the lines," this display, seemingly so spontaneous, at once stands forth as a deliberate and studied appeal to the grosser senses.

One cannot help being amused at the fatuous attempt to add Box Office value to an offering of such an exotic nature, by giving it an American setting.

At the present moment, as ever, we have the Bogie of Censorship with us. We have just undergone an inspection by the National Board, and are now confronted with the threat of local censorship. Therefore, it behooves the producers so to order their product as to refute all the arguments advanced by the proponents of Censorship.

To pursue an unsavory subject still further—

In the course of my usual work, I was called upon to read "The Sheik," by E. M. Hull, with a view as to its availability for production.

Needless to say, it was rejected as being outside the pale of common decency.

Yet the same company, which is responsible for the "Anatol" picture, has made a film of this book, which outside of its gross sensuality and sensationalism, has nothing to recommend it.

The management has issued a naive statement to the effect that "The franker scenes are handled with such delicacy that they contain no offense." Can you beat this?

Do the producers think that the people take only their eyes to the theatre and leave their minds at home? Is contamination possible through the eyes alone?

How is it possible to treat with delicacy scenes which convey such an underlying idea?

Here we have a woman subjected to the ultimate of degradation which she can suffer at the hands of a man, a degradation, which by its repetition finally awakens in her an answering lust, which the misguided author dignifies by the name of love. There is an inartistic attempt to palliate the actions of this unspeakable brute, and draw some measure of sympathy to him, by attributing them to the former ill-treatment of his mother by an Englishman, which impels him to revenge her on all the members of the race. Being a man, he naturally chooses women for the objects of that revenge. Selah.

With the diabolical skill, with which the guiding spirit of this company regulates all details which may affect the box office, an actor, who is distinguished for his sex appeal, rather than for his histrionic ability, has been chosen to impersonate the leading role.

We have recently been treated to an able defense of the Moving Picture Business, from the pen of William de Mille, the actual genius of the family, but a picture like the Sheik promises to be, following on the heels of "The Affairs of Anatol," will do a great deal to stultify it.

Yours for decent pictures,

—F. E. P.

CURRENT COMMENT

From Scenario Bulletin-Digest

The "better films movement," now agitating the minds of producers all over the country, and fast becoming a matter of public interest as well, is one that will never be settled until it is settled right.

The moving picture has become a part of the life of the people—of all the people; and this fact throws a great responsibility upon producers and those who place the pictures before the public; a responsibility—one is glad to note—that bids fair to be kept persistently before them.

Preachers, reformers, and all those whose chief interest in amusements lies in the consideration of their effort upon public morals, the sanctities of the home, and the proper development of childhood—stand pledged to persist in demanding cleaner programs in the play-houses.

Meanwhile—it is vain for producers or exploiters to squirm or bellow protests against a criticism that is bound to search them out even more efficiently, whether by censorship or otherwise.

It is not to be expected in these days that any one shall be permitted to conduct a business so vital to the interests of society, after the manner of a free lance—responsible to nobody, and in defiance of every claim except that of the box-office.

In passing, one may venture the opinion that as the pictures are proving their power as money getters, the box-office looms larger and ever larger before the eyes of theatre owners, and the poor, who learned to love the picture show in the days when admission was cheap goes unheeded; it now needs but a little more than the traffic will bear to sweep away at least half of present audiences and make the moving picture no longer available to all the people.

It seems a pity that overweening greed—that blackest blot upon the character of the American business man—should wipe out the best possibilities of this business, too; especially when one calls to mind the artistic pride and delight with which the first pictures were shown to amazed and delighted audiences for five and ten cents a ticket.

As to the wisdom or unwisdom of depicting evil on the screen, or the stage, it is perhaps well to remember that from time immemorial it has been claimed that the proper office of these entertainments is to "hold the mirror up to nature"; to so depict human life in all its phases that men may see themselves as others see them," and this is still the ideal toward which every writer of plays or scenarios, and every ambitious actor labors. No higher praise can be given to any of these than to say that the picture he presents is "true to life."

Now it cannot be denied that evil forces do abound in society, and play a large part in all human activities; also under present conditions no merest child can be after babyhood, kept in ignorance of these facts .

Too many tongues are exploiting or condemning—too many fingers are pointing out concrete cases—and how can life be depicted without showing the evils which everybody is deploring aloud, or openly defending, also —why spend so much time and effort in reviling the reflection, as long as the reality exists? Does not the existence of the one logically call for the other? Are we not shooting wide of the mark, and wasting a great deal of powder when we rail at the reflection instead of giving all our energies to destroying the thing reflected?

When my lady, after careful preparation for a street appearance, gives a passing glance at her mirror before sallying forth and discovers an impertinent smut upon her cheek, it does not enter her mind to correct the situation by smashing the mirror. On the contrary it seems sufficient to her—to wash her face.

If we—in like manner—will give more attention to cleansing society of its smuts and sores, we shall not fail to note that every improvement is faithfully registered on the screen and on the stage; for those have really no other source than the passing show of daily life from which to draw their material. Intelligent purveyors of fiction in these days, show by their work that they know life to be far greater and more interesting than any thing the brain of man can invent—if indeed it cannot invent anything that has not already appeared in real life.

In this matter, the trouble seems to be that in his eagerness to be sensational—to thrill his audience—and intensify the interest—box-office again—the producer some times fails to keep his mirror clean, but smears it with a glamour of false success and spurious pleasure, in a manner calculated to fascinate and mislead the immature mind of youth—and even the middle age that has not learned to think; here again it is only necessary to be "true to life"—to depict the thing as it is; just as necessary from an artistic, as from a moral point of view; to use the showing of evil as the painter uses the shadow, to throw up the lights in his picture; as the musical composer uses discord to render his harmonies more impressive. In the arts, shadow is always dark and discord can never be mistaken for harmony.

Let the scenario writer apply the same fidelity of treatment to his art and show evil as it is—ugly, revolting, destructive of good in human life—and he need have no fear of the moral effect of his work; for truth never injured the most ignorant, nor did it ever lead the feeblest mind astray.

The reformer and the preacher may banish the fear that truth can ever be made a power for evil, or can ever be less than the foundation of all good. So long as two and two make four all over the Universe and can never be juggled to make three or five—so long will truth be the one invincible power for good, out of which man can no more bring evil to pass, than he can gather grapes off thorns or figs off thistles.

Could it ever come to be otherwise—then must we know God himself to be a liar, and unworthy of our trust.

IN "THE INTIMATE STRANGERS"

Glenn Hunter, who played "Bobby" in Booth Tarkington's comedy, "Clarence," has been engaged to enact the juvenile role in a new Tarkington comedy entitled, "The Intimate Strangers," in which Billie Burke will be starred. The play will be produced under the management of Erlanger, Dillingham and Ziegfeld.

Mr. Hunter recently completed work at the Talmadge studio with Norma Talmadge in "Smilin Through."

"BITS OF LIFE" TO RECEIVE DEBUT

"Bits of Life," Marshall Neilan's episodic production, will receive its national debut presently at the Capitol, in New York City.

This is the second First National picture appearing at the Capitol, the other being "Passion," starring Pola Negri.

Dwight Cleveland, assistant to Supervising Director Elmer Harris, is ill at his home.

Percy Challenger is playing the title role in "Old Dynamite," under the direction of Robert Hill at the "U."

Hayward Mack, Harold Miller and Hallam Cooley are playing in support of Gladys Walton in her latest photoplay for Universal, entitled "Sandman."

MR. EXHIBITOR—
Don't Be a Chinese Woman!

(An open letter from the producers of "The Girl From God's Country" to the Exhibitors.)

In China the women cramp their feet until they become useless stumps. They think this beautiful! In this country the film men cut and distort their productions out of all semblance to their original breadth and purpose. They think this Good Business!

Both are serving false gods. You cannot measure Beauty by inches nor Art by footage.

A War Profiteer once bought a Masterpiece. When he came to hang it he found the painting too long for the alloted space upon his wall. So he cut two feet from each end! It meant nothing to this vandal that the artist's creation, child of his genius, was thus mutilated.

The same thing happens daily in the M. P. business. So-called "Film Editors" sit in projection rooms and dictate the cutting and changing of scenes and titles. The underlying motives of the scenes they discard, and their relationship to the plot means nothing to these scissor fiends. They think in terms of "feet"—not Art. The ribbon counters teem with just such yard-stick manipulators.

And the result? The finely woven pattern of the writer's imagining and the director's weaving is ruthlessly slashed and left, raw-edged; the thread of continuity hopelessly broken.

How often do the lip-readers in your theater note that the characters in the picture are not speaking the title given on the screen? "You will always be true?" the actor asks, with his lips and eyes. "How about a cold bottle and a warm bird?" is the caption flung in his teeth by Mr. Editor.

Producers, like painters, visualize their subject in its entirety. They don't put in scenes just to make footage any more than an artist muddies up his composition with extra trees. Both are striving for a perfect whole, and no outsider can add, or take away, one iota from their finished creation.

Not long ago the undersigned completed a picture in ten reels. To satisfy the "market" we cut it to eight. The lost two reels sacrificed much of the character development but left a snappy, fast-moving Melo-drama. The picture was shown to the critics in this eight-reel form, and everyone was satisfied. Recently this same picture was re-cut and "edited," without the knowledge or consent of its producers, to seven reels. The result is a stupid, meaningless affair that is a disgrace to its author, director, star, exchange and exhibitor. The excuse is that the Exhibitors want the picture in seven reels.

Don't Be Chinese Women!

Don't cripple that picture! Give it its extra 14 minutes! Let your patrons see the picture we created, not the earless, tailless, footless, lopsided freak the exchanges are handing out! Book "The Girl From God's Country" in its original eight-reel form . . . . . and give it a chance!

Will We Stand a Schedule?

Never in the history of the motion picture industry, has there existed any sort of an inter-studio basis for the conduct of business relating to the free lance actor, such as a schedule for overtime, the payment of salaries, etc., to say nothing of the hundred and one things pertaining to the management of the always-present, ever-necessary extra man. Perhaps the lack of generally observed regulations to cover these problems has as yet only been felt to any extent by those performers whom it has discommoded and who, let it be said have never, in themselves been noticed to cut a particularly large figure in the consideration of those who arrange the destinies of our studios.

But in view of the present state of increased activity in the plants which produce the bulk of popular American entertainment it will be profitable for the management of those plants to establish a basis of treatment to save destructive dissatisfaction among their employees.

We are not suggesting any points which such a schedule should contain, but we are fully cognizant of its need as is the average picture man and woman who are certainly not unfair in demanding to know upon what they may depend. On the other hand, neither should controversies which bring about unnecessary trips to the Labor Commission resulting sometimes in unpleasant "calls" for the studios over things which arise through a state of disorganization, be risked by the producer. Several of the causes of these misunderstandings we mention below.

At some of our studios actors who work on weekly salaries are paid for a full week when their engagements have carried them only one or two days over into it; while other companies pro rate them for the extra time. Either scale might be acceptable but the existence of two occasions complication. Moreover, much difficulty has arisen over the fact that while most of the studios count six days as comprising the working week, there are those who insist upon including the seventh.

Then with regard to "bit" people, some casting departments hold that it is wise to "carry" them until their footage has been entirely shot. On the other hand they are often let out between work on the chance that they will be available when again needed.

The by-the-day man who works overtime is indeed in an uncertain situation. He may be in the habit of receiving a full check for additional hours of his labor only to find that the company now engaging him will stand but a half check over, or, worse yet, none at all, and if he has had no previous understanding with his employers (and what extra man bothers about such?) he may not resort to the law for aid.

The fact that a "day" man reports in answer to a call is the equivalent to a check at some cashier windows whether he is dismissed without working or not, but at others, money is only forthcoming if he has "made up." Again half checks are all that may be obtained, while very often the man who doesn't work, no matter how many hours have been lost for him is simply "unlucky." (The Labor Commissioner informs us that the exact amount of time wasted must be recompensed according to a state legislation.)

There is a very popular studio which pays its extra people off at the close of each day's work, but most of them have a certain day of the week upon which such interesting business is accomplished. No two have chosen the same one, however, so that if an individual works three days a week he is liable to have to put in another three collecting the money already earned, although California has a statute designating that all such money shall be paid seventy-two hours from the time that the day worker finishes his engagement.

Perhaps unfortunately, however, all legal regulations on these subjects are vague enough to be little considered. Nevertheless, we are inclined to think that this being Moving Picture business, it is a case for the agreement of studio heads who should remember that a little suitably applied intelligence often wins over both unjust domination on one hand and unreasonable aggressiveness on the other. Particularly is this situation one which fair minded headwork and co-operation alone can improve.

At It Again

At least one unauthorized individual is circulating among the studios collecting money for subscriptions to Camera! which he has seen fit to appropriate. Moreover, he has raised our local rate of $2.00 a year to $3.50, presumably for his personal benefit.

Camera readers are warned to be certain that they are placing their subscription money in the hands of responsible agents. These are: Grace Adair, Helen McKee, Mrs. Edward Reinach and staff members.

Current Reviews

"DOUBLING FOR ROMEO"

Miller's

Will Rogers' latest comedy, "Doubling for Romeo," by "Elmer Rice, Will Rogers and Will Shakespeare," contains valuable variations in its satire, which have not often been found in Goldyyn productions starring the famous humorist. This burlesque opens in a small western town, jumps to the California picture studios, then to the Verona of Shakespeare's vivid imagination only to end, of course, at the village parson's; but never does it let up the sprightly "kidding" with which Rogers opens his first subtitle. Three-fourths of these titles, by the way, are sure to be received uproariously due to their frank humor and clever sarcasm.

Clarence Badger's production makes the most of the points provided in Bernard McConville's scenario while pleasing photography, in some cases of more elaborate sets than have yet decorated this star's pictures, is the contribution of Marcel Le Picard. Rogers himself has never meant more to the picture profession than he does as Slim, alias Romeo Montague in this photoplay; for not only is he himself, well loved as few type actors are, as the former, but he is here permitted his first screen opportunity to display ability in the graceful kind of part that is Romeo. This he does delightfully in snatches between the ridiculous moments to which he submits the age adored lover and the result is highly entertaining.

An excellent type for Lulu, the romantic country maiden who possesses a Juliet soul, is Sylvia Breamer, who works very well indeed with the star, besides continually forming a charming picture.

William Orlamond as the "take off" on the modern film director is a huge laugh in himself, (his talent for burlesque is an individual art) while Jimmie Rogers as the sophisticated child celebrity, Jimmie Jones, is also enjoyable.

Perfect types are Raymond Hatton, Sydney Ainsworth, Al Hart, John Cossar, C. E. Thurston and Roland Rushton for their respective roles of Steve Woods (Paris), Pendleton (Mercutio), Big Alec (Tybalt), Foster (Capulet), Duffy Saunders (Benvolio) and the parson (Friar Lawrence). An hour's more profitable recreation than is "Doubling for Romeo" would be difficult to conjure.

"THREE WORD BRAND"

Grauman's

"Three Word Brand," starring himself, is presented by William S. Hart this week. It is a Will Reynolds story of twin brothers who although strangers to one another, unconsciously work in a manner to further each other's interests. The setting is characteristically Hart and therefore western. Picturesque scenery, excellently photographed by Joseph August, effective subtitles and good piece of Lambert Hillyer direction, in addition to a dozen thrills and real suspense, lend this picture much entertainment value faultlessly presented.

The big cowboy star enacts three roles, namely: Ben Trego, a pioneer who dies for the lives of his twin boys, and each of those sons grown or "Three Word Brand" and Governor Marsden. All three are superiorly handled, sympathetic characters, although the most romantic interest centers in the title role, another thrilling Bill Hart hero.

Jane Novak is suitably placed in the leading feminine position, Ethel Barton. She is always more than adequate in the quaint ladies of our frontier days.

Gordon Russell offers convincing opposition as Bull Yeates, while Colette Forbes, S. J. Bingham, Ivor McFadden, Herchell Mayall, George Pearce and Leo Willis all dispense interestingly the remaining roles.

The admirers of William S. will be perfectly satisfied with "Three Word Brand."

MARTHA McKAY

A charming young film actress whom the lure of the west has caused to desert the eastern studios.

"THE SON OF WALLINGFORD"

Kinema

Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester have made an admirable photoplay of their one hundred and fifth Wallingford story, entitled "The Son of Wallingford"; and Vitagraph has given it an unusually careful production. We have always held to the idea that in cases where it is at all possible, the author should be on the ground to supervise the screening of his play; in this instance the Chesters, entrusted with the entire direction of their story, have interpreted into the adaptation the spirit of the Wallingford yarns as no disinterested party could have done, were he ever so competent a director. Here is a popular story celluloided that can lose none of its attraction for those who already love it. Such accomplishments are infrequent if we are to judge by the complaints which pour in from fans who hold that their favorite fiction has been murdered by the ruthless scenarist. This one is, therefore, to be given extra credit.

J. Rufus Wallingford and "Blackie" Daw, the much followed "within-the-law" crooks, who formed the central figures in the well-remembered Cosmopolitan "Get-Rich-Quick" stories are incomparably interpreted in this photoplay by Wilfrid North and George Webb, who re-create the very atmosphere of the two, always so fascinating, with their roles. Particularly perfect is Webb's "Blackie," the most vivid portrayal in the production.

The title role, Jimmy Wallingford is filled, but not so well, by Tom Gallery, a juvenile who doesn't seem to have found himself. He lacks the spontaneity and animation which should be Jimmy's chief characteristic, but his lack of enthusiasm is wholly made up for by Antrim Short in the latter's refreshing, correctly handled work, "Toad" Jessup. Antrim takes scene after scene from Gallery with his personality and clever maneuvering.

Priscilla Bonner is happily established in Mary Curtiss, the extremely ingenue-ish leading lady in which she will please generally.

Lilie Leslie and Florence Hart are very well placed as Mrs. Blackie Daw and Mrs. Wallingford. Their characters have been set out as only the authors would have thought necessary and thereby a valuable atmospheric note is achieved which might easily have been lost in the skirmish.

Sydney D'Albrook is very much at home in the comedy heavy, Bertram Beegoode, son of a village Skinflint who is equally as well played by Van Dyke Brooke.

Martha Mattox and Andrew Arbuckle make a delightful set of parents for little Mary, while Margaret Cullington has several amusing scenes as Caroline Beegoode.

Bobby Mack and Walter Rodgers complete the cast save for Kathryn Sumner, Helen Harris, Janet Dawn, Alberta Vaughn, Duskal Stivers and Patricia McGee, who form the Shimmy Girls Revue, a stranded road show.

W. S. Smith, Jr., has turned out some good camera work on "The Son of Wallingford," which has been given an all around good technical production.

"THE ACE OF HEARTS"

California

An exagerated melodrama which is rendered convincing largely through several beautiful performances and the understanding direction of Wallace Worsley is Gouverneur Morris' "The Ace of Hearts," a current Goldwyn release. The story which deals with a group of men and one woman whose creed holds that the world can only be regenerated through the destruction of those individuals in it who represent evil, and the conversion through love of three members of that group to the idea that it is construction alone which ever counts for good, has undoubted fascination. Moreover, Ruth Wightman has so placed and treated the scenario's suspense that it is an invaluable element in the photodrama, but even such attractions did not save it from a half dozen unfortunate bursts of laughter at what apparently was intended for its most intense moment during our review. The "hokum" melodrama which was once "eaten alive," is, it seems, being considered as a thing to ridicule by the average American fan of today. Producers should awake to the fact that after many years of tragedy the world wants to laugh badly enough to indulge itself on ever so flimsy a pretext, and order their product accordingly.

Leatrice Joy has rarely been more strikingly placed than she is as Lilith, the staunchest supporter of a fundamentally warped cause until love shows her the light. In Lilith, Miss Joy combines an honest dignity and interesting intensity with an engaging result. She will go far in the human type of thing.

John Bowers enacts Forrest, the man whose marriage to Lilith also teaches him the better way, with the sincere ease which appeared in his first Goldwyn roles and has since set them out more and more.

The big sacrifice part in this picture is in the hands of Lon Chaney, who has perhaps accomplished more complicated work, but certainly no more vivid than is Farra-

The Screen Writers' Forum

—Conducted by Ted Le Berthon Editor of The Photodramatist

POOR DUCK!

A young screen writer has written me, complaining that his very first brain child, a youngster upon whom he had lavished years of parental affection, is today unrecognizable as his own loved mental offspring—after being put through a finishing school in Hollywood presided over by a certain cinema director. As a full-fledged photoplay, the story reflects the alien influence of professors of continuity, cutting, editing, sub-titling, close-upping, and interpolation.

Now, the screen writer in question is a poor logician, to say the least. No story will ever appear on the screen just as the writer visualized it. It's impossible, unthinkable. If one thousand painters were asked to read a chapter from a book, and to translate onto canvas a character or descriptive passage therefrom, we should have a thousand different pictures—none of which would be the picture the author of the book had visualized. A motion picture production in toto is a sequence of paintings.

A director will interpret a story to the author's perfect satisfaction when everyone is agreed on the interpretation of a Biblical passage, when the Los Angeles Times and the Appeal to Reason concur in their criticisms of a political speech, and porpoises walk down Broadway fin in wing with bumble bees.

THE PHOTOPOEM

In magazines it is quite customary to print poems as "fillers," which serve a number of purposes. The aesthetic tone of the magazine is elevated, its physical construction improved, and the ever-welcome element of variety introduced. Why not the "photopoem" on cinema theatre programs? The earlier Paramount-Post Scenics were sub-titled with quotations from the major poets, but that struck me as a cart-before-the-horse process. Why not take some of our peculiarly adaptable narrative poems and film story-scenes from them, using lines and stanzas from the poems as sub-titles? The sweet homeliness of Whitcomb Riley's "Old Sweetheart of Mine," the weirdness of Wilde's "Harlot's House," the passion of Byron's "Love on the Island" from "Don Juan," or the exalted beauty of Keats' "Eve of St. Agnes"—what photopoems they would make. Even the typical nature scenics could be improved through being based on such abstract poems as Shelley's "Clouds" or Keats' "To Autumn." What a flaming picture Edwin Arnold's "Grishma—the Season of Heat" would present, with its drama of night and day and elemental forces.

Contemporary minor poets could keep the wolf at a distance, if a market were created for their wares in Filmdom. Probably, in the last analysis, their poems would come closer to matching the average person's comprehensive powers than would the lofty and often involved, obscure verse of the masters.

A step in the direction of the photopoem are the scenics of the Post Pictures Corporation, notably "My Barefoot Boy," "A Bit Old Fashioned" and "In the Great North." It will pay any photodramatist interested in the possible development of the photopoem to see these scenics. We may be fronting a new horizon, and who knows but that we shall gradually distinguish—drifting toward us across the ocean of eternity—a barqueful of photopoets.

VANITY, O EPHEMERA!

One hears so much, from the lips of young screen writers, about stories being rejected by studios and agents that in truth are better than many of the stories produced and exhibited. What poppycock! It is practically impossible for any human to fairly judge any work of art he may evolve; it is far easier to see the note in the other chap's orb than the beam in thine own lamp. If one could possibly apply the same searching, ruthless criticism to one's own photoplay creation as one does to those which flicker across silver-sheets, things would assume a truer perspective. Can you be as merciless to yourself as to the other fellow? Judging by prevalent human standards, you cannot. We are as a race still blinded by our own shadows; still fettered by the illusion of separateness; still swerved by emotion rather than by reason—and most of our emotions are stirred up by considerations affecting our personal welfare and being. The best stories are, have been, and always will be, screened—or printed for that matter. Sometimes it so happens that a writer is born out of his Time, with a sense of values not in common with his fellow beings; artistically, his work may excel—but his theme or characters be unrecognizable to the stumbling, blundering humanity of the Age. Such souls will ever elicit the true student's sympathies, for some of them at least have become sensitive to a higher or subtler beauty—while, alas, their stories are as hieroglyphics to the crowd. But these souls are seldom the fretters, are seldom the disgruntled; they are not the ones who cry out that their stories are better than someone else's. No—that prerogative is usually monopolized by mediocrity, by the vain, the self-hypnotized.

KNOWING LIFE

We hear so much about the good screen writers "knowing life." Just who knows life? It it not really a question of knowing those aspects and elements of life that are most interesting to the greatest number? —that is, if popularity and monetary reward are the criteria of achievement. It seems to me that it is not the knowledge of the various underlying forces that govern human activity or the expansive knowledge of varied forms of living and being, but the exposition of phases of life which all would like to experience—phases idealized and magnified, rather than real. In fact—again within the creed of material gain—it is unwise to plumb life too deeply; strange, disturbing depths are apt to be sounded, complacency disturbed, illusions unveiled. The successful screen writer—from the commercial viewpoint—will be the one whose mental and spiritual development parallels the popular novelist's; one whose achievement will be upon the plane of the leading magazine writers and popular fictionists of the day, rather than in the realms of Flaubert, Balzac, Andreyev, Gorki, Dreiser, Conrad, Anatol France, et. al. The realist of the photodrama will come upon the scene when we have evolved the Little Theatre of the Screen.

GETTING ACUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

CHARLES AND RAYMOND DE BRIAC

The little De Briac twins, Charles and Raymond, who are seen on the cover this week, have been associated with the drama since the first hour of their five-year-old lives, for they were born in the Brooklyn Theatre, where their father, now with Belasco, was filling an engagement.

Their first picture appearance was under the direction of George Fitzmaurice in "Paying the Piper." Just a year ago Charles and Raymond came to the California studios with their uncle, Jean De Briac, and have since played in support of Gladys Walton in "High Heels," showing this week at the Superba, Lasky's "Don't Tell Everything," and C. AFFILIATED DOES NOT ENDORSE ETHICAL

(For your information, this is a copy of a letter sent to Members of the Affiliated Picture Interests):

Your attention is directed to the fact that the so-called "First Annual Exposition of the Motion Picture Industry" is a private enterprise of the "Ethical Motion Picture Society of America."

This enterprise has not been endorsed by the Affiliated Picture Interests, an organization comprising individuals and all associations connected with the production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures in California authorized to represent the industry in matters of common interest, under which head come fairs, expositions, entertainments, etc.

So far as we know the "Ethical Motion Picture Society" is therefore acting only for itself. It has made no satisfactory explanation concerning the objects, scope, and proposed use of profits of its proposed "motion picture exposition" to the board of directors of the Affiliated Picture Interests of California, and it therefore does not have the cooperation of the united factors of the motion picture industry.

AFFILIATED PICTURE INTERESTS.
By Order of the Board of Directors.
Attested by TED TALYOR,
Secretary.

LETTERS OF A SELF-MADE CAMERAMAN TO HIS NEPHEW

By John Leezer
Glen Cedar Ranch,
Burbank, Cal.

Dear Nephew:

Well, we are back to the farm and animals once more, and it seems mighty quiet and restful like. In these days of high living, safety last, transportation, deadly booze, censorship agitation and eighty scenes a day directors, a little semi-occasional getting back to nature and fundamentals does a lot of good. I think that maybe it's not being able to do this often enough that makes some of our actors and directors so all fired temperamental.

Anyhow an H2O cocktail from a hundred feet under ground, some of your aunt's fried chicken, and "Virginnia" biscuits and we feel like some of these boys claim they feel after they have robbed some poor monkey of his intestinal glands, whatever they may be. Speaking of glands I know of one or two cases where even the glands out of an elephant wouldn't bring back what they have lost through years of foolishness.

I suppose it's these glands in a monkey that makes him so lively. I am thinking of using an ultra speed camera on this Brazilian speciman I have so that he won't look like a series of streaks on the screen. His glands are sure safe so far as I am concerned because if I had 'em there's no director living that could keep up with me. The only thing that would slow us down would be a hot box on the camera. The monkey came near losing one of his bananna hooks yesterday. He likes to torment Oswald, the turtle. Oswald has a wicked jaw but the monkey didn't get wise to it until the occurence I am relating. He was reaching under Oswald's overcoat, trying to pull his head out when suddenly an awful shriek rent the air. It reminded me of the noise that the heroine made when the vilian grabbed her, way back in the 10-20-30 "meller drammer" days. I had the camera on it, because there is no such thing as a rehearsal with these critters, but after five or six turns with the crank there was nothing but dust, so I went to the rescue of the leading man. He was leading all right and had Oswald's head pulled out about a foot from his shell. As soon as I turned Oswald over on his back, the monk was free.

In this work I sometimes use a fourteen inch lens. Animals are like some amateur actors, they don't work as well when the camera is too close. By making an enclosure just outside the camera lines, with a suitable background and the side toward the camera open, we are able to hold them in one location tolerably well. The fox terrier pups are coming along nicely. I don't know whether I will give you the one you wanted or not. He seems to know better what is required than any of the others. A pup can be depended upon to do something interesting most any time, but especially just after a nap. The pup you wanted and Thomas Jefferson, a big Rhode Island Red rooster pull off some funny stunts. I am trying to get a young duck accustomed to harness and to pulling a wagon, but from all indications I'll have better luck in hitching him to a boat. Its all very interesting, however, and as I said in the beginning, it's diverting.

I'm sorry that cooperative picture didn't pan out well, but I am of the opinion it was made too cheap. It's possible, you know, to make them that way, and maybe the story wasn't any good either. Try it again anyhow.

Your aunt says she will make doughnuts Saturday so you had better turn the Henry F. in this direction about that time.

Yours as always,
UNCLE DUDLEY.

WITH NEW YORK METRO

Little Miriam Battista, who has just finished a picture with Norma Talmadge has been engaged by William Christy Cabanne for an important child part in a forthcoming production.

FLORENCE WALTON IN VAUDEVILLE

Florence Walton, the dancer, will be seen in vaudeville shortly in a new sketch.

Lou Tellegen has turned his attention to the staging of the Walton two-a-day vehicle.

DUKE FOR FILMS

The Duke of Manchester has been approached by agents of an American film concern to take the leading part in some of their forthcoming productions. It was reported last month that the Duke of Manchester was to leave for America and start upon a production for the screen in which he was to be starred.

CHAPLIN BUYS AIRPLANE

Charlie Chaplin placed with an airplane concern in Paris recently, an order for an aero-limousine of the latest type. It will bear as his crest and coat of arms a comical derby hat.

Edwin Justis Mayer, magazine writer, has been transferred to the Goldwyn Culver City Studios as title writer.

Herman Robbins has resigned his position as sales manager of the Fox organization and is succeeded by R. A. White.

SOAP BUBBLES FOR CLAUDIUS

When Wallace Worsley "shot" probably the most elaborate set in "The Octave of Claudius" Thursday evening, one of the screen's most novel effects in the way of a soap bubble enshrouded dance was a feature about which the press, present as the guests of J. A. Jackson and Jack Gault of the Goldwyn publicity department, was most enthusiastic. Goldwyn, while denying the statement that it is going in for extravagance, has some technical genuises of its own.

Silas E. Snyder has been appointed the new editor of the American Cinematographer.

Frank Dazey has been engaged by Myron Selznick as associate editor of the Selznick Scenario Department at Fort Lee, N. J.

Waterson Rothacker is in Chicago where he will spend a short time before starting for his California plant.

Charles E. Whitaker, motion picture director, died on board the Admiral Dewey enroute to Los Angeles from San Francisco, last week.

The reorganized F Battery, 143rd Field Artillery, enjoyed the "Godmothership" of Mary Pickford during the war.

Charles Goodwin, formerly of the Superior Exchange in Philadelphia, has undertaken the business management of The Exhibitor, a magazine published in Philadelphia.

The National Academy of Motion Pictures being built by George Eastman for the University of Rochester, is being completed. Mr. Eastman, in conjunction with the Eastman School of Music, another new institution, has contributed $4,500,000 for it.

Current Reviews

lone whose love although lacking much in understanding, is sufficiently strong to carry him to the light. His pain, tenderness and diabolical hardness are characteristics which are hard to bring together intelligently, but Chaney creates Farralone without a noticeable effort.

A clever bit of interpretation is Raymond Hatton's portrayal of The Menace. There is no more versatile actor upon the screen than Hatton.

Hardee Kirkland, Edwin Wallack and Ray Laidlaw are excellently cast as the principal remaining members of the group.

The photography of "The Ace of Hearts" is greatly to the credit of Dan Short.

NEAR EAST CONFERENCE PLAN

Ten thousand orphans in Armenia will be fed this winter on Southern California products, it was announced at the annual conference of Near East Relief, held in Los Angeles recently.

State Secretary F. L. Sims in his report praised the work of the various committees during the year in loading two large food ships and in collecting old clothing for the famine area.

A despatch gave the safe arrival of the second foodship "Esther Dollar," which left San Pedro in June. The "Datchet," an earlier ship, unloaded in the Near East during August, it was shown. That existing American orphanages are overcrowded and many thousands of destitute and dying children are being turned away for the lack of supplies was confirmed by recent eye witnesses and motion pictures brought to the conference.

TO MAKE COMEDY IN HONOLULU

Al Christie will go to Honolulu during the coming winter for the production of one of his new two-reel comedies to be released through Educational Exchanges.

The star in the picture will be Dorothy Devore, who was seen in "Nothing Like It," the first picture released in the current Christie series, and who will be seen in "Saving Sister Susie," a new Christie to be released in November.

"Winnie From Wikiki," is the tentative title of the two-reeler. The scenario is being prepared by Frank Roland Conklin. In the meantime Al Christie and his other directors, Scott Sidney and Hal Beaudine, will produce four additional comedies.

READY FOR RELEASE

J. L. Frothingham's forthcoming release through Associated First National Pictures, Inc., "A Bride of the Gods," is now completed and prints of the photoplay will soon be dispatched to the branch offices of the distributing company. Producer Frothingham assembled an all-star cast for "A Bride of the Gods" and such personalities as Marguerite De La Motte, William V. Mong, Louise Lovely, Ethel Grey Terry and James Woods Morrison have prominent roles in the production.

CONVENTION SHOWING

Mr. Neilan's newest picture, "Bits of Life," telling four stories in six reels, will be shown at the convention of theatre owners now in progress in Chicago, under the auspices of Associated First National Exhibitors.

Gertrude Norman is cast in the new Bebe Daniels picture, now under production at Realart.

INDIA BEGINS PRODUCTION

Moving Picture World
Calcutta, September 8.

India is awakening from her slumber at last. There is activity in the leading cities among people interested in film production, as they are no longer satisfied with looking at pictures imported from America or England and think the time has arrived when they should produce on their own. I will not flood you with names of companies that have started producing, as, speaking from your standpoint—the standpoint of American production—production in India is but child's play, and the film has yet to be produced that may compare favorably with the production of the worst-equipped studio on your side. I do not speak in a spirit of disparagement of anybody. All beginners are crude, and necessarily the beginning in Indian production is crude, and millions of feet of film and millions of rupees will have yet to be thrown away before experience will be purchased, and then perhaps the industry will be in a position to produce something really worth producing.

Melodrama and The Public

To determine what the public wants and to offer it just that is the working basis which the successful producer long ago established for his organization; and let us observe that in committing himself to such an undertaking he showed no inclination to shirk the obligations which his position as a world entertainer incurred.

But like the rest of fallible mankind he has been known after much admirable accomplishment to grow careless and even to be foolishly dazzled at times by the glittering of many coins or by the brilliance of his own loudly heralded glory. Then as is true in the work of all negligent or deluded men, inferior spots have appeared in the fabric of his weaving and to meet them has arisen the dissatisfaction of his consumer, the individual whom he had set out to please at all costs. A sense of failure, if only temporary is not an inspiring companion but far wiser is he who accepts it for the moment that it may assist him out of the reach of old pitfalls than is the one who aggressively strides on ignoring his liability to any weakness.

That weakness, the previously mentioned inferiority in the product of this year's picturemaker, has not been the result of a deterioration in what he has done so much as it has been due to his poor judgment in the selection of the material with which he has worked. Content with routine he has forgotten to keep his public's pulse constantly reported upon and while there is no accounting for the fickleness of popular favor, there should in all practical arts be frequent, understanding accountings to it.

To get down to cases: That great percentage of the American populace which passes its half dollars through the little iron grating at the box office window is today doing a regrettable amount of complaining over what it is receiving in return for its favor which is to a surprising extent comprised of that type of unrealistic melodrama that, although extremely popular a few years back in company with the incoherent serial thriller, is now only tolerated as burlesque.

Last week, for instance, we heard five times as many laughs during the unreeling of Goldwyn's hysterically heavy production, "The Ace of Hearts," as were forthcoming at that company's Rupert Hughes' comedy, "From the Ground Up," seven days later, while a fairly full house gathered to witness Lasky's vivid, suspenseful "Under the Lash," giggled ridiculously during its most presumably serious and paralyzing moments. All of which might be taken as indicative that these things are in at least one way enjoyed and therefore justified. If so, fine—but not so!

It is well enough to take a laugh wherever it is found and value it accordingly, but there is a clammy after effect to misplaced mirth which perhaps is the trick of imagination slightly older than that which maliciously reminded us at nine years that while we might scoff at fairies and Santa Claus, there was just a chance that our sacrilege would undo us. In any event the people are steering more and more clear of these relics of the past while showing their preference for the happy comedy and human drama of which there are all too few being released.

It occurs to us that the sooner the man who would still know and meet with the approval of those who indirectly feed him catches step in the march of events and desires, the longer will he be assured of nourishment.

Believe us, the day of the "Blue Jeans," sawmill theme is over. Do we wish to revive an enfeebled old friend that he may ignobly be subjected to ridicule? His demise is near; let us be merciful in bidding him a cheerful farewell, thereby at least winning a legacy of fond celluloid memories. Such a course is the wisest and most comfortable one which our best judgment can suggest and if there is a greater blessing than wisdom, that blessing must be comfort!

The Hollywood Library Association

Announcement has been made of the organization of the Hollywood Library Association, a $500,000 corporation, which proposes to erect in Hollywood, in the very heart of the motion picture world, a library which will be devoted solely to works pertaining to all phases of the motion picture industry. The building, a site for which is now being negotiated, will house, besides the library, spacious reading rooms and the offices of the association. The organizers and incorporators are Roy L. Manker, Frederick Palmer, H. E. Teter, S. M. Warmbath, officials of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, and Charles Donald Fox, all of Los Angeles.

With the avowed determination to maintain a repository of motion picture publications of the most extensive sort, the association aims also, in the language of its articles of incorporation, to "publish books, magazines, directories, encyclopedias and biographies relating to motion pictures." Its first book to be published, entitled "Breaking Into the Movies," is expected to be off the press about November 15th. It will contain articles by the highest authorities in filmland and will cover every possible phase of the motion picture industry.

Among the well-known contributors to the volume are

AT UNIVERSAL

Frances Hodgson Burnett's novel, "That Lass O'Lowrie," will appear on the silver sheet again, this time as a forthcoming vehicle for Priscilla Dean. Seven years ago it was filmed by Universal with Harry Carey and Helen Ware in the leading roles. Eliott J. Clawson is writing the continuity.

King Baggot is making preparations to film "Human Hearts." Gerald Duffy is writing the continuity and the cast is being assembled.

"Mallory Campeador," a Saturday Evening Post story by R. G. Dirk, has been selected as the next vehicle for Herbert Rawlinson to follow "Barry Gordon" in production. George Hively will write the scenario. Another story bought for Rawlinson is "The Black Bag," by Louis Joseph Vance, a working script of which is being prepared.

An all-star comedy cast is being directed through the action of "Oh, Doctor," by Craig Hutchinson. Bert Roach and Virginia Teare are the featured players.

Marine episodes of "The Secret Four," Eddie Polo's serial based on Mexican oil land speculation and revolutionary activities, are being taken at San Pedro. Kathleen Meyers plays the feminine lead opposite Polo.

An original story by Drago entitled "Out of the Silent North," has been accepted by Mr. Hubbard as a future picture for Frank Mayo. The unit under Jack Conway's direction which has been taking exteriors at Big Bear Lake for Mr. Mayo's current starring production, "Wards of the North," has returned to the studio for interiors.

A screen adaptation of the catchy lyric, "Second Hand Rose," is being arranged by William Younger for a future Gladys Walton starring vehicle. "Kind Deeds" by William Flaven McNutt, is the name of another story purchased recently for Miss Walton.

Miss Dupont's next starring vehicle will be "The Golden Gallows," written by Victoria Gallard.

Exterior scenes are being taken at Zelzah and Calabassas for Harry Carey's current starring picture, "Man to Man." Stuart Paton is directing the production of the Jackson Gregory story.

Irving G. Thalberg has written an original story for Marie Prevost, entitled "The Frisky Flapper."

Mr. Thalberg recently collaborated with Lucien Hubbard and Lon Chaney in writing "Wolfbreed," which was produced with Chaney in the featured role. Doris Schroeder has been assigned to scenarize "The Frisky Flapper."

Two stories have ben purchased for Hoot Gibson. One is "Sou'west," from the pen of F. R. Buckley, the other an original by Harvey Gates, entitled "Headin' West."

Episode No. 7 of "Winners of the West" will be entitled "Fires of Fury."

CHANGE IN TITLES

The titles of three R.-C. subjects scheduled for early release, have been changed. "Ma'amselle Jo," by Harriett Comstock, which was filmed by L. J. Gasnier, becomes "Silent Years," "Home," another Gasnier special based upon the novel by George Agnew Chamberlain, becomes "The Call of Home," and "Phroso," produced by Louis Mercanton, of France, and based upon the novel of that name by Sir Anthony Hope, has been changed to "Possession."

Dick Hatton is cutting his second Prairie Production at the Rothacker-Aller laboratory. Hatton expects to start on his third picture about November 1st.

Current Reviews

"THE SPEED GIRL"

Kinema

Coincidence is a great thing! If you don't believe it, ask Elmer Harris how it aided him to spin a romance and a fairly enlivening one, at that, around Bebe Daniels' famous incarceration in the Santa Ana jail episode. But whether he has or has not any secrets to reveal it remains to observe that he might have been hard pressed to turn out "The Speed Girl" even with the Realart publicity department's assistance had it not been for just the wonders that coincidence worked. Nevertheless, while(to quote the young matron one row behind us), "It isn't much of a picture," "still," (her husband responds with just a diplomatic degree of enthusiasm) "it's kind of cute." For what more can one gracefully ask? In any event once under way, it moves along with satisfactory alacrity and it has been given an adequate production by Maurice Campbell and his technical staff.

Bebe is markedly at home, as indeed she should be in Betty Lee, the title role, or an ingenue who speeds and is arrested! Her part fails to present the comedy moments which she has shown herself so competent to care for, but otherwise it is representative.

Theodore Von Eltz is well placed in the masculine lead which is, however, dropped for such lengthy intervals that it fails to comprise the leading male role, a position filled rather by Frank Elliott who is given all of the footage that he either needs or could desire in Carl D'Arcy, that sort of a cadish heavy in which he is seen to best advantage.

Walter Hiers also comes in for "honorable mention" in the uncomplimentary (to the press agent) part of Soapy Taylor, a publicist with a limited mental capacity.

A very interesting piece of work is managed by Norris Johnson who might easily have let Hilda, her "other girl" character, slip into the done-to-death sob sister class. This she valiently refrains from doing.

Truly Shattuck, William Courtwright and little Barbara Maier complete the cast.

H. Kinley Martin photographed "The Speed Girl."

Douglas Doty wrote the scenario.

"SALVATION NELL"

Alhambra

Whitman Bennett's screen presentation through First National of Edward Sheldon's somewhat sordid play, "Salvation Nell," is now released in this city. The production, while not of the type now popular, is lent appeal by a few really human moments and the splendid work of the cast, although Kenneth Webb's imperfect direction permits it to move far too slowly to its climax and then hesitate there inexcusably. Besides this, the picture contains nothing of mystery, and the suspense misses quite badly. Even so, its forcefulness does much to neutralize its inferior points.

Pauline Starke, one of our most sincere younger actresses, gives a beautiful interpretation in the title role, which is so well remembered as Mrs. Fiske played it upon the boards. Miss Starke is as dependable as she is capable, and she defines Nell with clear-cut characterization and technique.

Joseph King as Jim Platt, Nell's abusive lover, also offers some excceptionally good moments.

A lovely kiddie and a talented one, is Lawrence Johnson, who enacts little Jimmie, the lofty-minded son of an illicit love.

Charles McDonald and Matthew Betz are perfect types for Sid and Al McGovern, while Evelyn Carrington is continually pleasing in Hallelujah Maggie.

Gypsy O'Brien, Edward Langford and Marie Haynes are also included in the list of players.

LILLIAN LEIGHTON

"UNDER THE LASH"

Grauman's

"Under the Lash," a J. E. Nash photoplay from the drama by Edward Knoblock and Claude Askew entitled "The Shulamite," presents Gloria Swanson in an interpretation which is refreshingly different from the stickily exotic ones to which Lasky has been wont to assign her in the past several years, but whether the story, incorporating the rankest of melodramatic situations, will be seriously accepted by the much educated theatre-going world, is questionable. Nevertheless, even unconvinced, it will undoubtedly find the photoplay worthy of a close following through to the end which is to be conceded a real point in its favor; and, furthermore, the cast accomplishes some artistic characterizations which are in themselves a redeeming joy.

The star plays Deborah Krillet, the acquiescent wife of a brutal Boer farmer. Her mistreatment by him and her attachment to his English overseer starts off an interesting romance which Fate in many convenient forms sees through to a happy finish. Miss Swanson handles her part carefully and builds up a very natural appeal for it which Sam Woods' direction has either wisely encouraged or permitted as the case may be. In any event, Deborah is a realistic woman upon the creation of which her player is to be congratulated.

In Robert Waring, the Englander, Mahlon Hamilton gives a customarily well poised performance which renders his romance with Deborah more than worthwhile to the audience.

No other than Russell Simpson enacts Simeon Krillet, the religious fanatic, who holds Deborah's destiny in the curve of his sjambok and Simeon is done as Simpson alone would do him. Human he is even in his most exaggerated moments of brutality and egoism, and an excellent screen character. It is only fair to add that had his beard been less obvious the actor would have had one less obstacle to overcome in his audience's mind.

It is Lillian Leighton, however, who "takes the cake." Never have we witnessed her in a more excellent portrayal, never in fact, have we seen a more clever piece of characterization than is Tant Anna Vanderbert, Simeon's stodgy sister, who is amusing throughout all of her villainy. Her mannerisms are both funny and consistent and the role serves to occasion all of the comedy and much of the complication in the picture.

Lincoln Steadman is suitably cast as Jan, Tant Anna's stupid son.

The list of players is completed by Phenax Jasper, that rarely-happened-upon individual, a negress who can act. She is seen as Memke, a kaffir girl.

Al Gilks' camerawork is excellent.

"FROM THE GROUND UP"

California

A moderately diverting little comedy by Rupert Hughes is, "From the Ground Up," Goldwyn's newest Tom Moore starring release. Dealing with the rise to fortune of a happy-go-lucky paddy, who commences his climb by serving as valet to an excavating machine, it is perhaps more inconsistent than unusual and further disappointing in that the famous Hughes subtitles do not entirely live up to expectations in humor. However, E. Mason Hopper's direction creates of the production an appropriate setting for the always enjoyable Moore personality, which is, of course, a vital consideration.

And, indeed, the precocious Irishman has seldom had a sunnier, happier role to his credit than is Terence Giluley, a young fellow with ascending propensities. If great good nature instead of too strenuous portrayals is what the public is looking for, Terence fills the bill, and Tom fills Terence's.

The necessarily aristocratic but "reduced" heroine in the play, one Miss Philema Mortimer, is amply accounted for in the hands of Helene Chadwick, whose work is improving right along although she still lacks much, that, for want of a better term, is called sympathetic appeal.

Darrell Foss as the "lounge lizardish" young heavy is good and particularly so in his drunk sequence, while Hardee Kirkland, De Witt Jennings and Grace Pike adequately dispatch the remaining positions.

John J. Mescall's photography of "From the Ground Up" is perfectly satisfactory.

"GYPSY BLOOD"

Tally's

"Gypsy Blood" was previewed in the issue of June 19, 1921. It is a German-made production of Ernst Lubitsch, starring Pola Negri, and released by First National.

Bert Lytell in the making of his newest Metro picture, "The Phantom Bride," will appear as his own father for an important phase of the picture.

Teddy Gerard and Ann Cornwall have been chosen to portray important parts in the new Richard Barthelmess picture for Associated First National.

SOUND ADVICE

Miss Jeanie MacPherson reecntly said that the besetting sins of beginners in screen writing were carelessness, haste, and discouragement. She says that there would be fewer rejections if more writers after first writing their stories, would lay it on the shelf for about three months, and then rewrite it. She claims that many a story which appears to its creator to be a gem of great brilliance at first, is realized to be a very rough cobblestone upon being carefully scrutinized three months later. Time is a marvelous adjuster, and always tempers enthusiasm. Miss MacPherson believes that more saleable stories would be the result if the writers revised them carefully several times, instead of sending them off at the first writing in burning haste. Her further contention is that the untrained writer is easily discouraged, quitting completely after his third or fourth scenario has been rejected. She believes that the only way to learn to write is to study your medium of expression—its limitations and technique—then keep on writing.

Cautious Writer

An amateur writer recently sent a story to a studio, accompanied by the following letter:

"I think this will make a very fine play for Miss Pauline Frederick. If it does not suit her, I know it will make a very fine play for Sessue Hayakawa.

"Any part of my scenario may be changed as you see fit. If it isn't long enough, add what is necessary. I have written for a drama, but if you like it better for comedy, please change it.

"If the censors will not let you kill two villians you can let them fall off something and kill themselves."

This is the idea of the untrained amateur of screen writing, and— we shudder to add—the idea seems to have been employed in some pictures that we have sat through.

Keeping Fit

The young screen writer needs to remember that back and all round of his sensitive mental apparatus is his physical machine—which must be kept in prime condition. It must be well oiled—with food and air; it must be well rested, with moments and hours of laughter and relaxation; it must be well exercised, yet not over-speeded; it must be unhurried, that it may vibrate with even rhythm. Worry is the rust that eats the human steel.

The writer should always be in love. By that I do not infer that he be ever engaged in some sentimental pursuit, but that he have some star, some dream, some profound hope to preserve that freshness and zest without which creative effort is difficult. The thoroughly disillusioned may even retain this verve and keenness, by sweeping sensitiveness to the entire gamut of Beauty. To feel deeply moved by a strain of music or the coloring of a rose petal is to be in love.

Whether a writer is Christian or Pagan in his predilections, matters not; the well tuned physical instrument—the body—will attract essences of power, grandeur, magnificence.

But the brain, too, must be kept fresh and vital. Do not try to think of too many plots and themes at once—which is equivalent to walking around in circles. Quantitive reading and writing make our confusion. After periods of sustained creative effort, rest; after periods of reading, rest—digest what you have absorbed. Allow yourself as much time for digesting a story or idea as you would for digesting a meal.

Tune yourself neither high nor low. The violin that is keyed too high plays screamingly, screechily; if keyed too low, it plays dully, listlessly.

MARTHA MATTOX

HIGHBROW AND HOKUM

Gertrude Nelson Andrews, who recently sold an original story to Thomas H. Ince for a sum equal to the average person's salary for three or four years—I cannot mention the exact amount—recently wrote an article which was filled with radiant gems of truth. One paragraph in particular should provide oodles of mental pabulum for our young and old photodramatists alike. Here are the pearls of sound, solid logic:

"There are two words which have interfered with the making of intrisically 'big' photoplays; highbrow and hokum. Producers have shied, afraid, of the highbrow story, believing that it had a graveyard smell. So it has. But hokum—a rather popular word—has the same sort of smell. Both are untrue to life. Real life understanding never takes the attitude of the highbrow, and all sentiment is not hokum. To picture life true one can never feel himself above and apart from it. He must live down close to it—feel with it, work with it, play with it, laugh and cry with it, and believe in and love it."

A GOAL

In all walks of modern life, a certain word seems hovering near—the word that has blown across the midwest prairies in stalwart gusts; and has entered into the very fibre of men and institutions from Manhattan Island to the Golden Gate, and from the Gulf to the Great Lakes. That word is co-operation.

The Authors' League of America stands for a Brotherhood of Intellect. It purposes to foster the art of letters, to reach out for the highest ideals of intellectual beauty. Its aim is to bring recognition to new and old writers according to their talents, to make the story the thing! This, as against the intensive commercial exploitation of great names.

There are three guilds of the Authors' League: The Dramatists', The Free Lance Artist', and The Screen Writers'.

The Screen Writers' Guild is going to do all in its power to encourage the writing of original photoplays by the newer and coming generations of writers, that the art of screen writing may become individualized. Much of this encouragement will come from the fact that the Screen Writers' Guild will act as a body to obtain both intrisic and extrinsic recognition for its members.

To become a member of the guild, it will be necessary to be the author of one photoplay or continuity, which is actually accepted, produced and "screened." Then one may be proposed for membership by someone already a member, and admitted after the application has been passed upon by the membership committee.

Associate members will be admitted from the ranks of other arts, but only on the grounds of artistic or intellectual prowess. No amount of money can ever purchase a guild membership. A man may be an excellent fellow, a success in a business way, but be utterly ineligible.

Great names will count for nothing in the eyes of the guild, unless those who bear them create works of photoplay art. A writer hitherto unheard of who renders a photoplay of high artistic merit will find the guild behind him to the last man, that he may receive as much recognition and remuneration as one whose name has been associated with a dozen masterpieces.

What higher goal for the beginner or student of today than a membership in the Screen Writers' Guild? For when that goal is attained, one becomes a recognized creative artist, whose future work will obtain a respectful reading at any studio in Filmdom. Acceptances will bring sums of money in keeping with the proportionate value of the story to the motion picture production in toto.

Every possible co-operation will be extended potential talent and genius. Screen credit will be secured for all members.

The Screen Writers' Club in Hollywood, which is also the western headquarters for the Authors' League, is without doubt—even in its preesnt youth—the intellectual center of western America. For photodramatists, it is the end of an uphill trail, a vantage point from which to assail the mountain peaks of art.

A Parting Hunch

Too many amateur and professional photodramatists are seeking for out-of-the-ordinary situations and intricate plots. The story that will always "get over" is the one that shows an audience in the first few moments the poor gink with a large family who can't meet the rent; or the tired woman who has sacrificed herself to an unfriendly husband by plodding along for years caring for the children, sweeping, washing dishes, etc.; the man's inner battle when he finds a young and beautiful girl in love with him—and his wife, now middle-aged and plain, has sacrificed her earlier years that he might progress. The two pals in love with the same girl; the problem of the first years of marriage; the children outgrowing the parents mentally; the frightful results of unwarranted jealousy; all these all-too-human things are the stuff from which hundreds of variables are possible. Husbands still lose collar buttons and become quite angry and fretful; lovers still get their appointments mixed; oddly lovable characters still live—and all these things have their being in the everyday heart of life. Of such stuff is the soul of stories; unique situations and intricate plots are not nearly so necessary as humanness.

EMPLOYEES REGISTER FOR ELECTION PURPOSES

The recent action of the employees of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., in solidly registering their names at the city polls for the forthcoming municipal elections, has had its direct influence upon the motion picture theatre owners of Southern California who, upon knowledge of the step taken by the Gore Brothers, Ramish & Sol Lesser employees, passed a resolution at the meeting on October 5th, requesting all employees and members of their respective families to register for municipal voting purposes on all matters of interest to the community. It is believed that their step will not prove inconsequential when a local election again holds matters of interest to the motion picture exhibitor or producer.

GIFTS FOR THE EFFICIENT

At the completion of "Winners of the West," the Universal historical serial in which Art Acord is starred, Edward Laemmle, the director, presented Frank Messenger, his assistant and Howard Oswald, his chief cameraman, with gold watches. The serial is based upon the exploits of Capt. John C. Fremont in his conquest of the west. It marks a departure in serial making and is considered to have educational value.

Edward Laemmle's gift to his staff was in recognition of the collaboration which enabled him to complete the serial in record time. Efficiency, it seems, sometimes pays for itself.

Roy L. Manker, vice-president of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, is developing globe-trotting proclivities. Ten days ago he returned from an extended business trip to New York and Chicago, and he is now going East again in the interest of the Hollywood Library Association, the new half-million-dollar corporation of which he is president.

RAY PICTURES IN TOLEDO

A solution of legal complications having been reached, Charles Ray pictures are again showing in Toledo, Ohio, after a two-year absence. Mr. Ray's re-opening there, in "45 Minutes from Broadway," occasioned front-page newspaper space.

MARSH IN STAGE PLAY

Making a tire repair on the road has become a very simple operation in recent years. Such repairs have to be made only at rare intervals nowadays because tires are so much better that they seldom break down, and roads are so much better that the danger of punctures and blow-outs is greatly diminished.

"The development of materials which make the repairing operation a very simple matter," says Jack Meek, of Muller Brothers tire department, dealer in United States tires, "has eliminated most of the discomfort of making an emergency repair on the road, and the number of these materials has been reduced to such an extent that about all a motorist need carry in his tool box for tire trouble is a cold patch kit for inner tube repairs, some blow-out patches for repairs to casings, some tire tape and a heal-a-cut outfit for filling up bad cuts in the surface of the casing. All of which he an get in our accessory department. When he hasn't them or the trouble is more serious, our service car is within call."

THE ETHICAL SOCIETY MAKES A STATEMENT

Although many statements have been listened to concerning the Ethical Motion Picture Society, which are preparing to hold a motion picture exposition in Los Angeles, we have heard little from the organization itself. The following is a statement of its viewpoint by its secretary:

"To the Motion Picture Fraternity:

"Greetings:

"The Ethical Motion Picture Society of America, Inc., has undertaken an herculean task, in your interest, in this hour of misunderstandings which has resulted in the slowing up of your wonderful and contributory work in the interest of Art, Industry and the Sciences.

"This task will assume the form of (quoting the language of our Mayor) 'a dignified, ethical and educational exhibit,' having for its purpose a better understanding between the public and your fraternity, of the relation of your work to the economic and social functions of our city, state and nation.

"Capital, labor and that infinitely greater class, the American public, which is beneficiary of both, are vitally interested in your work—but, we fear that in the heat of passion, and under the leadership of unwise radicals, they have forgotten your great contributions to War Service and the good you do, in their zeal to censor.

The First Annual American Motion Picture Industry Exposition we have pledged, has the godspeed of our Governor, our Mayor, our State Commissioner of Corporations and our State Superintendent of Banks, the Chairman and President of our Supervisors and City Council, respectively, our Clergy and many others of note and prominence who are unselfishly interested in the common good.

"Ours is a non-stock company and if any profits accrue from this exposition, they will be divided between the charities and the creation of a more comprehensive appreciation of the motion picture industry. We will not ask you for financial aid—all we desire is a worth while work, well done, and we want your co-operation.

"Very truly yours,
"ETHICAL MOTION PICTURE SOCIETY OF AMERICT, INC.,
"By Chas. E. Sebert,
"Secretary."

TO AN OLD PAL O' MINE

Little "Breezy" Eason passed away the other day. First of all, the world lost a real boy—one who enjoyed all that life had to offer wholesome little kiddies; then it lost a wonderful child-actor—one with a promising future. But a few days before "Breezy" started on the trail to the great adventure, he was happy and strong without a thought of other than the joy of playing and living. Then out of a golden cloud a hand reached down and beckoned to him. A small, still voice emerged from the heavens and invited the little hero of many screen adventures to join the other kiddies in God's everlasting playground. "Mickey," a faithful and loving bull pup, once a pal of the Eason boy, was waiting for his master. The pup had gone on to the playground a year before and he was lonesome for the little tot who used to feed and caress him.

There were also playmates—boys and girls who used to romp and play with him. They, too, were waiting for their leader, for "Breezy" was always the "captain." Now that he is enlisted in God's army of Heaven, I know that he will take his place at the head of his battalion and that he will "carry on" in the Great Beyond as he did here on earth.

"Breezy" was first and last a boy. He was the typical American lad who enjoyed the great outdoors and all that it had to offer. He has passed on, but in departing from this strange ever-changing world he has left behind him a memory that will be cherished by all who knew him—the memory of an upstanding little man who died like he had lived, game and smiling all the while. Goodbye, old pal, and God bless you.

A FRIEND.

MANUSCRIPT READING SERVICE

A new service planned to revolutionize the reading of manuscripts at motion picture studios is announced by Roy L. Manker, vice-president of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, who says:

"I believe the Palmer Story Service which we have just inaugurated will have a vital effect on the entire business of motion picture story selection and will prove a distinct boon to every cinema producing organization in America, as well as centralizing the photoplay story market in Los Angeles.

"In the past and up to the present, every motion picture studio reading staff has been obliged to wade through innumerable magazines, books, and original manuscripts in quest of material. Some of the smaller studios have been utterly unable to keep up with literary production and do not receive much 'original' stuff.

"The Palmer Story Service is most complete. Nothing has been left unconsidered. Brief synopsis of all weekly and monthly magazines published in America, of the new novels and stage plays and of all worthy original stories handled by the Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, will be mailed daily to the scenario editors of the film studios. Each story carries a comment upon it as to its type, merit, and suitability to the screen.

"In addition to synopsis all current literature, the Palmer organization is synopsizing and commenting upon all the novels, short stories, and plays written by recognized literary artists in the past several centuries. Synopses and comment upon these and less known works will be furnished upon request.

"When a story particularly suited to the needs of any particular studio is covered, the Studio Editor will be telphoned and the story rushed to the studio by special messenger.

"Detailed synopses and full information as to price, availability, etc., will be furnished upon request. An index to the synopses furnished daily will be supplied monthly.

"All original stories included in the Palmer Story Service are registered by number and the authors' copies held in the files of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

"When it is considered that—in addition to hundreds of 'originals'—every magazine from the Dial to Breezy Stories, and every novel and short story from those of Joseph Conrad to those of Harold Bell Wright, is covered, the completeness of the service is realized. That studio editors are apprised immediately of all available material suitable to their directors and stars, constitutes an aid not to be overlooked.

"Al Cohn and Kate Corbaley are co-editors of this new department. Helen Van Upp, a scenarist, continuity writer and cutter of authority, is head of the reading department. With her are Winona Godfrey, a magazine writer of note; Hazel Spencer, authority on dramatic technique; Carlisle Rott, writer of 'western' stories, and Virginia Van Upp, who has been reader at several representative studios.

"With the Palmer Story Service, information is furnished regarding stories and their availability regardless of whether the Palmer Sales Department is or is not acting as agent."

The Mayor Makes a Statement

Below, we are happy to publish a communication from Mayor Cryer's office in which an error in one of our recent editorials is pointed out and in which a definite statement is made of our foremost city official's attitude toward Los Angeles' greatest industry.

We are more than gratified to comply with the request that we extend an expression of his best feeling to the picture profession and it is for the reason that we desire the expression to be without the slightest inaccuracy that the letter is offered in its entirety.

F. R.
November 1, 1921.

Raymond Cannon,
Publisher of Camera!
Gentlemen:

Recently, through Allen's Press Clipping Bureau, Mayor Cryer received a clipping of an article that appeared in your paper October 1, 1921, entitled "A Gentleman Expresses Himself." Thereafter, he received a clipping from an Oakland paper, in which Mr. Charles Murray was quoted to have said in substance the same thing that appeared in your paper. On another occasion he received a clipping from the New York Globe, in which the Los Angeles correspondent who prepares the motion picture news from this section represented Mayor Cryer as being unfriendly to the motion picture industry.

If there had been but one occurrence of this kind the Mayor would have quietly passed the matter over without any recognition. However, since it appears that there is a studied effort being made to misrepresent him, he feels that it is due him that a correction be made.

You, of course, are responsible only for the things that appeared in your publication. In the article printed by you appeared the statement that Mayor Cryer was responsible for the resurrection of a forgotten statute which provided for a city commissioner or censor of films. Of course anyone that knows anything at all about the truth of the situation knows that the minutes of the Council will show that Councilman Wheeler was responsible for the resurrection of the forgotten ordinance, and that Mayor Cryer had known nothing of the existence of such an ordinance until it was called to his attention by the action of the Council. The Mayor's attitude subsequent thereto was due to the fact that the ordinance is mandatory, and calls upon the Mayor to appoint a censor.

The Mayor wants to take the opportunity at this time to deny that his action was prompted by any enmity or unfriendly feeling entertained by him toward the motion picture industry. Of course the utterances of Mr. Murray are absolutely uncalled for, and without foundation. The information conveyed to and published in the New York Globe is absolutely incorrect, and without foundation.

The Mayor desires me to make this statement to you, and through you, to the men and women engaged in the motion picture business, in the interest of truth and fair play.

Yours sincerely,
(Signed) H. H. KINNEY,
Secretary to the Mayor.

Gratitude

The following note from Tom Bates, one of the best loved members of the picture profession, informs his friends that the same courageous, always honorable comrade, whose extended physical suffering has so long kept him inactive in a Los Angeles hospital, is now in a condition to resume his old position in our midst. The entire colony will rejoice over the return of this clever actor whose patient cheerfulness has been finally rewarded with renewed health.

If Tom Bates is grateful for the little that has been done for him, we are infinitely more grateful to realize that his presence raises to some degree the standard of our calling.

"Time flys with eagle's wings, but the thoughts of grateful men ever remain in their hearts. As the days passed into weeks and weeks into months as I lay on my sick bed of torture, I thought of each and everyone of the many friends who so kindly assisted me in my greatest hour of need. Often have I thought of the hour when I could repay the wonderful kindness, when God answering my prayers would enable me to return to my dear friends all that they had so generously donated. Now that I am well again, and able to add my small measure of ability to the happiness of others, I shall, with God's assistance, repay you all. But the beautiful thought back of the deed—the fellowship of man, the kindred of friendship—is beyond repayment. With a heart too full for words I can only say that I am grateful, deeply grateful to one and all of you.

TOM D. BATES."

Film Capital Production Notes

ELFELT FORMS COMPANY

With Clifford S. Elfelt as president and general manager, a new film company, to be known as Metropolitan Productions, Inc., has been formed to produce five and six reel features. The plans of the concern include the making of a series of eight adaptations of famous books, also four pictures with all-star casts to be made from original stories.

The companies will work at the Louis B. Mayer studios, where preparations are well under way for the filming of the first offering on or about November 1st.

"Finding Himself," a two-reel comedy drama of western life, featuring Alma Bennett and J. B. Warner, has just been completed under the direction of Carl P. Winther and C. F. Reynolds. This is the first of a series of eighteen two-reel specials which are to be filmed at the Mayer studio under the personal supervision of Mr. Elfelt, to be known as Winther-Reynolds Productions.

Mr. Winther, formerly associated with D. W. Griffith, and Mr. Reynolds, until recently with the Mack Sennett forces, are co-directing the series. L. A. Corson is in charge of the photography and Everett Shellenberger is filling the role of assistant director.

"The Society Buckaroo" will be the second of the series, the camera work on which was started this week.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd has started on his second week in his new comedy, the working title of which is "The White Feather." Mildred Davis is playing opposite the star. Hal Roach, Jean Havez and Sam Taylor wrote the script. A second series of ten Harold Lloyd comedies will be re-issued, the first offering to be "Pistols for Breakfast."

A new Jimmy Parrott comedy is under production with Ethel Broadhurst playing the leading feminine role.

Harry "Snub" Pollard finished a train comedy this week and has begun production of a Rescue Mission comedy with Marie Mosquini playing opposite the star. R. J. Ceder, assisted by Bob Evans, is directing. Charles Parrott wrote the script. Pollard's comedy, "Law and Order," a satire on the activities of the Ku Klux Klan, is now released. Charles Porrott wrote and directed the comedy.

Gaylord Lloyd's comedy, "Dodge Your Debts," is also released.

H. M. Walker is titling the recently completed "Snub" Pollard and Jimmy Parrott comedies as follows: "The Corner Pocket," "The Go-Getter," and "Call the Witness" Pollard pictures; "Leave It to Me," and "Try, Try Again," Parrott comedies. The scripts were written by Charles Parrott. Following preview at the studio, the comedies will be shipped to New York.

NIBLO STARTS

Fred Niblo has started production on Anita Stewart's next picture for Louis B. Mayer, "The Woman He Married," a stage play by Herbert Bashford, which was adapted for the screen by Bess Meredyth. Doran H. Cox is assistant director and Dal Clawson is in charge of the photography.

The Chester Bennett Company has taken a larger office suite at the Robert Brunton Studios, taking over those formerly occupied by Dial Film Company.

"Conflict," Priscilla Dean's new Universal-Jewel production, had its premiere presentation recently in the Central Theatre, Broadway and Forty-seventh Street, New York.

Current Reviews

"LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY"

Mission

Mary Pickford, that adored depicter of several hundred childish characterizations and some others, reaches the ultimate in charm and versatility with her dual work in Bernard McConville's screen version of Frances Hodgson Burnett's "Little Lord Fauntleroy," the Los Angeles premiere of which occurred Wednesday.

We who are familiar with every phase of the story and play, expected great things of it in Miss Pickford's clever hands and in no respect were we disappointed. Each of her interpretations (the title role and Dearest Cedric's delightfully typical young mother) are manipulated to gain that tenderly happy appeal which is a Pickford possession exclusively. The naive Cedric is wholly boyish, so much so that despite his curls and the audience's knowledge of his portrayer's identity, he overcomes all prejudice and is a most impelling young male of his period. With beautiful self confidence he hero worships, loves and battles his way through the little lord's diversified action, arriving finally at that splendid stage where he is considered sufficiently important to be permitted to dispense with his distressing ringlets. Too much cannot be said for the star's supreme artistry here. It is her sense of dramatic balance which assisted by her incomparable personality has given her the silversheet's first place.

Contrasted with Cedric is his demure, anxious little mother, also ideally played by Mary. Although chief interest centers in the child, Dearest is one of the most superior achievements of an exceptional actress.

To the organization which produced this super picture is due much praise. Alfred Green and Jack Pickford shared the direction with a perfect result, the smoothness of which is more unusual on account of its division.

Charles Rosher's photography reaches the heights of camera accomplishment with its pleasing composition of shots and exquisite toning. He, moreover, employs the most consistent and convincing double exposure that we have ever witnessed.

William Howell, technical advisor for the English episodes of the production, has done much to keep the atmosphere of his sequences correct.

The supporting cast is well chosen and more than competent in each instance. It is headed by Claude Gillingwater, whose rendition of the Earl of Dorincourt, is a felicitation. His footage is filled with both pathetic and amusing moments in which he is equally good.

Joseph Dowling is also excellent in Havisham, while Kate Price, Fred Malatesta and James Marcus make a delicious trio of Mrs. McGinty, Dick, the bootblack, and Hobbs, the grocer, little Fauntleroy's staunch friends and champions. Each part is not only played, it is characterized.

The remaining positions are adequately filled by Rose Dione, Colin Kenny, and Francis Marion.

It will be a long time before a picture of this type approachable in any way to "Little Lord Fauntleroy," will be offered a fortunate public. When such occurs, if ever, we hope to be included in the opening audience.

"THE SHEIK"

Rialto

"The Sheik" is perhaps the most all-around, big and effectively handled Lasky picture for which George Melford has ever been responsible.

Of course, as all who are familiar with E. M. Hull's original novel will expect, it is based upon a very obviously presented theme, dealing with a man's lust and his power to gratify it; but because of many things including a conventional ending with at least a slight moral designated, an elaborately pleasing production, and the extreme physical fascination of the principal character, it will be excused in many quarters. Again, its very nature will insure its stupendous drawing power in others.

ELINOR HANCOCK

Personally, we recognize some measure of value in it, largely from the standpoint of dramatic achievement and further because it has been carefully executed by the direction as well as by Monte Katterjohn in his scenario, not to mention some superlatively artistic photography by William Marshall. In fact, technically this story has been treated without fault. The desert scenes showing the reckless, exhilarating horsemanship of the Sheik's Arabian army are truly thrilling and the tinting of these scenes lends them increased delight. Excellent performances are offered in every instance.

The title role is interpeted capitivatingly by Rudolph Valentino, whose work as Ahmed Ben Hassen will undoubtedly gain him a greater following than did his role in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," for the reason that it stands out better, and is more daring, besides being better played. Valentino is good for a long run of popular favor at this time.

Done with equal excellence is the somewhat less picturesque leading feminine role, Diana Mayo, the English girl whose spirit is broken by the charmingly ruthless Sheik. Agnes Ayres enacts the role and sets her highest standard in it with some clever transition.

Walter Long's customary measured villainy stands him in good stead as Omair, the desert bandit, whose crime, quite significantly lies not so much in the fact that his behavior differs from the hero's as that his figure and features are less perfectly molded. Leaving that, his part is a convincingly played heavy.

Adolphe Menjou's performance of Raoul de St. Hubert, the Sheik's Parisian friend, is accomplished with the deliberate ease and finish that have marked his entire screen record; while Lucien Littlefield amusingly characterizes Gaston, Ahmed's faithful French valet.

The cast is completed by George Waggner, Ruth Miller and Frank Butler in carefully managed minor parts.

It will probably be sometime before we run across a more brilliant production, even though its appeal can scarcely be named as a higher one. It is sometimes a problem to establish boundary lines as even unelevated entertainment has been known to divert harmlessly.

"CAMILLE"

California

Nazimova's latest and modernized version of Alexander Dumas, the younger's "Camille," a Metro production, is released now. It has been given an exotic, but a simply exotic setting, which frames the star's peculiar charm advantageously, creating the most attractive of atmospheres. Fortunately, Ray C. Smallwood has not only displayed a complete comprehension of his subject, but has utilized marked discretion in his direction of the meritorious June Mathis scenario. Especially excellent is his composition of scenes which assists to beautify Rudolph Bergquist's unusual photography, which latter is enough to do a lot of redeeming in itself if such were necessary. It is not!

Those who are closest to this age of the drama are agreed that there is little to discuss about Nazimova's superb artistry, ever. She is preeminent and in Marguerite, the twentieth century lady of the camelias, she is the same lithely alive, vividly receptive woman that she would be in Camille. Into Marguerite's remorse alone is injected all of the delicate fire that is always this strange Russian's chief fascination.

Rudolph Valentino is cast well, if not ideally, in Armand Duval, Marguerite's tender lover, and has at least one big situation in the tragedy. However, the role as arranged, does not permit much strong work.

Proving himself an able dramatist as well as a clever comedian, William Orlamond is seen to dignifiedly dispatch Monsieur Duval, Armand's father with real conviction. That is to say in requesting the ruin of Armand's romance, Duval proves to the audience that he has thoroughly convinced Marguerite as to the infallibility of his stand upon the matter. Orlamond's work here is very good.

Arthur Hoyt is also correctly placed as Count de Varville while Zeffie Tillbury, Rex Cherryman, Patsy Ruth Miller, Edward Connelly, Consuelo Flowerton and Mrs. Oliver

The Screen Writers' Forum

Conducted by Ted Le Berthon
Editor of The Photodramatist

THS ACID TEST

A potential photodramatist writes in that he is handicapped by a lack of vocabularly. His letter was well written, in simple concise language. Too many people imagine that because they are not walking catalogues of classified knowledge—Encyclopedia Britanicas in the flesh—they cannot write fiction, plays, or photoplays. Simplicity, why so eternally timorous? Why, for the love of Michael, don't a few more well-meaning folks use their noodles and realize that Charles Dickens didn't employ as "fine" language as some of the present day writers in the second rate fiction magazines. Why don't they "know" that Theodore Dreiser, perhaps the master of all modern novelists, uses practically none but commonly used words.

Especially in writing photodrama, the writer must realize that he can write directly from his heart—or perhaps his soul, and speed his message to the photoplay-going world with more hope of a warm response than if he clouded his meanings in a mass of heterogeneous verbiage.

Better Stay Home

If ever there was a fundamental mistake, it is that made by many screen writers in hieing themselves to Los Angeles, hoping after their arrival to secure staff positions at the various studios. Of course, some think it's easier to market stories if one operates within the capitol of Filmdom; others want to be in the atmosphere of the studios. Well, none of the studios are breaking in amateur writers; the adamant studio editors tell them: "Earn your apprenticeship elsewhere; free lance for a while, until you've sold enough scripts to give you a reputation; don't ask us to train you—we're not experimenting any more than we have to." As to those who think it easier to market screen stories by coming to Los Angeles, they might stop to think that novelists and short-storyists do not go to New York to market their brain offsprings, just because New York happens to be the heart of the publishing business. As far as getting atmosphere goes, one might as well write from Peru, Indiana, or Beaver Dam, Wisconsin, unless he is intimately associated with some "very" influential film magnates, his chances for hobnobbing about the studios are dingbusted slight. They'd have better stayed home—and write about the life they understand best and are most familiar with. In fact, one scenario editor said he preferred photoplays submitted from outside points, because so much of the locally concotted stuff was too pronouncedly flavored with the Hollywood viewpoint—a somewhat too intimate, blase perspective, born of a thorough knowledge of the studio modus operandi. A knowledge of production is invaluable, but a close-up association with these facts is apt to produce a mechanical rather than an inspirational expression.

The Story Market

It seems almost ludicrous to state that the producers are on the qui vive for any certain type of story, in view of the fact that the American taste—perhaps all human taste?—is for variety, change, novelty. The "good" story, irrespective of theme, plot, characterization, is always acceptable. This is syllogizing with a vengeance, but although ingenue comedy dramas, sea stories, business girl romances, and mother love stories are particularly popular with the public of today—and as a natural result, with the producers—the market may shift tomorrow. Spiritistic and faith healing photoplays are apparently passing, but that is probably because of the paucity of good material dealing with these themes, rather than a declining interest in them. Capital and labor stories are read with much wariness and skepticism at present, and are usually discarded—for two very sufficient reasons; either the story is propaganda on behalf of some cherished political theory or is one of those impossible, mawkishly blubbering stories in which the high-hatted financial Titan and the hardy son of toil eventually kiss and make up, with a lot of hokum about the "brotherhood of man" and "there are no classes." Perhaps, in the final analysis, there is always one type of story that is certain of at least thoughtful consideration: the genuine love story or romance, dealing with the boy and girl who live next door or around the corner.

Talent or Genius?

There is much arrant nonsense indulged in about the art of the motion picture. The eternal controversy is shifting to the realms of Picturedom. What is art? Is it an art to write a novel, or play, or photoplay that will please twenty million people—or is such an achievement sentimental poppycock which appealed to the more automatic emotions? Is true art the devising or creating of that which requires for its substantiation the thoughtful, quiet praise of a mere handful of arbitrarily termed illminati? So far, the motion picture has developed the farthest as an industry. It is limited as to a choice of themes and moods, limited to popular taste—that the dimes and quarters may chase each other across box office tills. Only a most exalted miracle, the appearance of a Shakespeare of the screen, could elevate screen writing to that transcendent plane whereon the many and the few both bow to the unfathomable mystery, Genius. For though the few see bits of strangeness and beauty that elude the many in the works of one of these flowers of humanity which blooms once in a thousand years, the Master artist's cup of creation overflows and drenches the multitude with its "elixir of life." But today—the successful photodramatist employs those elements of drama that are neither shadowy or subtle, but primal and obvious, in stories never far from ordinary human experience. And he is not concerned with the authenticity of the motion picture's claim to be an art, but with the all too commercial question: "Will it be a box office triumph?"

"Foolish Wives"

Certain overly ambitious little mamas allow the peas to burn and the baby to stray into the next street and hubby's socks to go undarned, while they attempt to write photoplays. With flighty-headed presumption, they stalk the Movie Muse doggedly, while they would admit that the writing of verse, short stories, or plays is utterly beyond them—a world of dire complexities they dare not explore! Such little damsels should be sternly admonished, if not properly—eventually—chastised. Their lack of respect for the photoplay is appalling. Considering the screen's limitless scope and unplumbed possibilities and even present attainments, their lack of reverence for the meidum through which they expect to create is astounding. Their imaginations have them bound and they are carried into supermundane flights of sensational, i. e., things which they adjudge sensational they set down, irrespective of dramatic construction. Untrained in screen technique, and unfitted through their experiences to become artists in any field, they step in where angels fear to tread. Their creations fill the studio staff readers with thoughts of suicide. Of course, these "foolish wives" help the stationery trade and their purchases of stamps for return envelopes is a boon to Uncle Sam. Poor old—or young?—screen! How you're picked on, by lady lollypops who would not dare attempt to play the piano without years of study or compose a poem sans knowledge of versification; unfortunately, there are a number of fair young damsels of high purpose, silk stockinged and bobbed hair crusaders who paradoxically enough are filled —right up to their pretty, swan-like necks— with unique twentieth century metaphisics which scorn form and stress "spirits." Technique, bah! Lovely thoughts will make for beautiful forms, they say. Some of this same genus actually achive piano playing "without a lesson." But have you ever heard such horrible playing? Their scenarios, ditto.

Costume Photoplays

Studio scenario editors are again reporting that a number of amateur outside writers are sending in costume photodramas, probably inspired by "The Three Musketeers" and "The Queen of Sheba"—or rather by the success of these productions. It will do the fledgling good to know that he is treading on the parade grounds of the great lonely beasts of genius when he essays to create a photoplay replete with spectacle and pageantry. While a photoplay in which costumes and setting will entail great expense would be considered, if written by some established photodramatist—such a all capably dispense with the remaining positions.

"Camille" is a fragrant, beautifully sad celluloid hour which is to be appreciated for its art.

"THE IDLE CLASS"

Kinema

Charlie Chaplin's first comedy since "The Kid," is a two-reeler which First National releases under the title, "The Idle Class." Altho' filled to the brim with the clever slapstick "gags" insured by the name Chaplin, there may be some complaint that this lively subject is cut unsatisfactorily short after the enthusiatstic public has been treated by him to whole evenings of mirth, but that is a matter of opinion. There are unquestionably many who appreciate even the highest class slapstick to the fullest when it is received in small doses.

Chaplin is Sir Charlie the irresistible again in each of the two reels which he enacts in this picture. The tramp is his regulation type of work, which is rendered even more amusing than usual when contrasted with the fastidious absent-minded husband which part he also fills. Every moment of his footage either provokes expectancy or the final laugh and is altogether amusing.

Edna Purviance, as the wife, and Mack Swain, in the irate father, assist the comedian to accomplish "The Idle Class," which was, of course, written and directed by the star.

"LADIES MUST LIVE"

Grauman's

The long anticipated release of George Loane Tucker's last earthly production, has finally been realized for the public by Mayflower Pictures Corporation two years or so after its preparation by and several months after the passing on of its producer, "The Miracle Man's" creator. That is sometimes the way of the world and we must, on the whole, judge it to be a good if unexplainable way that keeps before us the achievements of the departed.

However, for perhaps many unavoidable reasons, "Ladies Must Live," although it incorporates a big idea and points its moral conclusively, will be unable to follow "The Miracle Man," in either appeal or artistry.

To begin with, the cast is so large and the relations of its members are so vague that it becomes a bit jumbled with mixed motives and detached incidents. The picture is further injured by incomprehensive cutting which we understand was not done by its director.

Nevertheless a remarkable cast adequately attends to the numerous parts included.

Robert Ellis in a sympathetic juvenile, Mahlon Hamilton in a more unclassifiable masculine character, Gibson Gowland in a comedy position, Jack Gilbert in that type of just but merciless young male who is a hangover from another age, Snitz Edwards as wealth's cynical, unattractive representative and Jack MacDonald as the diabolical butler are seen in the principal "sterner" roles of the photoplay; while Betty Compton, Leatrice Joy, Marcia Manon and Cleo Madison offer characteristic feminine parts. All of these give variated angles upon the economic situation of the modern female.

Hardee Kirkland, William Mong and Arnold Gregg end the list of players in this Alice Duer Miller story.

"BING BANG BOOM"

Kinema

On the same program with "The Idle Class" may be seen "Bing Bang Boom," Irving Lesser's first David Butler starring vehicle. Unfortunately the story by Raymond Goldman, as it has been altered and arranged in the Vance Wethered scenario, is really quite an inferior attempt, which does not present its star to good advantage nor lend itself any definite interest. But probably the direction, by Fred Butler is "Bing Bang Boom's" worst feature, for it has been executed without regard for proportion or logical development while permitting an entire loss of sympathy for its principals.

David must have more careful handling if he is to make good on this, his second starring venture, and let it be said that several portrayals and pictures on the order of the title role in "Bing Bang Boom" will injure his popularity irreparably. The part, originally a peppy youngster who meets and blithely overcomes reverses, is a badly poised, lackadaisical boob with little appeal in the younger Butler's care and this work portends nothing good for his career. We are truly sorry.

Doris Pawn is satisfactory in Ruth Warren, the feminine lead and Ed Wallack makes a good "hokum" crook heavy.

Carl Stockdale, as the old station agent, has to his credit the picture's most enjoyable characterization; while Bert Hadley in

SCREEN WRITERS GIVE HALLOWEEN PARTY

The Screen Writers Guild entertained foremost celebrities of the picture industry upon the evening of Saturday, Oct. 29th. at its clubhouse, when it staged a delightful Hallowe'en party in honor of the sprightly season.

story will receive scant consideration coming from the beginner. To begin with, why not play safe, Mr. Student and Miss Tyro? Why not first send in something not quite so ambitious?—or is the proper word presumptious? Remember that for one "Queen of Sheba" there are a hundred just ordinary program pictures released, to satisfy the inordinately greedy public maw. The story about the boy and girl next door or the old man around the corner—the folks we all know—yes, you've got me—that's what the herd wants; most of "we" poor two-legged sheep couldn't stand a daily menu of Egyptian scenery and costuming—or lack of costuming. Most of us continue to live on Main Street, and want our type's existence on the planet justified: therefore, the popularity of mirrors and movies. For the student of photoplay writing to essay spectacles—I refer to spectacular cinemas and not horn-rimmed glasses—is like the writer for Adventure Magazine attempting to break into The Dial.

A Thousand Years in Twenty

The surprising extract from "The Christian Register," a liberal religious paper published in Boston, which follows, was brought to our attention this week as marking a significant recognition of the motion picture by America's foremost scientist, a man who has himself contributed several hundred years to our civilized progress.

"Thos. A. Edison says that moving pictures used as text-books would advance civilization one thousand years in twenty. 'Present primary school systems are poor and unattractive to children' he said. 'The remedy is to eliminate boresome books and teach with motion pictures. This is a more vivid, more compelling method of holding the child's attention.' Mr. Edison found the majority of college men who applied for positions in his plant amazingly ignorant. He placed the fault, not with the men or the college, but with their early education."

We have always advocated instruction by films and we do not feel that Mr. Edison's statement is exaggerated to the slightest degree. When it is realized that in the public schools two years are now devoted to the study of American history and that it might be digested more thoroughly in two weeks' time if it were taken in through the eye from the screen (for there is no question as to the motion picture's impressionistic qualities) the celluloid's possibilities as an educator are appreciated.

To what lengths in mental development the generations taught thus quickly and efficiently might go! Certainly civilization would take an unprecedented bound with the minds of the world better trained at twelve years than are our present college graduates at twenty-five. As to the likelihood of a general adoption of this method, that is but a matter for intelligence and a little time to adjust. Meanwhile we have the satisfaction of the knowledge that our greatest minds are at work upon the proposition which is lent thereby the proper weight in the eyes of the world to insure its early success. F. R.

Invaluable Feature for Our Readers

Because almost daily, we receive queries upon the copywright law from aspiring scenarists and therefore have been forced to the conclusion that far too little is known of it in a profession to which its acquaintance is vital, we have by special arrangement secured the services of Irving S. Baltimore, a local attorney, and a specialist in this particular branch to introduce and conduct a department upon copywright regulations to commence in the issue of November 19th.

In addition to the information offered in his articles, Mr. Baltimore who has but recently returned from Europe where he was occupied for a considerable space arranging stage and picture rights to the output of various British and Continental authors, will undertake to answer all questions sent in for his attention.

The assistance of a recognized authority in these matters should prove generally beneficial to those who are comparatively unfamiliar with them.

High Cost of Agents

"Equity" has reviewed the agent situation from a slightly different angle below.

"Theatrical managers and motion picture producers frequently complain about the high cost of production. They attribute their troubles to the railroads, to the Government, and so forth.

"We think that they have overlooked one very potential factor in the rise of production costs, that is, a certain type of agent.

"There are honest agents, of course, who charge the legal 5% commission and really work in the interests of the actor. These deserve all encouragement and we are not referring to them.

"There is another type of agent, however, and it is odd how few managers seem to have realized just who bears the expense of his commission. One would think that, when a manager's taxi is blockaded by the passing of some agent's Rolls Royce, he wonders just where the upkeep for that car came from. But apparently he doesn't.

"Of course the manager pays for that limousine. An actor has to make just so much to maintain his standard of living. If an agent charges him ten or twenty or thirty per cent. of his salary, he presently raises his salary by just that amount, exactly as the retailer who is overcharged by his wholesaler presently raises his prices to the public. For once, the manager truly represents the public.

"And yet literally hundreds of managers permit their subordinates to 'co-operate' with these profiteers to the extent of forcing players who wish to work under that management to apply through the channels of a certain agency. The subordinate, and not the manager, profits by this illicit arrangement. The casting director or studio manager has 'an interest' in the agency, and the agent naturally has an interest in him. Apparently the manager is the only one who has no interest in the matter. He fondly imagines that the actor is the only loser—so why shouldn't his employees make what they can on the side?

"But here is just what happens.

Film Capital Production Notes

AMERICAN TECHNIQUE AND ITALIAN ART COMBINED

Henry Kolker and his technical staff recently sailed for Cherbourg enroute to Italy under contract with the Societa Anonima 'Ultra' of Rome, Luporini Brothers, and Ernest Shipman of New York City. Among the personnel of Mr. Kolker's staff are Howard P. Bretherton, assistant director and Charles Rosher, late cameraman with Mary Pickford productions.

The stories of F. Marion Crawford have been purchased by this company and "Sant Ilario" is the one selected for the premier production. Kenneth O'Hara has been chosen to arrange the adaptation and continuity.

Two negatives will be made of each story, one under directeion of an Italian producer for the Latin-Foreign field and the other under Mr. Kolker's direction for the Anglo-American countries. The combined studios of the Novo and Bernini companies under the control of Ultra, have been completely equipped for this first Italian-American effort.

VAUDEVILLE BOOKING EXCHANGE

A new department has been initiated in the exhibition program of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., with the opening of a vaudeville booking office in the Los Angeles headquarters.

It is planned to establish a regular route over the Gore Brothers, Ramish & Sol Lesser string of houses, for a number of acts. The Kinema Theatre in Los Angeles will be the first house in which these acts will be played.

The new department is under the direction of Harry C. Arthur, Jr., who has secured William Newbery as booking agent.

TALMADGE ORGANIZATION MOVES

The booking department, in charge of Felix F. Feist, of the Norma Talmadge and the Constance Talmadge Film Companies, the publicity department, in charge of Beulah Livingstone, and the bookkeeping department in charge of Alonzo Kirkpatrick, will move next Monday, from the Talmadge Studios at 318 East 48th St., New York City, to the State Theatre Bldg. of that city. This change has been brought about by the rental of the Talmadge Studios to the Selznick organization, for a period of one year, during which time the Talmadge sisters will make most of their productions in California.

WARD WING FILMING MARK TWAIN STORIES

Ward Wing is directing a series of Mark Twain stories for Robert North Bradbury with Lyman Broeming as cameraman and Phil de Escrow as technical director.

Frank Kingsley and Russell Powell have been engaged to enact the leading male role and character lead respectively with William Moran as the heavy. Lillian Marshall has been signed as leading woman.

GRANDON PICTURE AT ALHAMBRA

"Lotus Blossom," a Leong But Jung production, directed by Frank Grandon, will open at the Alhambra, Nov. 26th.

MAY UNDERTAKE HUGE PHOTOPLAY

HOLUBAR AT BRUNTON

Allen Holubar, who produced "Man, Woman, Marriage" for Associated First National release, arrived in Los Angeles recently with Dorothy Phillips, his wife.

Preparations have already begun at Brunton studio for the production of Mr. Holubar's next play, the scenario of which was written by himself. Dorothy Phillips will enact the star role.

HAMPTON ON LATEST

Benjamin B. Hampton has started production on the photo-dramatization of his sixth Zane Grey novel, "Wildfire," an outdoor drama. Two complete producing crews are "shooting" the pictures. They are Eliot Howe and Jean Hersholt, directors; Gus Peterson, William Edmunds, and F. H. Sturgis, cameramen; James Townsend and David Hampton, assistant directors. E. Richard Schayer wrote the continuity.

COMPLETES SECOND

The filming of J. Inman Kane's book, "The Solace of the Woods," starring George Chesebro, was completed last week under the direction of Milburn Morante at the company's local studio. This is the second of eight north woods and Mounted Police stories featuring Chesebro for Clark-Cornelius release.

Current Reviews

"BLIND HEARTS"

Clune's

"Blind Hearts" is Hobart Bosworth's first independently produced picture to be released through Associated Producers. The story by Emilie Jonson contains many splendid situations for the star, but on the whole, it is a highly colored, improbable murder drama only rendered plausible by the portrayals of the superior cast. Moreover, while Roland Lee's direction is more than competent to handle Joseph Poland's scenario, the production's technical standard is greatly lowered by the always obvious North seas sets and miniatures, which are too glaringly faked to be imagined into realism ever.

Although the virile Bosworth quite naturally has "the part" in the picture, Lars Larsen, a soul whom even twenty years of bitter brooding cannot finally debase, he is admirally generous with the rest of the cast, in dealing out footage, a thing which gives "Blind Hearts" a very good dramatic balance. Larsen is an excellent position for Bosworth in which he offers some of his best strenuous work, throwing himself unreservedly into the heart-broken man's sullen character. The role will delight the thousands whose favorite he is.

In direct contrast to Larsen is John Thomas, the friend against whom the former holds a terrific, unspoken grudge. Wade Boteler in this situation, the troubled but unenlightened partner, keeps continual sympathy by means of his customarily high grade performing.

Perhaps the most sensitive portrayal in the piece is to be credited to Raymond McKee, who enacts Paul Thomas, a high strung lad whom circumstance comes within an ace of hanging. His enthusiasm as the happy boy and his human, almost childish anguish, as he later faces death in innocence, are vivid to the point of extracting really the most pronounced smiles and tears in the story. Here is a juvenile with unlimited dramatic possibilities.

William Conklin and Henry Hebert accomplish some exceedingly menacing opposition between them as James Curdy and James Bradley, the right hand men of Larsen and Thomas respectively, while the plot's real keynote is included in the action of Naomi, Lule Warrenton's capitally characterized halfbreed.

Madge Bellamy is well suited to the ingenue, Julia Larsen, as are Irene Blackwell and Colette Forbes to Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Larsen.

J. O. Taylor's photography is good.

"DANGEROUS LIES"

Grauman's

Famous Players-Lasky British Productions, Ltd., presents this week a surprisingly well produced picture, "Dangerous Lies," which is, however, an inordinately stereotyped story by E. Phillips Oppenheim. Made at Lasky's London studio, it is well photographed, satisfactorily lighted, and in it many elaborate sets are utilized. The cast is also good, and Director Paul Powell handles it with understanding. The scenario by Mary O'Connor far exceeds the prosy output of the titling department. It is, however, inconceivable that real energy should have been expended upon such insane material as the original which is based upon two of the world's most hackneyed situations.

Mary Glynne, a young English actress with charm, and an undisciplined tendency to exaggerate emotional moments, is seen in the principal portrayal, Jean Farrant. Nevertheless, she is kept pretty well in hand by the direction, and displays pleasing adaptability. Certainly Miss Glynne is a different type and therefore has much interest despite her spineless role.

David Powell of our own American screen plays the male lead, Sir Henry Bond, Joan's husband. Powell can always be depended upon for ease and finish, but he is unhappily allowed very little opportunity in this passive part.

Warburton Gamble as Pearce, the "heavy" first husband of the innocently "remarried" heroine, is very good, while Minna Grey is remarkably cast and enacts with marked sincerity Olive Farrant, Joan's affectionate sister.

Harry Ham has some clever comedy to his credit as has the actor who plays Sir Henry's brother. The two are well matched opposites.

Ernest Douglas completes the cast.

This picture points great progression for the British screen in technique; nevertheless it will fail to interest American audiences due to its insipid, done-to-death plot.

"NOBODY'S FOOL"

Superba

The most remarkable thing about Universal's latest Marie Prevost starring vehicle, "Nobody's Fool," is the work in it of Harry Myers, "The Connecticut Yankee," whose characterization of Harrison Alger, a professional woman hater is good for sixty minutes worth of laugh! We hear considerable from the supporting actor anent his lack of opportunity to "do his best" while "feeding" the more fortunate luminaries, but let us say that the speedy and clever Myers evidently looks upon no improved footage as a loss for he is "on his toes" every minute and as a result wrests the entire picture from its star with unconscious ease and picturesque grace. It is on account of his work that "Nobody's Fool" is lifted a notch higher than the average Universal program picture, although the direction by King Baggott, the Doris Schroeder scenario and the Bert Glennon photography are all up to standard. The story, by Roy Clements, is an inconsequential little thing with no particularly new twists, but possessing average entertainment value.

Miss Prevost is her very pretty, precocious young self in and will please generally with Polly Gordon, a not-very-ugly-duckling, who nevertheless experiences the necessary metamorphosis from goggles and hideous clothes into ruffles and curls to find herself overrun with unworthy suitors. It follows that she should pursue the only diffident one upon the horizon.

Vernon Snively isn't an especially terrifying heavy as Vincent de Puyster, but he passes in the part, while Helen Harris, R. Henry Guy, Percy Challenger, Lydia Titus and Lucretia Harris complete the cast save for George Kuwa who provides several chuckles with Ah Gone, the "Mongolian menial."

Taken by and large, "Nobody's Fool" fills the niche for which it was produced. What more?

"THE SERENADE"

Kinema

Upon the same program with "The Idle Class" during its second week's run locally, is R. A. Walsh's screen production for First National of Jose Codina's stage play, "The Serenade." Set in a Spanish province it makes a picturesque photoplay and affords opportunity for some effective fast action, but it is a more or less superficial subject and has been so "quickly" cut that the characters not only jerk around most annoyingly but the scenario, prepared by J. T. O'Donohue, is also injured.

Miriam Cooper heads the cast in the role of Maria del Carmen, a beautiful, high spirited senorita who would sacrifice herself for her gallant lover's safety. Miss Cooper's work always has delicate shadings and a willowy quality, but she has had considerably more advantageous positions in which to work than is this one.

George Walsh is more than equal to Pancho, the fiery tempered lover of the fair Maria, whose action is just one stunt after another, resulting in an almost Fairbanksian effect.

Bertram Grassby is dashingly devilish as he so well knows how to be in Ramon, the petted son of an usurper, Domingo Maticus, than which there is no more graceful character in the story as it is managed by Josef Swickard.

Rosita Marstini and James Marcus are very good in Senora del Carmen and Pepuso, while Noble Johnson makes a thrillingly real "bad bandit."

Adelbert Knott as Don Fulgencio, William Eagle Eye, Ardita Milano and Peter Venzuela complete the list of players.

The Screen Writers' Forum

Conducted by Ted Le Berthon
Editor of The Photodramatist

I know of nothing more deplorable than the tendency in America to disparage all works of art not leveled to popular comprehension. This same tendency may exist among the masses in other lands; on this point I cannot write with any measure of authority, as I only possess vague, second-hand information.

Nothing is more certain than that this cancer has spread into the motion picture area. I recently heard the screen works of William DeMille criticised, on much the same grounds as a one-story-browed acquaintance of mine criticised—perhaps I should say ridiculed—the Marion Morgan dancers in their recent appearance on an Orpheum program which was for the most part jazzy and typically vulgar. William de Mille's treatment of screen stories stands forth in the motion picture industry as the Morgan dancers stood apart from the rest of the Orpheum offerings.

While I do not entirely agree with a certain author who claimed to have ouijagraphic information to the effect that Hell is an enlightened democracy, I do believe a distorted conception of democracy has caused such phenomenal ideas as this: that a livery-stable proprietor's opinion of a work of art is as sound as that of any one who has made a deep study of that art form.

There is a fiction abroad in Movieland to the effect that the masses are unable to rise to any subtle or profound work of screen art. This is one of the most damnably ridiculous concepts ever expressed. "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "Broken Blossoms"—by far David Wark Griffith's masterpiece—and the final episode of "While New York Sleeps," were artistic photodramas. All were box-office successs, the criteria of public approval. In fact, I feel certain that "While New York Sleeps," would have failed utterly had it depended on the first two episouls.

It is generally stated that Cecil B. de Mille's "The Whispering Chorus" was a box-office failure. I have no authentic proof of this, but if it is so, I cannot at all doubt that it was due to the war period during which this photoplay was released. The horror which swept the world, caused most of us to turn eagerly and pathetically to any mode of gayety, no matter how unnatural or forced. Therefore the release of "The Whispering Chorus" was not timely; today it might fare much better.

It would be futile to deny that most Americans prefer entertainment of a light, frothy, merry type; it would be equally futile to deny that they avert the gaze in the presence of tragedy. Even when inexorable facts mercilessly beat them down, they seek some twentieth century metaphysical hocus-pocus, some spirit-deadening and sense-dulling panacea to still their troubled souls.

Several writers in literary magazines have condemned the motion picture because it told its stories in pictures, thereby tending to make the masses more inarticulate than ever. They claim that the films cater to "herd inertia," causing interest in printed literature to decline.

Alas, the films or any other art form, are but mirrors of current thought. For instance, I know a man who gloats over the fact that he seldom reads anything on the grounds that he doesn't want his own high thought alloyed. He would by no means think of attending the performance of a symphony, and ridicules what he terms man-made arts. Also, he wants to be a "regular fellow." He does admit to reading a certain book presuming to represent the all-in-all of metaphysics—over and over again.

As Art is man-made, if only indirectly, no high regard for art is possible with one of the aforementioned person's predispositions.

VICTOR POTEL

In fact, such a type of man is intrinsically of the unburied dead; through adhering to philosophies and metaphysical systems which pretend to the securing of ultimate peace, serenity, harmony, his creative faculties become atrophied; he becomes mentally flabby, spiritually anaesthetized—and painfully dumb, inarticulate.

The happy ending and the over-sentimentalized photoplay is the result of a racial decadence which makes for spiritual cowardice—that demands a soft place to light upon! The spirit of high adventure, which accepts Life and Death and scorns them both, is not present in our national consciousness.

There is one thing possible, providing there are enough honest artists to pioneer—and that is propaganda, which can be made the friend instead of the enemy of art. Of course, advertising and publicity are the children of propaganda.

I believe a movement could be started enlisting all the recognized screen writers—say the membership of the Screen Writers' Guild—with a prize offered by some man with both money and artistic ideals, for the best photoplay written. The competition could be given publicity by all the foremost literary magazines. The judges could be selected from among such men as Gilbert Seldes, Ludwig Lewissohn, Francis Hackett, Heywood Broun, Theodore Dreiser, George Jean Nathan, and Carl Sandburg.

Through clever publiicty, such a contest itself could be given wide newspaper publicity, such as would warrant someone financing the photoplay production to be made from the winning story. The judges would be given authority to select director, technical people and cast.

An intelligently directed advertising campaign, levelled at one of human nature's utmost weaknesses, vanity, could put the American public on its mettle as discriminators of the beautiful and profound. Mention could be made in advertising copy to the effect that those of low and vulgar taste were not expected to attend presentations of this photoplay-chosen by the most able criticis this side of the Atlantic!

Friends of art will look with horror upon any idea of advertising and publicity. Frankly, my idea may be full of flaws, may be ridiculously visionary—but I believe advertising may be harnessed for one purpose or another, just as is electricity. It all depends upon who controls the direction of either force.

I believe the American public could be gradually shamed into an appreciation of better photoplays. No matter how obtuse one is, seldom will one admit to being a dumb-bell. If dumb-bells are asked to stay away, lo and behold: a metamorphosis will be effected—all dumb-bells will suddenly believe themselves to be thoughtful men and women, their vanities and curiosities will be piqued, and they'll attend!

Once this idea is successfully consummated, the very strongholds of the intelligentsia will have been penetrated. There will follow in the wake of such a movement the endowed photoplay, the Little Theater of the Screen, and a national elevation of taste.

There is nothing amiss about the photoplay as a medium of art expression; all obstructions to this expression are inherent in the modus operandi of production, distribution, exploitation and advertising.

Even our modern metaphysicians and their followers might be won over; the very integral weakness in their premises would make them eventually susceptible to a higher beauty—the beauty born of sadness, of a realization that Life has no final analysis, that capturing infinity is no pastime for finites.

A competition such as I outlined a few paragraphs back should bring forth a veritable epitome of Life—a photoplay which may be pathetic, terrible, and true; yet deeply beautiful, leaving a hurt in the heart that would make all of us more generous, more baffled.

And so "we would learn to hold all lovely things more beautiful because they move in fugitive battalions manifold."

MUMMERS TEMPORARILY SUSPEND ACTIVITIES

Due to the ill health of Mrs. Meredith Woodward, sponsor of and energetic worker in The Mummers Workshop, and the European trip of Mr. Clarence Thomas, dramatic director of the organization, who is studying Little Theatre conditions abroad, activities at the Workshop have been temporarily suspended.

Meanwhile Mrs. Woodward is negotiating for the sale of the present workshop and the old Dugout on Morgan Place to facilitate the erection of a new Little Theatre in Hollywood for the Mummers' utilization in the spring.

Editorial

"The actor goes to such and such a management or studio and finds that he can only obtain work by paying a big commission to the favored agency. Perhaps he accepts the situation and takes his loss—on that one occasion. But the next time that management or studio desires his services, he adds just that much more to his salary. And the producer pays it.

"If the managers want production costs to come down, they must stop this sort of thing."

The History of Copyright

By Irving S. Baltimore

Because we believe that the following article opening the legal series by Mr. Baltimore in this publication, will prove both intensely interesting as well as informative, to our readers, we are devoting to it our own particular space in this week's issue. There is nothing so important to the professional man who would succeed, as a complete familiarity with all national and state legislations affecting him through his calling.

To fully understand such, it is necessary for him to be acquainted with all historical matters that have brought influence to bear upon the subject. The history of the copyright law is comprehensively covered here.

F. R.

It has been repeatedly stated that the history of copyright law, unlike most branches of jurisprudence, is not lost in antiquity. This assertion appears to be postulated largely upon the theory that little profit could have accrued from literary production prior to the invention of printing. However, what modicum of evidence afforded us, reveals an ancient sense of ownership in creations of the mind, and consequent resentment at abuses thereof. It seems highly probable that the origin of claim to property of this character, came contemporaneously with, or shortly after the use of parchment and papyrus received its impetus. That search of the Justinian codes and other available compilations of ancient law, discloses no mention of anything in the nature of copyright, can be attributed to the fact that no distinction was then drawn between this and property of other character.

Traditions of Homer, the blind author of the Illiad, and his contemporary rhapsodists, afford no enlightenment as to the status of authors in their day. But the fact that their means of publication were confined to oral utterance, may account for the absence of any question in this behalf. Parchment and papyrus made it possible to preserve the labors of the poet, the historian and the philosopher, and the introduction of the scrivener and copyist led to the multiplication of copies of their works.

Greek dramatists relied on public performance of their plays for pecuniary reward, as largely do the dramatists of today. There is mention in Roman literature of the sale of playrights by dramatic authors. Martial speaks of certain book-sellers who have copies of certain of his poems for sale, and Horace refers to a firm of book-sellers as likely to profit greatly from a certain book. Many outcries against errors in transcription by copyists are found in Latin prose and poetry. Cicero's letters reflect a current conception of literary property and payment for its use.

Probably in the second Century, B. C., the Roman Jurist, Gaius, upheld the superior right of an artist in his painting. In the Sixth Century this decision was adopted by Tribonian editor-in-chief of the Justinian Codes, and was applied in a modern case, involving John Leech's wood cuts.

Our earliest record of a copyright case, Finnian vs. Colomba, in the year 567, was chronicled fifty years later by Adamnan, and cited by Montalembert in "The Monks of the West." The facts surround St. Colomba's surreptitious copying of a psalter in possession of Finnian, his instructor, who recovered the same under the decision of King Dermott, rendered in the Halls of Tara, "To every cow her calf." This decision, chronicled so many years subsequent to its alleged rendition, though of disputed authenticity, pithily enunciates the common law doctrine of copyright. Common law is that body of law which, in England, sprung from common custom and long usage, and came to be regarded as part of the law of the commonwealth, finally receiving judicial sanction as such in decisions of courts of the realm. The term in effect is synonomus with unwritten, as distinguished from statutory law. The common law has been adopted by all our States, except Louisiana.

The recognition of copyright as a definite and distinct entity in jurisprudence, is the result of the possibility of widespread and increased multiplication of publications, which came with the introduction of printing with type. Prior to this, the multiplication of copies of any book was a difficult and protracted task.

Gutenberg printed a book with moveable type at Mentz in 1451. In 1465 two Germans opened a printing establishment in a monastery near Rome, two years later removing to Rome. John of Spira began printing in 1469 at Venice. Louis XI commissioned to Mentz Nicholas Jensen, who brought the art to France in 1469. The first press in England was set up by Caxton in 1474. The earliest printers confined their publications to prayer books and similar religious works. The first book of a secular nature, Cicero's "Offices," being published in 1465.

The initial grant of a copyright, revealed by available history, was issued to John of Spira by the Senate of Venice in 1469, bestowing upon him the exclusive right for a period of five years, to publish the epistles of Cicero and Pliny. Peter of Ravenna, in 1491, was granted the exclusive right to print and sell his "Phoenix," the first

"HAIL THE WOMAN"

(Preview)

Thomas Ince has not recently offered the public a photodrama in any way comparable to "Hail the Woman," his latest special, as yet unreleased; and, for that matter, neither have very many other producers whose capabilities have been so severely taxed by the story drouth through which we are passing. This screen play, however, is based upon a compelling theme which could scarcely have received more effective treatment than it is given in C. Gardner Sullivan's scenario, or a more interesting presentation than Director John Griffith Wray has afforded it under Mr. Ince's supervision. It is the age old story of woman's struggle toward the light of emancipation, of her soul's justification and it is exquisitely told in the heartaches and accomplishments of one Puritanical family. Daring situations are so delicately handled as to reach great beauty which is augmented by a set of excellent subtitles. Perhaps there are moments when the picture's suspense, managed differently, might have saved it from possible criticism for dragginess, but they are really inconsiderable.

Technically the production is very nearly beyond reproach and the performances reach the utmost in artistry. Although the all-star cast may hardly be said to be headed by any one individual, Florence Vidor is situated in the leading sympathetic role, Judith Beresford, a girl of modern times who is, nevertheless, submitted to persecutions for the infliction of which our half barbaric Pilgrim Fathers are yet famous. Her rebellion and accession to her place in the sun are played humanly and sincerely, as Miss Vidor would be depended upon to portray any part while in addition she lends Judith that strange charm which invariably surrounds the consistently strong feminine spirit.

But the surprising interpretation in this drama, unusually enough, comes in the ingenue, Nan Higgins, an ignorant little child wife whose unguided loyalty and instinct to love lead her finally to the death of those who are incompetent to understand and cope with Life's realities. Every so often the misfortunes, the tragedies of womankind descend in fury to crush the most helpless of the specie and in this case the inevitable subject is a forlorn little figure whose child soul, a combination of common clay and the divine, is Griffithistic in its toning. In the part Madge Bellamy, a comparatively new screen recruit, reveals unlimited dramatic possibilities establishing herself, as it were, in a moment upon the threshhold of big things.

Lloyd Hughes has never given a more appealing performance than he does here as David Beresford, the secret husband of tiny Nan, whose innate good cannot ultimately be stifled by a hypocritical environment. The transition of the vascilating boy into a man of outlook and determination is a beautiful piece of acting.

A deviation from his customary type of work is Theodore Roberts' characterization, old Mr. Beresford, a hangover from the Puritan period. His self justified bigotry and hypocrisy are convincing even in their few lighter moments. He is unsurpassably typical as is Gertrude Claire in Mrs. Beresford, his submissive wife and servant.

Tully Marshall is a hideous apparition as the greedy "Odd jobs man" and Charles Meredith tops his own standard with his comparatively brief action in Judith's unwavering sweetheart.

BORIS KARLOFF

Muriel Frances Dana, an exceptionally clever kiddie, Edward Martindel, Vernon Dent and Mathilde Brundage complete the list of players.

Here is a filmplay that the world will love for its human interest and that the profession will admire for its artistry. Its success is assured.

"THE GRIM COMEDIAN"

California

Rita Weiman's stories of the stage are always certain to contain colorful situations and one or more fascinatingly unconventional twists; therefore they have come to be greatly looked forward to by the more blase fans. "The Grim Comedian," Goldwyn's production of the Weiman original from Bess Meredith's scenario is no exception in this respect and is, generally speaking, superior from point of story to other of her produced cinemadramas. A clever method of introduction is an important item of presentation in that it gets away from the ordinary as, for that matter, does the body of the play.

Frank Lloyd handles the entire production as he is in the habit of doing, completely, naturally.

Marie La Monte, the chief feminine role of interest in the play, is greatly to the credit of Phoebe Hunt, an actress of unquestionable ability who is, however, a stranger to Los Angeles screens. Her anxious mother sequences are equalled by her introductory work as the careless, generous Broadway favorite who "likes to see life through plate glass windows." She controls "The Grim Comedian's" motivation.

Jack Holt in the opposing role, Martin, is an ideal "man about town" and does some of his best deliberate performing. That his action should finally include a big sacrifice episode in which he brings the house close to tears, is an agreeably uncomplicated way in which to dispose of the climax.

Gloria Hope makes a convincing ingenue of Dorothy La Monte, the convent bred daughter for whom great abnegations are undertaken; while John Harron is always on hand with the juvenile, Geoffrey Hutchins.

Bert Woodruff and Laura La Varnie offer some invaluable comedy and human interest touches to the theatre atmosphere and Joseph Dowling is excellent as Carleton Hutchins.

Mae Hopkins completes the cast.

Robert Beaudine's photography is very good.

"PLAYTHINGS OF DESTINY"

Kinema

It is perhaps fortunate for some of our authors and producers that the world does not always demand logic or even very good sense as a basis for its entertainment. Jane Murfin and Mary Timble, the conceivers of Louis B. Mayer's "Playthings of Destiny" are among these, for they have created a story which although most improbable, depending upon a string of far fetched coincidences to unfold its plot, holds a fairly high degree of entertainment value due to several lively emotional situations, against which background the fate of a child is silhouetted. Some good Arctic and tropical scenery is utilized in the picture, but the repetition of the "storm idea" which starts the story upon its journey to also precipitate the climax will be generally considered "too much of a good thing," even if the tornadoes occur in opposite corners of the world.

Edwin Carewe's direction of the Anthony Paul Kelly ecenario is far from being either brilliant or subtle, but it gets through the play in an average manner.

Robert Kurrle's camera work is very good.

Anita Stewart in the stellar role, Julie Laneau, is not especially enlightening. To start, there is nothing admirable, modernly speaking, in her character which is the victim of circumstances continually, and certainly her old fashioned emotionalism is a bit dull. Moreover, Miss Stewart's one time attraction has fled along with, apparently, her absorption in her work.

In Geoffrey Arnold, Julia's misjudged first husband, Herbert Rawlinson is sufficient, if not perfectly cast.

The most superior portryal in the story, however, is undoubtedly accomplished by Walter McGrail who enacts Herbert Randolph, the ambitious second husband, another semi-heavy with a sacrifice finish. McGrail's work is consistent and convincing.

Little Richard Headrick is a beguiling baby, while Grace Morse and William Mong are customarily good in Clarice, a blackmailer, and Conklin, her agent.

"Playthings of Destiny" is a First National release.

The Screen Writers' Forum

Conducted by Ted Le Berthon
Editor of The Photodramatist

To the thoughtful writer, the unfavorable comparisons of screen plays to printed literature must appear decidedly unfair; for not only must the relative ages of the two mediums of expression be considered, but it must be borne in mind that few stage plays —in the enacting—approach the master works of novelists or even short story writers, in subtlety, breadth or depth.

The screen has been heckled and twitted for some time past because of the conventional happy endings to almost all photoplays, and because of the trite themes and plots employed.

Now, as a screen play or a stage play both demand, for a complete expression, an interpretation by a cast of players, a director and a technical staff, it seems only reasonable that comparisons should be made in this field rather than that the book-photoplay controversy should be prolonged.

It may be reasonably assumed that the printed word can convey subtler, deeper and more complex thought than any other human contrivance for expression, with the exception of music. A book forms a direct contact with its reader, however, while a stage play or screen play does not. In other words, the merit of a photoplay scenario or continuity may never come to light, on account of a wretched interpretation—which is irrevocably unfortunate, as a story is usually screened but once. A play may, for instance, seem far different when enacted by a first rate cast than when enacted by an ordinary stock company.

It is the boast of devotees of the stage that not only has the stage play achieved more dignity and distinction at its high water marks than the photoplay, but that the stage as a medium of art expression possesses far more scope than the screen. This last contention is probably based on the high regard for the emotional possibilities of the human voice.

It is undeniably true that the finest and noblest stage plays, extending over a period of several centuries are vastly superior to any photoplay thus far evolved—in point of beauty and profundity. But it is not so certain that the stage is the subtler or higher medium of expression. In fact, the screen is akin to printed literature; it depends on the reaction of one sense only, making for concentration in this respect. Furthermore, the subtitle is of course a borrowing from literature—and ideas can be printed, even in subtitles, that would sound extravagant or unnatural if spoken; I refer to poetic, romantic and philosophical ideas. Most of all, however, the advantage of the screen over the stage is obviously in the overcoming of the limitations of space; the world is the movie stage, in all truth, and the sense of artificiality which pervades the stage—on account of drops, painted scenery, etc.—is not characteristic of the screen.

The motion picture has been accused of resting its case on its possibilities. Well, what of it? What would happen to the stage if it were hampered by the many economic determinants affecting the screen? But let us take a few specific cases of stories which were both dramatized and photodramatized, which found expression on the stage and also on the screen.

No one but an utterly bigoted fool would affirm that the stage version of "The Miracle Man" even approached the screen story in grandeur and significance. I for one don't think Mr. Packard's novel, to begin with, had any of the glorious sweeps which so sublimated and poetized the screen play.

"Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" on the screen was a far more vividly sinister and life-plumbing document than it was on the stage.

I doubt if any stage version of "Bynarry" ever approached the German screen version which featured Pola Negri.

Of course there are even a greater number of excellent stage plays which were badly botched in the screening—but this is not because of the inferiority of the screen as a medium, but because of inferiority of treatment—by less able and intelligent directors, players and technicians.

Candidly, if the so-called New York successes which reach Los Angeles are any criterion, I fail to see the marked superiority of current plays over current films. For instance, the happy ending bugaboo is just as much in evidence in stage plays as it is in screen plays.

The photoplay will progress artistically and intrinsically—perhaps the two terms are synonymous—when the screen writer may create "individuals" instead of "types." Few human beings—especially interesting human beings—can be adequately represented by a dominating characteristic. Realism will advance when the fundamental truth is recognized, that the hero is fifty per cent villian and the villian fifty per cent hero. Within the scope of a single photoplay, it would not be conducive to good drama to endow one's characters in such equalized proportions, but it would be intensely human to make the villian a villian in relation to his environment and circumstances—i. e. the code of his immediate neighbors, friends, family and in comparison (page Einstein) to the higher qualities manifest in the hero. Getting to the facts of life, one finds that the hero of today was the cad of yesterday—and perhaps tomorrow? Here again Nature's law of periodicity comes into play: flux and reflux, sistole and diastole, day and night, summer and winter. Sustained, fixed heroism or villiany is unthinkable.

Aside from moral considerations—considerations which lose all meaning to a higher type of person—there are artistic considerations: Does a villian always look so different from a hero? Does he ever stroke dark, silken mustaches while the hero has all the bearing of a pseudo Greek God or an exalted Schubert chorus man? So all rubes say "Wal, I swan," and wear straw behind their ears? So all young girls behave like screen and stage ingenues? The answer is obvious.

Therefore, the need for finer distinctions, for individual characterization. At any rate, it is seldom in ordinary circumstances that heroes or villians are made. Two men, both well educated and prepossessing, may adhere to a similar code of ethics. They may both be a combination of saint and sinner—i. e., saint and sinner according to Occidental traditions, usage, popular theology; in the ultimate sense, they are both just human. Only in a crisis, in an exceptional situation, will one of the two prove the daring, brave exceptional man—and therefore the hero.

True, it is harder for an audience to follow individualization, running as it does from the known to the unknown, than to follow "type." But the screen writer with artistic ideals is concerned with his own actions, his own integrity—and not with reactions. He should not be conscious of the eventual audience; no genuine artist is. And only as a crop of true artists is reared among photodramatists will the motion picture rise to its destined grandeur.

Fontaine La Rue has signed with Universal.

Jacqueline Logan has signed a long term contract with Goldwyn.

HOLLYWOOD HIGHLY RESPECTED SAYS LESSER

Sol Lesser, of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., now in New York City where he is arranging distribution for Jackie Coogan productions, and at the same time attending the executive meetings of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., writes:

"The general theory that New York regards Hollywood and its cinema industry in a bad light is absolutely untrue. In my two weeks in New York, I have thus far heard nothing but good words about cinema Hollywood. The rumors that New Yorkers were circulating stories that were harmful to the reputation of the West Coast picture colony are also false. Hollywood has always been looked upon with a great deal of respect from the eastern metropolis and that feeling still exists."

NORMAND BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mabel Normand was tendered a surprise birthday party recently by friends including Mack Sennett, William D. Taylor, Mrs. Catherine Sennett, mother of the producer, Fay Borden, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Asher, Dick Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Mueller and John Grey.

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

Alfred E. Green

We know of no modern picture director whose rise on the ladder of fame has been more consistent than has Al Green's, the man who was largely responsible for the production of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and "Through the Back Door," and who is at the present time directing a special photoplay for Goldwyn.

Commencing in the ranks at the old Selig Studio, Green passed through the assistant director's stage and graduated into full fledged directorship on that renouned lot, only to proceed to Fox, Goldwyn and other big organizations in the same capacity.

Today it is rumored that he has signed a long term contract with one of our Hollywood outfits where he will start work upon the completion of "Sent For—Out," the Rupert Hughes story, with which he is now engaged.

ROSE ROSANOVA

Madame Rose Rosanova, Russian player, well-known to New York, is doing one of the biggest screen roles of her career for the Goldwyn company. It is "Anna," the mother in "Hungry Hearts."

The actress was personally selected to play the role, by the author, Anzia Yezierska, who came into prominence a year of so ago, with her startling stories of Russian immigrant life. Yezierska believes Madame Rosanova to be the living impersonation of the mother character, as does E. Mason Hopper, the picture's director.

Madame Rosanova recently finished "Just Around the Corner," an all-star cast picture made by the Cosmopolitan Productions, and the release of this picture will occur shortly before the completion of "Hungry Hearts." Other roles of the actress have been the mother part in "Resurrection" and "Redemption," and leading roles in "The Power of Darkness," "The Kreutzer Sonata," etc.

BETWEEN PICTURES VACATION

Lige Conley has gone to the mountains for a short vacation. He will play the featured role in Jack White's next comedy for Educational, as yet untitled.

Rupert Grieve, now working at Vitagraph, is a newcomer here, having arrived from Australia but recently.

The entire film colony is mourning the death of Willis Robards, who passed on suddenly two weeks ago. No profession forgets the men who have been to it what this capable actor was to ours.

After work has begun on the London plant, Mr. Rothacker will conclude arrangements for the erection of a New York laboratory.

Do you believe in Oil Leases?

If so, we offer you the best proposition

Have you let opportunities pass you? If so, you yourself know the reason.

We offer you a speculative opportunity of unusual merit, believing that you wish, no doubt, to make more money.

We emphasize the fact you cannot afford to let this proposition go unnoticed. A two-cent stamp or a personal interview will give you information, that, if you have a little money and nerve, will result in returns financially, that will no doubt offset a lot of your past losses.

Remember the fellow who has made the Big Money, did not make it in stocks, but in owning the lease.

"MISS LULU BETT"
Grauman's

If there is a phase of American domestic life that is almost totally neglected in our fiction, it is, perhaps, that unpleasantest and most generally known one having to do with tedious, pointless "family rowing," but Zona Gale has mercilessly dragged the skeleton out of the public's closet in her realistic story, "Miss Lulu Bett" and has presented the horrible but foolish problem in her famously efficient manner. In cinematizing "Miss Lulu Bett," from Clara Beranger's continuity, William de Mille has used the keenest of insight in the subject's treatment and the result is a comedy drama rendered universally appealing by the fact that it is within the experience of ninety per cent of the audience.

Lois Wilson in the title role does some of her cleverest characterizing. The simplicity of this actress' less lovely women is responsible for their marked and otherwise unexplainable charm. Here she is seen as a dependent, slaving sister and aunt in the home of others.

Milton Sills is able to dispatch the male lead, Cornish, a village school teacher, correctly with little outlay of effort, while Theodore Roberts and Clarence Burton each offer carefully done opposition with comedy highlights, as the Deacon brothers, Dwight and Ninion. The former, a blustering tyrant with, however, a tendency to "backwater" is a no more common type than the latter, an uneducated wanderer with little sense of responsibility or honor.

Mabel Van Buren, Helen Ferguson and May Giraci are all splendid choices for Dwight's wife and daughters. They do some unusual teamwork.

Ethel Wales is a riot as Grandma Bett, an old lady with "tantrims" who with Taylor Graves completes the cast.

Cinematographer Guy Wilkey has some excellent work to his credit in this Lasky production.

"A TRIP TO PARADISE"
Loew's

Franz Molnar's stage play, "Liliom," has been scenarized by June Mathis, retitled "A Trip to Paradise," and serves Bert Lytell as the starring vehicle which Metro releases this week at the opening of Lowe's State Theatre. It is an exceedingly human little photoplay incorporating one rather startling episode which has been given possibly a little better than mediocre production by Maxwell Karger. If it has nothing to attract intense interest—it is not alone. There are many others.

The star's characterization of Curley Flynn, an amusement park "Barker," is up to his high standard throughout and is, of course, the excuse for the picture. Anyway, Lytell's personality is not the kind to be easily "aped" and he stands pretty much alone, especially in his comedy.

Virginia Valli is truly delightful as the "regular" girl, Nora O'Brien, whom Curley marries. The role is one of those "simple" affairs which is so excessively "difficult" for many of our experienced ingenues to handle.

Eunice Vin Moore's interpretation of the character heavy, widow Boland, the proprietress of a roller coaster beach concession, is played with cleverness; and Victory Bateman could not have been better placed than she is in Mrs. Smiley, a female photographer who serves in the capacity of Nora's unpleasant aunt.

Nigel de Brulier is impressingly etheral as the Heavenly Judge, while Brinsley Shaw and Eva Gordon are also included in the cast of this picture which was well photographed by Arthur Martinelli.

Editorial

instance of copyright accorded directly to an author. We find the first copyright in Germany; issued at Nuremberg, in 1501. In England the first privilege of this nature was reserved unto Richard Pynson, the Kind's Printer, in 1518.

The advent of printing came almost simultaneously with the discovery of America and the Reformation. This period was marked by a general ferment throughout Europe, a manifestation both intellectual and religious. The authorities, perceiving the danger of dissemination of new ideas by the press, exercised the bestowal of copyright grants in such a fashion as to act as a censorship, enabling them to prohibit publications which they elected to regard as treasonable or heretical. The avowed purpose of the Stationer's Company in England, chartered in 1556, was to prevent the propagation of the Protestant reformation. Accordingly, at the outset, copyright privilege was a matter of license, subject to the caprice of those in power. Its subsequent development into a legal right, secured by simple formality of registration and deposit, was slow in evolution.

The Statute of Anne, enacted in England in the Eighth year of the reign of Queen Anne, has the distinction of being the first copyright enactment. This statute, of which Swift was the putative author, originally intended to preserve and further the interests of the writer, ultimately had the effect of greatly curtailing his rights. As finally construed, the author's rights were limited to the express terms of the statute, abolishing the legal conception of perpetuity in copyright, which now exists in Guatemala, Mexico and Venezuela alone.

Until the Revolution, in France the author's rights were a subject of license. In 1791 was enacted the first French copyright law, reserving unto the dramatist exclusive right to exploit his plays upon the stage. This right was not acquired by English playwrights until 1833, and American dramatists remained without this protection until 1851.

To Noah Webster, whose "Speller" was first to benefit thereby, must be credited the introduction of copyright legislation in the United States. Webster travelled from State to State, urging the necessity of copyright protection. As a result of his labors, a copyright act was passed in Connecticut in 1783, followed by the Massachusetts act two months later, that of Virginia in 1785, and those of New York and New Jersey in 1786. The Federal Statute of 1790, however, obviated the need of further state legislation in this behalf. The scope of this statute has since been enlarged by repeated amendment. The act now in force in the United States is that of 1909, as amended by the acts of 1912, 1913 and 1914.

The Convention of Berne, finally ratified in 1887, extended to the author of works protected in any member country, equal rights in other member states, without observation of any formality, or deposit of copies in such foreign states. Legislation of this International Corpyright Union, numbering among its members most of the great powers of the world, has been closely followed in the Buenos Aires Convention of the Pan American Union. The United States, due to the so-called Manufacturing Clause, requiring publication from type set and plates made within its territory, has remained without the great Union.

The long campaign, to which can be attributed copyright reform in the United States, was conducted largely by the American Copyright League under the Presidency of James Russell Lowell, and later under that of Edmund Clarence Stedman. Bronson Howard, vice-president of the League, and president of the American Dramatic Club, was the foremost advocate of dramatic copyright.

TAKES BRIEF REST

Alice Lake has gone to Big Bear Lake for a few days' rest after completing work in "Kisses," her newest Metro starring picture.

IN "WILDFIRE"

Jean Hersholt, director from Denmark, enacts the role of a half-wit in the Benj. B. Hampton picture, "Wildfire." Mr. Hersholt also directs one of the producing units, and is a member of the continuity staff.

Charlotte Pierce is playing a part in "The Woman He Married," starring Anita Stewart.

W. Lawson Butt is to be starred in a series of pictures by a San Francisco concern.

Sidney Franklin is playing the part of The Viceroy in Hayakawa's current R-C production, "The Vermilion Pencil."

Adele Watson, who played "Eliie" in Marion Fairfax's "The Lying Truth," is now playing in "Penrod."

Arthur Rankin who has completed his role with Shirley Mason in "Little Aliens," for Fox, is now playing a part in "The Five Dollar Baby," starring Viola Dana.

Lenore Lynard, who recently returned from a four months' vacation in New York, has been cast in Betty Compson's latest photoplay directed by Wm. D. Taylor.

William A. Seiter, director of Doris May productions, is engaging a cast for Miss May's third picture, "Boy Crazy."

Ethel Broadhurst, Mark Jones and George Rowe are playing in support of "Paul" Parrott in his forthcoming comedy, a burlesque on "The Miracle Man."

J. H. Howell has been engaged as technical director for Rex Ingram. Mr. Howell previously served in the same capacity with Mary Pickford in "Little Lord Fauntleroy."

Edward Jobson, recently with Alice Lake in "The Kiss," is now playing a part in Herbert Rawlinson's current production for Universal.

Jack Hoxie and his company have left for Victorville to film exterior scenes for "Under Orders," the star's next picture under the direction of Roy Clements.

Charlotte Woods, who appears in Al Green's latest picture for Goldwyn, wants to know why the youthful female is so often depicted on the screen as a diminutive, sickly looking flapper. Maybe that's because Charlotte is an athletically inclined five-foot-five-incher herself.

Victory Bateman has been given a part in Bert Lytell's new picture, "Tommy Carteret," which Bayard Veiller is directing. This will be Miss Bateman's second appearance in support of Mr. Lytell, her first being "A Trip to Paradise," one of Mr. Lytell's most recent productions.

"The Battle of Jutland," the motion picture that has been in preparation in England since the close of the war, has been brought to the United States by Educational Film Exchanges and will soon be released for showing in this country. E. R. Russell of London has just arrived in the United States to supervise the first American presentation of the film.

I feel that there is a great opportunity for a thoroughly experienced authority to advise and assist the well-dressed men of this city in the selection of their Evening Clothes.

It would seen that, in a profession which perhaps harbors the greatest number of "I knew him when" chirpers ever assembled, more minds would consider each and every angle of the way to success in and progress with their calling. Particularly should those who have ascended in it, either a little or a great way, be jealous of their accomplishments to the extent of guarding against retrogression into this large unhappy class which has "missed" and as a group of failures, has been forced to confine its self expression to reminiscense.

Artists, however, are unimaginably careless, which probably accounts for the fact that there is much genius, one-time recognized genius, to be found among the hangers-on and outcasts from the moving picture industry today. Strict attention to business, good judgment and a courteous viewpoint are among the requirements whose lack in the makeups of so many, have entailed unnecessary grief. Nothing could be more tragic than one's inability to justify and protect his talent.

An acquaintance inadvertantly stumbled onto the explanation of a vital phase of this situation for us last week. Once a studio manager of considerable local renoun, he is today looking for a position as casting director, efficiency expert or publicist. About a Hollywood producer to whom he had applied in vain for a situation he was heard to remark: "Times have rather changed—four years ago I kicked that fellow off of my lot. Perhaps he remembers." Yes, we'll wager that this financially safe, artistically made picture man, does and will remember, a recollection which can hardly benefit our friend professionally. Hurts are borne no more easily when one is on the crest of the wave, but there are possibilities for retaliation from such a vantage.

Indulgence in crudeness and discourtesy are quickly balanced against one in a field that, being governed to a great extent by pull, is therefore undergoing continual shifts in which breath-taking advances and reverses are effected with little thought. We have in mind a dozen cases to prove our point forwards and back again.

For instance there is the incident of a woman star who was disinterestedly kind to an extra boy in the pioneer days. When the established company which engaged them both suspended activities the youngster was scarcely discommoded. He knew other studios and was on the upward path. He lost track of the old time star, but two years later when filling an official capacity he discovered that she was suffering materially for the lack of engagement by a new generation of screen executives.

It was the young man's chance to repay former kindnesses with a word which led to the first part. It was only human to speak it and the woman is a celebrity again. The law of compensation is inevitable.

As we sit writing this plea for the climber to "get on to himself," to learn the art of compensation and courtesy, if not for the merit then for the diplomacy in the practise, a "full dress boy" who has filled out the atmosphere of a hundred productions passes our window. He is at work for perhaps a ten dollar check at a nearby studio. What assistant, director or producer himself, will be rude to the lad this afternoon? Someone may today term him a "rotten actor," clumsy, etc. Pathetic? Not very! In the checkbook of this inordinately stupid young man appears a balance lately inherited which will make him a future corporation president. Almost funny, isn't it, to imagine his hundreds of thousands of good picture dollars being "cussed" about a set by one or many who would mortgage years to be able to invest them for the meek but human "full dress," one of twenty in this week's comedy? Seriously, if inelegantly—"You never can tell"—but there is after all a safe end. We'd better all play it. F. R.

Unintelligent?

No matter how one views the extract from "The Summons," a legal periodical, below printed (and many of us will resent its near-insolence with good cause), it is yet interesting and broadening for us to hear the other man's angle. And although we feel that, speaking generally, its sentiment is unfair to our picture writers and producers, there are unquestionably those who would do well to take it to heart. The only difficulty is that those who need it will probably find difficulty in recognizing the fact.

"Although there is no doubt that most of the motion pictures do everything to emphasize sex matters, still a moral censorship under the law may not be desirable. But can any thoughtful person doubt that an intellectual censorship is needed? Enjoyment of the wonderful art of the screen is nowadays often precluded to one who possesses and respects a spark of intellectual dignity. But that is not a legal question."

BLACKTON COMPLETES NATURAL COLOR FILM

J. Stuart Blackton recently completed in London, England, his ten-reel photoplay in natural colors, "The Glorious Adventure," after months of work.

Lady Diana Manners, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Rutland, heads a cast of all-star artists, among whom may be mentioned: Gerald Lawrence, Alice Crawford, Cecil Humphreys, Lennox Pawle, William Luff, Flora Le Breton, Victor McLaglen, Elizabeth Beerbohm, Lois Sturt, Tom Heselwood, Fred Wright, and the producer's two children, Violet Virginia and Charles Stuart Blackton.

While "The Glorious Adventure" has an historical background, the story is an original one, the scenario for which was written by Felix Orman, formerly of New York.

CENSORS BAR "THE NIGHT ROSE"

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of New York recently heard the first appeal from a decision by the Motion Picture Commission of New York rejecting a film in its entirety on the ground of immorality. The case is "The Night Rose," a Goldwyn film, featuring Lon Chaney. The film was made a year before the commission was created. The Appellate Division reserved decision in the case and is expected to decide it in about two weeks. Gabriel L. Hess appeared for Goldwyn and Third Deputy Attorney General Rose for the Commission.

Current Reviews

"BITS OF LIFE"

Kinema

Marshall Neilan re-proves himself the screen's most daring producer with his presentation of "Bits of Life," an innovation in the photoplay line. Advertised as a cinema magazine, it is composed of four short stories by popular authors and Neilan himself, which have been produced in something over one reel apiece, and which are not connected by plot, theme or type. The idea is a clever one, although it is of too little merit, perhaps, to be satisfactorily redone. The picture quite naturally cannot be judged by any of the accepted standards for screen material but the four incidents are, on the whole, well handled even though their continuity and cutting are jerkily accomplished. The three heavy dramatic subjects and the surprise finish comedy which tops them off will probably prove highly entertaining to the average audience. All sorts of deviations are thrilling—once.

The first story taken from Popular Magazine is "The Bad Samaritan," which is chiefly interesting for the exceptionally clever work of Rockcliffe Fellowes in the title role. Wesley Barry plays Fellowe's part as a child.

The second episode from "The Man Who Heard Everything" in "Smart Set" has many well placed human interest touches although it is a trifle rushed for a tragedy. Frederick Burton plays the principal role here.

"Hop," a Saturday Evening Post selection is perhaps the most enthralling of the tales due to the fascination of things Oriental. Lon Chaney is featured in it, enacting a hypocritical dope dealer whose instincts are fundamentally pagan. Anna May Wong, an attractive little Chinawoman who has often been seen in bits, is provided here with an opportunity to really act and let it be announced that she puts it over in a manner that would be highly commendable in our more emotional western girls. We have a great desire to see Anna May again.

In the last story, an original, and perhaps the one entirely foolish one of the lot (apologies to the author, Mr. Neilan) appear John Bowers, Harriet Hammond, Noah Beery, and Edythe Chapman in straights.

James Flood and James Scully assisted Neilan in the direction of "Bits of Life," which was photographed by David Kesson and Wray June.

"THE MAN FROM LOST RIVER"

California

A rather simple little Katharine Newlin Burt story of the lumber country which holds, withal, a certain degree of fascination due to the humanness of its characters is "The Man from Lost River," Goldwyn's current release, a Frank Lloyd production. Too often in virile screenplays of this type are we forced to endure an entirely pure hero and a dastardly villain whose soul is completely speckled with red and black designs. Infant males may appreciate such a combination but the average citizen does not, and it is "good stuff" to keep them guessing a reel or so before they decide as to just where their sympathy belongs. Miss Burt has done this in "The Man from Lost River," which has been understandingly scenarized by Arthur Statter and Lambert Hillyer. Perhaps with different cutting one or two "plants" could have been made of material which is only so much atmosphere as now arranged, but that will pass. The direction is capably cared for by Lloyd while Norbert Brodin's photography far exceeds in value the work of the laboratory. The latter misses badly on its night tinting.

ETTA LEE

Playing the Maid in "Lotus Blossom"

House Peters gives another of his always enjoyable "he-man" performances in Jim Barnes, a camp boss, whom love saves from brutehood. His work contrasts effectively with that of Allan Forrest, unusually well placed in the coward, Fosdick.

Fritzie Brunette is more than "there" in the feminine lead, Marcia, an unsophisticated girl, who makes an exceedingly natural mistake. Miss Brunette uses her eyes to excellent advantage.

Monte Collins and Milla Davenport are entrusted with each of the comparatively few laughs afforded by the scenario and the duo handle them as efficiently as they would be expected to from their store of invaluable experience.

"ENCHANTMENT"

Grauman's

The most honestly diverting production in which we have ever witnessed Marion Davies is Cosmopolitan's release of Frank R. Adam's considerably redone short story, "Enchantment." An elaborate production, well arranged by Director Robert Vignola, many clever subtitles, superior camerawork by Ira Morgan and a fair Luther Reed scenario are more than competent to carry the star who has heretofore struggled so furtilely in Hearst's energetically offered (or foisted) vehicles for her. On top of all this the lady herself speeds up a little, indicating to an astonished public that she is learning to act. Miss Davies is here situated in the role of Ethel Hoyt, a more than ordinarily egotistical flapper with upsetting ideas about men. Since flapper comedies are now in favor, this will be particularly well received.

Ernest Eddison, the masculine lead in the story, has suffered a mutilation in the photoplay which amputates more than a little of his sympathy and all of his character value (of course to the great benefit of the star part); nevertheless, Forrest Stanley helps him out with a pleasing performance for which he deserves commendation.

Edythe Shayne and Tom Lewis make a picturesque set of distracted parents for the precocious Ethel while Arthur Rankin, Corrine Barker and Maude Gordon end the list of players.

"EVERYTHING FOR SALE"

Clune's

Realart's latest May McAvoy starring picture, "Everything for Sale," although an improvement over recent attempts for the little luminary by that company, suffers from a lack of plot originality which is only made up with great effort by the work of a remarkable cast. Why can't the inscribers of our comedy-dramas stumble upon something new just once in a while? Hector Turnbull is responsible for both the story and the continuity which was "shot" under the direction of Frank O'Connor.

Beautiful scenery and sets abound in the picture and, at that, it may bring satisfaction to the average audience.

Helen Wainwright, an appealing ingenue, is a very fair position for Miss McAvoy although she has had more significant parts with which to work. We find it difficult to believe, however, that her extreme attraction could be downed anywhere.

Eddie Sutherland plays Donald Scott, opposite the star. Eddie still commits two errors insufferable in an actor. He holds his mouth open most of the time and he persists in looking irritated when merely disturbed. He has plenty of time to eliminate these displeasing mannerisms but it will be easier sailing without them.

Kathlyn Williams is in her element as Mrs. Wainwright, Helen's ambitious aunt, and Edwin Stevens is equally excellent in Mr. Wainwright.

Richard Tucker, Betty Schade and Jane Keckley are all correctly placed in Lee Morton, Lillian Lord, his sweetheart and Sarah, a family retainer. As much cannot be said for Dana Todd, who is seen in a sort of second juvenile heavy.

Hal Rosson's photography is standard.

"Molly O," starring Mabel Normand, will have its first showing in Los Angeles at the Mission Theatre, beginning November 29.

Major Jack Allen, wild animal photographer, was the guest of honor at the fifth annual Movie Ball of the Film Players' Club held recently in New York City.

Camera work on "Wildfire," Benj. B. Hampton's latest screen version of a Zane Grey novel, and his first Goldwyn release, will be completed within two weeks.

ILLUSIONS

One of the prevalent illusions is that anyone can write a photoplay—that creating scenarios is the crudest type of writing, requiring neither the large mental background nor technical skill necessary to the novelist or short story writer.

True, the screen writer does not need the vocabulary required for the subtle philosophical and psychological passages which tread through a novel or short story; the very obvious limitations of the screen preclude the expression of abstractions; but the screen writer does need language, the language of color, mass, and line, the language of the objective—the pictorial universe.

C. Gardner Sullivan's scenario of "Hail the Woman" opens as follows: "A spring twilight clothes the harsh little New Hampshire town of Flint Hill with brief beauty. On the low hills that burgeon against the skyline, weary plowmen unyoke their horses from the plows and plod wearily homeward in the blossom-scented dusk. The tall church spires of the town still shine in the last high rays of sunlight, while a lilac-tinted darkness slowly envelops the streets and lowlier buildings." Here you have a picture, a picture which will inspire director and cinematographer to a scene of soft, pastoral beauty.

However, the very next lines in Mr. Sullivan's photoplay deal with a girl in wistful repose wondering about a problem as old as Time. In this way the ultimate audience is intrigued, in this made resposeful and receptive. The combination of dusk—that time in the day when strange pathetic longings or vague regrets are apt to faintly sweep over one—plus a girl in perplexed meditation, creates a poignant atmosphere; it is with beauty and strangeness that Mr. Sullivan, a master craftsman, arrests and fixes the attention.

That not everyone can write photoplays is evidenced through the wholesale failure of writers of books and plays to create worthwhile photodramas. Men who could create novels replete with deft nuances, striking situations, and impressive crises were impotent when it came to stalking the Movie Muse. Yet comparatively obscure persons have leaped into fame in a fortnight as creators of powerful photodramas. What is the answer? Simply that the writing of photoplays requires a tempermental predisposition, just as does the composing of music, verse, or prose. The ability to create in sequential pictorial terms. That is the rub.

However, people rich in experience and of developed insight and mental scope, will—providing they master the technique—write better photoplays than will immature or superficial people. That is, of course, obvious and palpable and verges on being platitudinous—but nevertheless true.

Those who believe they can write photoplays should prepare themselves for the same heartaches and disappointments and setbacks they would encounter if endeavoring to master short story, novel, or play writing. They must expect the same rebuffs from scenario editors as they would receive from magazine editors or book publishers. There is but one fundamental question: Is the photoplay your true medium? Have you creative imagination, dramatic insight, and the pictorial sense?

THE FORCE OF PICTURES

The fiction writers who disparage photoplay writing on the grounds of their being unable in the latter medium to express subtle thoughts or naive, clever things—are talking nonsense. Whatever faults pertain to picture-making are usually intrinsic in the direction or acting—or in the unwise judgment in selecting an unscreenable story.

There is far force to a picture—and therefore to a sequence of pictures—than there is to any printed argument. We are primarily impressionable, and secondarily reflective. Contrasting characters, properly portrayed, can invoke subtle drama or clever farce—just as much so as can any arrangement of printed words.

Photoplay writing can be made just as effective and dramatic as any fiction writing. Characters tell their own story simply by juxtaposition in the films, if the characterization is clear-cut and valid. Two certain types are inevitably bound to re-act in a certain manner. It's a matter of chemicalization. All the rhetoric in the world will not alter the fundamental situation, and is quite apt to distract from it.

Pictures will ever be more persuasive than the printed word, therefore writing in pictorial terms for translation into objective pictures—motion pictures—can become a most subtle and forceful art.

If anyone doubts the power of pictures, let me remind him of the cartoons in the New York Evening Journal of a few years back. While employed on a Hearst newspaper in another city, I was subjected to a severe denunciatory harangue on the part of a wealthy man I had called upon; it seems he had formerly lived in New York. He accused the Hearst newspapers of fostering discontent and anarchy, calling my attention to the aforementioned Journal cartoons. One in particular, which showed several gaunt "kiddies," ragged and dirty and hungry-looking, gazing at a wealthy man dining sumtuously at his club—evoked the man's wrath.

So if there are produced motion pictures which are puerile, do not blame the photodramatist—but the directors and actors. Or perhaps the censors, with their powers of intimidation! Stories can be written powerfully or subtly in pictorial terms.

VISUALIZATION

One of the most important and essential phases of screen writing is the power of visualizing. As one writes a photoplay, one does not think of smart phrases or poetic wording—and to this extent at least is screen writing valid writing; smart phrases and poetic wording may be employed if absolutely necessary for effective description, but never for their own sake.

Screen acting is very akin to pantomime, and therefore the screen writer must take cognizance of the facial expressions, mannerisms, and idiocyncrasies of characters—must depict even inner struggle, the most psychological drama, in terms of objective pictures.

In writing scenarios, one always writes of a man or woman doing something—not that either, or a group of characters, will do something or has done something. Past or future must be indicated or revealed through some present action or activity.

The ablest screen writer, therefore, will be the one who can close his eyes and see his own story march across an imaginary screen, and can set down the scenes in adequate language.

Never was the language of feeling so necessary. I say this, despite the popularity in some quarters of the skeleton-like scenario. But I believe there is twenty times the opportunity for acceptation where the writer can make the scenario reader "feel" his story. Let the heart-strings be clutched, through deft characterization and the whole mood of your writing. For the director, if he too can feel your story, will be more deeply inspired in the filming of it.

Lillian Guenther is playing in "Penrod," Marshall Neilan's current production.

Tina Modotti is playing a part in "Stay Home," Gareth Hughes' current Metro starring vehicle.

Evelyn Selbie is cast as "Tahama," an Indian woman in Lester Cuneo's "Silver Spurs," by Henry McCarty and Leo Meehan.

Former Yale swimming champion, Malcolm McGregor, has been cast for the role of Fritz von Tarlenheim in the current Rex Ingram production, "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Chow Young who played a part in "The Man Hunter," appears in an important role in "Lotus Blossom," the all-Chinese production now playing at the Alhambra.

E. H. Goldstein, assistant to Carl Laemmle, has arrived at Universal City. It is probable that he will remain for several weeks.

NEW USE FOR THE METRONOME

Metronomes were originally designed to help harrassed music teachers in their task of teaching small children to keep time with the music, but Director Wallace Worsley has found a new use for one at the Goldwyn Studio, where he is directing "The Octave of Claudius." In this picture Lon Chaney plays two distinct roles, a fanatical doctor and a hunchback, and as both characters appear in many of the scenes it necessitates much double exposed films. To insure accuracy in matching up the film and to avoid re-takes a system of counting by metronome has been worked out by the director and Mr. Chaney.

EVE SOUTHERN

RELEASES BIBLE FILM

"Holy Night," the first of a series of Biblical films, is now ready for distribution through National Non-Theatrical M. P., Inc.

ALL-CHINESE PICTURE

The first all-Chinese production, "Lotus Blossom," is released by the West Coast Theatre, Inc., of which Sol Lesser, Gore Bros. & Ramish are the figure heads. Not only is "Lotus Blossom" produced from a Chinese story and written by a Chinese, but the Wah Ming Motion Picture Company which sponsors the picture, is an all Chinese organization.

"Lotus Blossom" opens at the Alhambra, Nov. 26th.

HINES WORKING AGAIN

Johnny Hines is at work on "Torchy's Luck," upon completion of which Charles C. Burr plans to make a feature with him.

John Ince has been engaged by Metro and will appear in support of Alice Lake in "Hate," her new starring picture which Maxwell Karger is directing. Mr. Ince also played with Miss Lake in "The Hole in the Wall," one of her recently completed features.

Jack Lloyd has been assigned a part in Lloyd Hamilton's newest comedy, now in production at the Brunton studios.

Marin Sais has been engaged by Denver Dixon to portray the feminine lead in his next Western feature.

Park Ries is handling the photography for Lloyd Hamilton comedies after many weeks' work with the Jack White company.

George O'Hara and Albert Cooke are supporting Billy Bevan in "The Blockhead," his latest comedy under production at the Mack Sennett studios.

HAMPTON ADDRESSES ROTARY CLUB

A movement starting with the Rotary Club of Los Angeles is to be launched whereby California-made pictures will be used during the suggested ten-year vacation from war to eliminate misunderstandings between various peoples of the world, which are usually the basic cause of international conflict, if the plan proposed by Benjamin B. Hampton in his recent address before the Los Angeles Rotary Club is carried to conclusion.

Producer Hampton also urged Rotary Clubs to go on record against censorship, and through affiliations in every city to battle this menace to the motion picture industry.

A third suggestion was that American democracy could be spread to all parts of the globe by the portrayal on the screen of actual conditions in America. He said in part:

"Here in this city is, in active operation, the machinery that can be utilized to bring about common understanding between the people of the entire world.

"Mankind has found a common language. It has discovered a method that permits the transmission of thought quickly to all people.

"That method is the motion picture.

"A commissioner of immigration tells me that in twelve years' time the immigrants coming from Europe have shown a complete change in their dress. In every section of Europe the local costume is being abandoned in favor of American clothing. This revolution is so great that throughout all Europe American methods of manufacturing clothing have been adopted.

"Inquiry established the fact that this change was due entirely to American pictures.

"When the yellow men or black men go into their native motion picture theatres and see on the screen expositions of American life, they do so for the purpose of being entertained.

"Into their minds, consciously or subconsciously, is planted the American ideal.

"The Rotary Club is an international organization. It is in the power of the men in this room to start in motion a movement that will spread all over this world.

"Now, let us use that instrument to make progress for democracy during the ten-year vacation period suggested by our Secretary of State. Let us use the Rotary Club of Los Angeles as the lever by which this movement will be started.

"My suggestion is that the Rotary Club study motion pictures that it become acquainted with the value of this universal language.

"That the Rotary Club communicate with other Rotary Clubs throughout America and Europe to inform fellow club members of educational and propaganda value of the motion picture, and secure world-wide action."

The plan is now under consideration.

EDUCATIONAL RELEASES

Educational Film Exchanges will begin distribution of the Toonerville Comedies, by Fontain Fox, with the release presently of "The Skipper's Last Resort." Dan Mason is the skipper.

"Let's Go—To the South Seas" is the latest of a series of "World Wanderings" being released by Educational.

Work commenced this week at the Brunton studios on the fifth of Lloyd Hamilton's new series of Mermaid comedies for Educational. Irene Dalton is his leading woman. Hugh Fay is directing.

MOTION PICTURE TAX RETURNS INDICATE NORMAL AMUSEMENT OUTLOOK

The definite arrival of amusements in the "big business" fold is indicated by the husky figures just compiled by the high-powered government statisticians. With the federal tax returns as an accurate basis upon which to ply their sharp pencils, the Washington experts have arrived at the total of $897,000,000 paid for amusements in this country—or nearly twice that paid for the maintenance of the army.

"These figures show many things—first of all that the average American is a natural gloom-chaser," says Oliver Morosco who in his twenty years as a theatrical producer has been active in the amusement evolution. "The brooding nation is in a dangerous mood, so it is particularly timely that America is shown to the world as passing its leisure moments in wholesome relaxations rather than burying itself in its own gloomy thoughts.

"The elevation of amusements from the museum and nickelodeon stages to the present-day magnitude has been stimulated more by motion pictures than any other one factor. Pictures with their 'universal language' have extended the active amusement sphere into even the hamlets of the country. The small town theaters do not have to rely upon their own population, for the automobile has made the surrounding rural districts a part of the audience.

"In the cities the progressive exhibitors have built film palaces outrivaling even the glittering homes of the spoken drama. With the typical daring of the pioneers these big exhibitors have made their brethren of the older stage fairly gasp.

"One result of these magnificent motion picture theaters has been to stimulate the producers to new efforts in providing pictures worthy of such ambitious settings. And the picture, made for the large metropolitan houses, filters on down through the various classifications until it reaches the little four-corners theaters. So the people in the open districts are getting a peep at drama that would always be denied them if they had to wait for large star casts and costly productions to come to them 'personally conducted.'

"Thus it is that producers more and more are attempting to build pictures that have the lasting qualities to carry them through the full financial possibilities. This is a stimulant that is healthy for art as well as the box office."

Production Notes

AT BRUNTON

Production was started this week on Jackie Coogan's third star picture and the second of his new series. The title has not yet been announced. Jerome Storm is directing.

Work is progressing rapidly on Alla Nazimova's first independant production, Henrik Ibsen's "A Doll House." Charles Bryant is directing. United Artists will release the feature.

A pre-view of Jack White's newest comedy, "Step This Way," was given at the new Wilshire Theatre last Sunday night.

The Chester Bennett Company is expected to return early next week from location at Big Bear. Jane Novak is the star of the production.

B. B. Hampton's all-star production of Zane Grey's "Wild Fire" will be completed within the next two weeks. Claire Adams and Carl Ganvoort head the cast and Jean Hersholt and Elliot Howe are directing. This will be Mr. Hampton's first picture for release through Goldwyn.

Dorothy Brunton, one of the favorite musical comedy stars of Australia and London, will arrive in Los Angeles this week enroute from Melbourne to London to fulfill a stage contract. She is none other than the sister of Robert Brunton, who, it is rumored, will try to persuade her to enter motion pictures. Jack Brunton left Los Angeles Sunday for San Francisco, where he will meet his sister and mother, which latter is accompanying Miss Brunton on her trip, and bring them to Los Angeles.

Lloyd Hamilton has started work on a new comedy, the sixth of his new series. Hugh Fay is directing.

Camera work on the J. L. Frothingham production, "The Man Who Smiled," has been completed. Edward Sloman directed the picture, which features an all-star cast headed by Marcia Manon, William V. Mong and Mary Wynn.

W. E. Keefe, who has taken a suite of offices at the studios, has received word that his comedies, "Peeps Into the Future," are meeting with great success in New York, Chicago and San Francisco. They will soon be shown in Los Angeles.

AT REALART

May McAvoy has started work upon Realart's thirtieth production of the current season. It is an original story by Olga Printzlau who wrote the scenarios of "Midsummer Madness," "Conrad in Quest of His Youth" and other William De Mille successes. Cast in principal roles are Raymond McKee, Fannie Midgely, Arthur Rankin, Fred Tufner, Carrie Clark Ward and Richard Rosson. Maurice Campbell will direct with Hal Rosson at the camera.

Director Frank Urson is nearing the end of the Mennonite story which is the third Mary Miles Minter feature of the current season.

Constance Binney is starting this week on an original story by Aubrey Stauffer, formerly a well-known exhibitor of motion pictures, with scenario by Wells Hastings. Edward Le Saint will direct.

Bebe Daniels is again wearing conventional American clothes, having finished the Cuban sequence of her current production.

Wanda Hawley expects to start the last of the week on Will Payne's original story which Thomas Heffron will direct from Percy Heath's scenarios.

Work is proceeding rapidly on the glassing in of stages 2 and 3, to form an enclosed stage 100 feet by 160. This gives Realart a capacity of two closed stages and one open.

"WAMPAS" TO EDIT NATIONAL EDITION OF HEARST YEAR BOOK

Members of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers endorsed a plan at their last meeting, submitted by F. H. Eldridge, managing editor of the Los Angeles Examiner, whereby the publicity men will edit a special Motion Picture Yearly Number of this paper, to be distributed nationally to exhibitors, dramatic and motion picture editors and others interested in motion pictures.

The plan, brought before the W. M. P. A. by Florence Lawrence and Al Price of the Examiner, calls for the appearance in this number of articles by the most famous writers in the country as an answer to the attacks that have been made upon the industry. In addition to these articles and sketches by prominent artists, members of the film industry will contribute stories and feature articles on the different phases of the business. Each member of the W. M. P. A. will have a hand in the preparation of this number.

Benjamin B. Hampton, producer and former editor, is chairman of the advisory board of motion picture men who will cooperate with the Examiner and the W. M. P. A. in editing this number.

Another speaker of the evening was John McCormick of Associated First National Pictures, who reviewed conditions as he found them on his recent trip to New York. Mr. McCormick gave a verbal and interesting report on the recent Installation Dinner of the A. M. P. A. in New York, which he attended.

The creation of an Employment Bureau was instituted with Joe Jackson, chairman, to work out a plan whereby members of the W. M. P. A. and motion picture concerns seeking publicity men could get together.

ADVANCE PRESENTATION

During the showing of Marshall Neilan's "Bits of Life' 'at the Kinema Theatre for the week beginning on November 19th, a clever bit of publicity in advance of the presentation was inaugurated by Richard Spier, Publicity Director of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., in cooperation with Pete Smith, the Marshall Neilan courier en avant.

Arrangements were made for the presentation of "Bits of Life" to the inmates of the California Hospital in Los Angeles with a small one-man projecting machine, and Wesley Barry, the Neilan starlet, personally operated it. Over two hundred patients, who were able to witness the showing of the Neilan First National attraction, were assembled in one of the larger open dormitories and a large sheet was tacked against the well. Wesley Barry was given an ovation when he left the hospital. It is the plan of Marshall Neilan, who originally sponsored the idea of giving the hospital patients entertainment, to present each of his new pictures in a like manner.

WILL VACATION

With the return of Michael Gore and Adolph Hamish, President and Treasurer of the West Coast Theatres, Inc., to their offices, A. L. Gore, Secretary of the organization, who looked after the destinies of the circuit during the absence of his colleagues, will take a well-earned vacation. He plans to visit the Yosemite, and has made arrangements to take along a motion picture camera to record his journeys.

Mr. and Mrs. William Louis Chaudet are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, William Louis Chaudet, Junior.

What is Copyright?

By Irving Baltimore

Although derived from the Latin word copia, plenty, our word copy has assumed its significance from a corruption introduced through low Latin. Thus, copyright is, in a limited sense, self-difinitive, being the right to copy or to "make plenty," as it were.

We find the first use of the term in Blackstone's commentaries of 1767. In this legal classic Blackstone sets forth the fundamental principles of copyright.

"When a man," he says, "by the exertion of his rational powers, has produced an original work, he seems to have clearly a right to dispose of that identical work as he pleases, and any attempt to vary the disposition he has made of it, appears to be an invasion of that right. Now, the identity of a literary composition consists entirely in the sentiment and the language; the same conception, clothed in the same words, must necessarily be the same composition; and whatever method be taken of exhibiting that composition to the ear or the eye of another, by recital, or by writing, or by printing, in any number of copies, or at any period of time, it is always the identical work of the author which is so exhibited; and no other man (it hath been thought) can have a right to exhibit it, especially for profit, without the author's consent. This consent may, perhaps, be tacitly given to all mankind, when an author suffers his work to be published by another hand, without any claim or reserve of right, and without stamping on it any marks of ownership; it being then a present to the public, like building a church or bridge, or laying out a new highway."

This enunciation contemplates a perpetual right in the author, and such was the common conception of copyright at that period. Pursuant to this notion, Blackstone sold the right forever, to publish the work from which we quote. Other authors conveyed similar rights. From this fact arose the clamorous protest of publishers, against deprivation of their alleged rights, upon the subsequent construction of the Statute of Anne as a limitation of the life of copyright. Although Blackstone was a member of the judicial body which placed this interpretation upon the Statute, his was a dissenting opinion.

Today, except in several minor countries, perpetuity in copright is not recognized. However, there is no limitation in the United States upon the rights of the owner in an unpublished work. In England, where the Statute of 1911 makes provision for the protection of unpublished works by compliance with certain regulations, unless the same have been observed, there exist no remedies for infringement of such works. Publication, within the meaning of our copyright statutes, is dissimilar from the ordinary definition of the term, and will be treated in a subsequent article. As the law stands at present, the rights of the owner of an intellectual creation are very comprehensive, and liberal provision has been made for the enforcement thereof. Prior to the Statute of 1909, any person was at liberty to novelize a play. This defect in our law was cured, however, by amendment in the aforementioned statute, with the result that the right of novelization rests in the playright alone, unless by him conveyed.

The many facets to the evolution of copyright law may be attributed to the fact that, being a creation, primarily, of the mind, the subject of copyright is of an intangible nature, except as to the means adopted for its recordation or manifestation. Reason, strictly speaking, allows no distinction between this and any other character of personal property. Unless to the intellectual genius or artist is accorded some form of protection for the creatures of his effort, there would be little incentive to bend his energies in that direction, with the resultant loss to the world of many a potential masterpiece. With this in view, our laws have been formulated, securing unto the author, however, rights only of a limited duration.

Broadly speaking, copyright now grants unto the author the exclusive right and privilege to multiply and offer for sale in any form, the creation of his mind, by representation to the sight, hearing or touch, an example of the latter being the raised-letter publications for the blind.

Terra Film of Berlin, Germany, will raise its capital from four to sixteen million marks.

Jack Cooper and Bobbie Dunn are among those cast in "The Blockhead," Sennett two-reel comedy starring Billy Bevan.

Hamilton-White comedies have a new bookkeeper in the person of Miss Joan Blackmore.

J. L. Frothingham, the producer, will leave for San Rafael shortly where he will act as judge at the annual dog show held in that city.

The Censors Differentiate

The censor is a creature peculiar unto himself and therefore not to be figured out by mere sinful mortal; but if we could venture an opinion (and a particularly expressive mood appears to be overtaking us at this time) we would remark that from personal observation he would seem to be inconsistent to the point of mental questionability, a strange combination of impurity and guilelessness of mind. He is, moreover, governed by sentiment rather than by proportion, and his sentiment is often times both unpleasantly sticky and contradictory.

For example: The Pasadena censorial body has recently placed a ban upon the showing in its community of de Mille's "The Affairs of Anatol." This fact is not extremely surprising, as the profession itself is practically agreed upon the general unwholesomeness of the picture under present displeasure; and while we prefer restraint to come from the consciousnesses within our art rather than from a group of prejudiced misunderstandings far removed from it, we can say nothing when any company exercises its legally endowed right to dictate. Therefore, it is not in criticism of the action that the subject is mentioned.

What amused and appalled us in the same breath was the statement of a member of the board to the effect that while "Anatol" was vicious and degrading, there was but a single incident in "One Arabian Night" which the Pasadenans had recognized as too impure for the beneficial digestion of themselves and their children.

If we were left speechless by this astounding intelligence it was because we had just returned from a review of the Negri film, and the strange combination of ideas, Bocaccion and Puritan, had left our outraged senses paraletically struggling through a cloud. Incidentally, we are far from incapacitated at this time, but discretion must have a place in the presentation of our opinion. One thing is certain, however, if censorship was ever unfair and distasteful to us, it is now ridiculous and repulsive.

In comparison to "One Arabian Night," "Anatol's" rather foolish affairs are fraught with playful innocence; the gentleman himself is a paragon of virtue. We considered that Miss MacPherson did an over amount of suggesting in her arrangement of Snitzler's material, but we only wish that the producers of the painfully bald harem story starring Europe's famous vamp had left just a detail or two to the imagination. No less than five fast working lovers complicate the lurid twenty-four hour space out of the principal feminine character's life, which is colorfully chronicled in this production and this is all over and above the intimate glimpses into the love careers of other members of the cast, and the effeminate cavortings of a crew of discomposing eunuchs.

All we wish to have designated is the incident which must be eliminated in Pasadena. It would be so fascinating to follow the line of figuring that would lead to the differentiation. Since it can't, evidently, be done, the matter will have to rest, but a great deal of our disrespect for the system and the reasoning of the picture reformer rests with it.

The cinema may need intellectual regulation, as we read last week in "The Summons," but first we suggest an inoculation of horse sense into the average churchman whose energy exceeds his brain capacity to back it up.

One of the greatest exhibiting evils in existence is thoroughly presented in the following communication. It cannot be further commented upon.

November 30, 1921.

"Miss Fanchon Royer,
Editor Camera,
Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear Miss Royer:

As the result of a spirited discussion held at the last meeting of the Motion Picture Directors' Association, I have been instructed to write you this letter.

The Motion Picture Directors' Association feels that it would be to the material advantage of the industry if certain extravagant and unnecessary phases of Motion Picture presentation were curtailed.

We mean specifically:

Atmospheric prologues,
Vaudeville numbers,
Expensive orchestras.

In almost all the larger cities of the United States, first-run theatre managers have gradually added theatrical features to their feature entertainment until today in many instances the theatrical entertainment overshadows the featured photodrama of the program. This condition is a serious menace to any further advances in motion picture production.

In the first place it is subtly impressing a certain class of our public with the thought that the play is not

AT INCE

Arthur Beck, president of the Leah Baird productions, will depart for New York next week for a conference regarding the series of six pictures starring Miss Baird which are to be filmed during the coming year.

"Jim," an Ince special for Associated First National, was completed this week with final scenes on a cattle ranch near Reno, Nevada. John Griffith Wray directed. Milton Sills, Marguerite de la Motte and John Bowers are in the cast.

"The Hottentot," with Douglas MacLean, Madge Bellamy and Raymond Hatton, is being rushed to completion for early release by Associated First National.

The J. Parker Read, Jr. company, filming "Pawned," has spent most of the week on location. Tom Moore, Edith Roberts and James Barrows are already included in the all-star cast.

C. Gardner Sullivan, Ince staff writer, has just completed "Someone to Love," which will be an early Ince production.

AT BRUNTON

Chester Bennett is busy "shooting" the first series of interiors for his production, "Starveling," in which Jane Novak is starred.

Camera work was started this week on "The Midnight Call," an original story by Emory Johnson. Mr. Johnson is producing the picture.

Lloyd Hamilton and his company plan to leave this week for San Diego where water scenes for Mr. Hamilton's new comedy will be taken.

Jerome Storm is directing the Jackie Coogan picture with Glenn McWilliams and Bob Martin as cameramen. Shirley Vance Martin is the official photographer.

Constance Talmadge and Sid Franklin have left for location at Forrest Home, near Big Bear. They are "shooting" scenes for "The Divorcee" in which both Harrison Ford and Kenneth Harlan appear opposite the comedienne.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

"All at Sea," has been chosen as the title of Richard Barthelmess' current photoplay which he is now making up in Maine for Inspiration Pictures.

Work on "White Faith," starring Hope Hampton, has been started at the Paragon studios in Fort Lee, N. J., and marks the first of a series of productions to be directed by Clarence Brown, who is under a long term contract with the Hope Hampton Productions, Inc.

Marshall Neilan is finishing his newest First National attraction, "Penrod," with Wesley Barry in the title role. Frank O'Connor, formerly with Lasky, is collaborating with the producer on the direction of the picture. David Kesson and Ray June are handling the photography. The picture will be ready for release within the next thirty days.

Only a few more scenes for Anita Stewart's next picture, "The Woman He Married," remain to be shot, with Fred Niblo directing.

Buster Keaton's next funfilm is struggling along toward completion without a title.

Billie Bevan and Mildred June of the Mack Sennett Comedies have gone on location.

Current Reviews

"DON'T TELL EVERYTHING"

Grauman's Rialto

Another celluloid attempt at a comedy solution to conjugal infelicity is Lorna Moon's "Don't Tell Everything," as scenarized by Albert Le Vino for Paramount production. Played by an all-star cast, it is a more or less suggestive and therefore wholly amusing play which has been cleverly handled by Sam Wood's direction. It is also decorated with the customarily luxurious Lasky-special appointments to delight the audience which it will attract. Al Gilk's camera work is very good.

Gloria Swanson is just Gloria as the young wife of a man with a past and, to all appearances, a present and future. Ten times she has done this same thing and she is thoroughly familiar with the manner in which one entraps the attention of one's own husband. She should be.

Wallie Reid isn't quite so enlightening as Tommy, the gentleman in question. We don't like heroes very well, but they surely are preferable to namby pambies on the order of Anatol and this one. To make matters otherwise bad, Reid is growing rather inane himself. He should speed up a little and remember that all real artists continue to study as they get on.

Elliott Dexter impresses very well with a gentle philosopher, who is nevertheless thoroughly instructed in psychology. Dexter is more sincere than he used to be.

Dorothy Cummings as a seducing "pal" to many men and particularly to Tommy, offers a superior piece of work.

Genevieve Blinn, the de Briac twins and Baby Gloria Wood fill the remaining positions.

"Don't Tell Everything" is just facetious enough to draw wonderfully.

"THE LURE OF JADE"

California

The exotic South Sea Island atmosphere into which is set "The Lure of Jade," Pauline Frederick's latest starring production, is responsible for the lazily insidious intrigue which it holds forth because aside from this fascination, there is very little to recommend as a story the screen version of Marion Orth's "Houses of Glass," for it lacks realism and although supposedly a modern tale it suffers from a "mediaevality" of theme. Clever performances and the capable direction of Colin Campbell insert much drama into the situations, however, rescuing several of them artistically.

Miss Frederick, the superb, does wonders with Sara Vincent, a young woman whose reputation is ruined by scandal and whose soul is redeemed by self sacrifice. Particularly effective is her work when, as mistress of "The Sea Gull," she seeks stolidly for revenge upon the jealous tongue that had measured and executed her destruction so many years before. This lonely, embittered white woman of the tropics is an exquisite tragedy in every scene.

Clarissa Selwyne is faultlessly situated as the blatantly virtuous Alida Corey whose indiscretions finally reach the inexcusable standard which she has ruthlessly credited to others.

Leon Barry in his interpretation of Stuart Beresford, the remittance man who voluntarily attracts one woman that he may please another, is excellent.

Thomas Holding and Arthur Rankin dispatch suitably Captain Corey and his son, while the cast is convincingly completed by Hardee Kirkland, Togo Yamamato and Goro Kino.

Dev. Jennings' photography of this Robertson-Cole picture is capital.

JOEL DAY

"LOTUS BLOSSOM"

Alhambra

We have never seen a more truly Eastern production better staged than is "Lotus Blossom," James B. Leong's cinemaplay for the Wah Ming Picture Company. It is almost entirely an all-Chinese film which has, however, been given a thoroughly competent production by one of the industry's oldest director's, Frank J. Grandon, who has interpreted the fundamantally foreign theme to our western understandings through the lens, with unusual judgment. The senario by G. M. Yohalem and C. Furthman lacks considerable in satisfaction and is further injured by careless cutting, but Ross Fischer's photography is beautiful and the softly Oriental little story has a mellowness in its tragedy which leaves morbidity completely outside the subject. Some of the portrayals are brilliant; all of them are satisfactory.

Lady Tsen Mei, the Chinese nightengale, is featured in "Lotus Blossom," and considering that Moy Tai is her first screen role, she does well notwithstanding the very smudgy make-up which she affects.

It is Jack Abbe in the leading male role who plays the universally appealing youth of the drama. As Sun, his tender boy-spirit shines forth as a human thing too big to be confined racially. Abbe expresses it with subtle beauty.

Tully Marshall, one of the two white actors in the piece, is exceptional in Quong Foo, Moy Tai's beloved father, the foundry owner. His make-up is very good and his work always just right.

Noah Berry in the Tartar chief is not so realistic, but his footage is limited and he does not detract materially from the atmosphere.

Goro Kino gives a vivid performance of the Emperor and Chow Young is an attractive Mongolian vamp. Parts like these are assisting the yellow actor to come into his own, for they prove him to possess the priceless gift of versatility.

James Wang, M. Seki and Etta Lee are also in the cast of this ever-so-different photoplay.

Exploitation for "Lotus Blossom" should play up its artistic note. As a really Chinese "Broken Blossoms" it will please many.

"ONE ARABIAN NIGHT"

Kinema

"One Arabian Night," First National's local release, is one of the best produced foreign pictures that we have seen. Interpreted by a large but excellent cast, headed by Pola Negri, the inimitable depictor of screen wantons, well directed by Ernst Lubitsch, containing elaborate sets comparatively well photographed and being an attention-holding, if exceedingly immoral story, it is a technical improvement over the majority of continental films.

MAN'S LAW AND GOD'S

Preview

Finis Fox is preparing for release his first personally written and produced picture, "Man's Law and God's," a northwestern comedy drama featuring Jack Livingston. The story has an uninvolved, rather stereotyped plot, but some of its situations contain unusual possibilities and the photography of the mountain scenery is effective, resulting in a very fair program picture possessing decided entertainment value.

Livingstone makes a likable hero of X. Y. Z., the romantic mounted policeman, with his genial personality and picturesque costuming. He has pronounced star requisites.

Perhaps Ethel Shannon's ingenue is a bit mature and somewhat forced, but it includes nothing to take exception to otherwise save a makeup that misses now and again.

George Cummings and Josa Melville make a good pair of "hokum" heavies, while Bobby Mack and Joy Winthrop laughably enact the comedy characters.

Wheeler Dryden does perhaps the cleverest interpretation of the cast in a "bit," the drunken remittance man.

Ethel Childers completes the list of players.

"Man's Law and God's" will stand more cutting which it will undoubtedly receive.

Gertrude Short and Eugenia Tuttle are cast in Doris May's latest picture for R-C entitled "Boy Crazy."

S. E. Al Jennings enacts the "heavy" in the Prairie production, "The Fightin' Fool," starring Dick Hatton.

Wadsworth Harris is playing a part with Bert Lytell in Bayard Veiller's latest screen production. Mr. Harris recently completed an engagement at Robertson-Cole.

Frank Losee is a prominent member of the cast of "All at Sea," starring Richard Barthelmess, which Henry King is making for Inspiration Pictures.

Irene Castle's second production under her present arrangement is from the story, "The Rise of Roscoe Paine," by Joseph C. Lincoln.

MEDITATIONS

Ever and anon I receive letters from students of screen writing, in which it is assumed that I am as capable as Solomon of solving all vexatious problems. Several lobsters have indited banal missives in which they deplored their lack of ease and leisure, and asked me if there were not some way by which they could attain a relative economic security while writing their masterpieces. Still others write that they have inside information regarding eternal laws, that "they're in their right places" and that it was selfishness which prompted them to wish to express themselves instead of devoting their energies to family duties—therefore they have quit studying.

Some of my worthy correspondents actually divulge the discovery of harmony—yes, they're at peace after turbulent days and hours of struggling with instruction books and ideas! Some speak of successfully resisting the temptation to write; others make their sacrifice for the sake of the children's future. The dominant note, however, of most of these letters is a pitiful questioning, a mere wisp of doubt after sounding the depths of resignation.

To those who wish more security, it can easily be proven that the great artists have all thriven on insecurity; that too much ease is not conducive to strong, vital, creative efforts. It was Emerson who said: "A man never rises so high as when he knows not whither he is going."

To the self-conceded unselfish ones it might be said: Give when you've something to give; don't try to give of your vast emptiness—do a lot of getting first. Then some day you'll give unconsciously, out of your overflowing abundance.

Any coward can resist temptation! The free, unshackled spirit roams everywhere, is not afraid of Life and therefore yields to temptation—to enrich the soul and add to the beauty of expression.

Why sacrifice for children? Why stint and slave that they may live in dangerous ease. Why rob them of the opportunity to sacrifice, if sacrifice be such a high virtue? Why spoil their chances for development through struggle?

Many of our profoundest thinkers have questioned the intrinsic value of a university education, but the man who desires to give his children a university education may be far more able to do so through the sale of scenarios than through the sale of groceries or hardware, or bonds.

Why this ridiculous love of the unconditioned—of harmony? Why not "hold all lovely things more dear because they move in fugitive battalions manifold?" Why the evasion of struggle, of life dynamic?

Revolt, not quiescence, brings about a hardier, richer, finer art expression. Here in America, our smug serenity has resulted in much slovenliness of spirit—the spirit that produces rag-time! Contrast this with Russian art—in music, dancing, literature, the stage. But Russia has suffered, and revolted!

A woman recently wrote me that her social obligations interferred with her efforts at photoplay writing. She said she couldn't offend numerous friends who visited her frequently.

And why this resigned hospitality to boneheads? Is there any iron in the soul of one who can't conserve herself, who can't be true to the higher aims of her spirit—of a spirit which would thrive far more in solitude than with a lot of braying society gals.

Less hospitality, less to eat and drink—more undisturbed moments, punctually and diligently observed, for the purpose of study and creation!

Forego self-derision and ban from your presence those human swine who glory in deriding all effort at expression beyond that which solely aims at the production of dollars. Throttle such asinine snickerers!

Starve your body rather than your soul; starve your body rather than your spirit. As life at best is a gamble, go astray in a fine, magnificent fashion—rather than stagnate. Don't resign to anything.

Question all values and embark on the infinite ocean of romance and adventure; do not be guilty of the unpardonable sin of omission: the failure to develop latent forces.

The motion picture is direly in need today of new dreams, new viewpoints, lest it grow hopelessly formal and stale. "Eminent" authors and playrights have failed to revivify the photoplay, having nothing fresh or new to bring to it.

The motion picture needs those untrammeled by tradition and popularity, unknowns who are striving for new values—whose futures are not behind them!

"Take no thought for the morrow." This doctrine, professed by millions, is seldom practised, often doubted, and subconsciously repudiated—but these are the first and last words of creation, fixed, eternal.

Life may soon be over; cast doubt to the four winds—study and write while you can; beautify and vitalize your fragment of time.

Let's hear less often from lackadaisical, resigned ones who pray for the right to breathe; who are so fettered to their masters that they can't find time to write photoplays.

Charles Gerrard arrived yesterday from New York to play the important role of Dr. Crang in "Pawned," J. Parker Read's all-star production soon to be filmed at Ince under the direction of Irwin Willat.

"JOURNEYS THROUGH THE VALLEY OF HEART'S DELIGHT"

The two-reel film story of Santa Clara Valley, California, and the city of San Jose, is the first release in the nation-wide motion picture campaign which has been launched to film the story of the United States, showing every section, its advantages, attractions, resources and opportunities. The films as completed will be released through the exchanges of National Non-Theatrical Motion Pictures, Inc.

Although one picture of this kind means comparatively little, a series of pictures showing every section in the United States will mean much. The announcement that the first picture in a world series of Moving Pictures of America is now ready for release is signified. This film will serve more or less as a model for pictures to be taken in other sections of the country.

The film opens with lovely scenic views of friut trees in blossom in the valley noted for its orchards. The caption "San Jose, a City of Homes," is followed by a series of panoramas of homes but all so liveable! We take a hurried trip down town to the business section, then up in an airplane to get a view of city and valley from above. Closer views of grammar and high schools, of Santa Clara and Stanford Universities; of the old missions of Santa Clara, San Jose and San Juan Batista and of the modern churches of today; the blossom festival; an apricot orchard in fruit; thousands of trays of prunes drying in the sun; then an auto trip over the mountains to the beach at Santa Cruz and back through the state Red-wood park; a visit to Alum Rock Canyon and its mineral springs in grottoes; the natorium and children's playgrounds; a trip to the moon via the Lick Observatory and its famous telescope; back to earth and a visit to a quick-silver mine—all in a half hour's time via the motion picture route.

The public-spirited movement to show America to Americans in films, headed by noted educators and financiers, will seek the co-operation of educators and business men all over the country. The plan is to first collect in one central film library the films which have already been made showing the industries and resources of any community. As yet comparatively few scenics and industries have been filmed and these have never been correlated as a part of a film library of America to which the public could go as to a circulating library and learn how the other 104 million live. Such films are most valuable when they form a part of a national film library and such a library is the ultimate goal of the regional film movement, national in its scope.

The plan is to build up region by region, county by county the film story of the United States. Pictures that have already been taken will be used wherever possible. Expert cameramen and experienced directors will be sent, on request to national headquarters into any community, to film not just the external characteristics but to get the very soul of the place, its historic background, its industries, all that will be of most benefit to the community itself and will serve as an inspiring message to the country at large.

"Journeys Through the Valley of Heart's Delight," the first film to take its place in the "national film library of knowledge," can the thing but that the trimmings are. In other words it is belittling the importance of the photoplay upon which the entire industry has builded.

Editorial

In the second place, added numbers often take up so much of the program time that the feature picture is "raced" by the projectionist in order to maintain a time-table schedule. This works grievous injustice alike to audience and to author, director and players.

In the third place, this custom is increasing the cost of exhibition to such a prohibitive figure that many exhibitors are forced out of business by the loss they must sustain, and admission prices are increased to such extent that we lose an important and intilligent—but economical—portion of our public.

In the opinion of this association, whose members are dedicating their lives to the betterment of motion pictures, the over-eleborate prologue is a useless adjunct to the feature picture, often even destroying dramatic effect and turning the climax to anti-climax; the place for vaudeville is in the vaudeville house, and the greater portion of the picture-going public prefers its motion picture comedy and drama "straight"; and while the musical accompaniment is an invaluable part of picture presentation and is working wonders in furthering musical culture in this country, expensive orchestras are unnecessary and often in poor taste.

The Motion Picture Directors Association believes that these theatrical features have been brought to become such an important part in American picture programs through a mistaken sense of showmanship and in some cases mere personal rivalry between managers. We believe that extravagant presentation is futile because it does not increase the attractiveness of motion pictures to the general public.

Sincerely yours,
WM. D. TAYLOR, President,
Motion Picture Directors' Association."

Copyright Before and After Publication

By Irving Baltimore

"The actor is a sculptor who carves his image in snow," said Lawrence Barrett.

Our courts may have very aptly quoted this epigram as reason for their failure to regard production on the stage as publication. The circumstances surrounding the usual exhibition of this character, its pantomine and oral utterance an evanescent manifestation, evince no intention to dedicate the play to the use of the public, and intention is a governing factor.

Wherefor, until a play has been printed, the dramatist retains all rights, without the observation of any law, for publication of an intellectual creation marks the time when copyright statutes must be observed.

Publication is such a communication to the public, or dissemination of a work, as renders it available and easily accessible to public scrutiny, indicative of an intention to abandon the exclusive privilege to multiply or sell. Thus, the oral lecture delivered to a class of students is not a publication within the meaning of the copyrigh statutes, and its author is not thereby deprived of his exclusive right; likewise, the enactment of a play dedicates no right to the public, for the purpose is plainly limited; and there appears no intention to part with any title to the lecture or the play, as the case may be. The printing of a book is no evidence of forfeiture of the author's rights, and only unrestricted distribution or sale thereof would compel the author to regard the copyright act to safeguard his title.

Prior to publication, copyright, being inherent in the work itself, no law need be complied with, no prescribed act performed, to protect and preserve one's right in literary or artistic property. However, on publication the copyright statutes apply and govern one's rights. The law impliedly says that on failure to negative such presumption by compliance with statutory provisions prescribed in that respect, publication of a work by its author conclusively shows an intention to waive exclusive right therein, and to dedicate, without restriction, to the use of the public. Thereafter, it is public property, and the author, or those who subsequently desire title, can assert no right superior to that of a stranger.

The sooner all available films are assembled at a central point so that educators interested can learn what has been done and what remains to be filmed the sooner the nation wide movement, which has the hearty endorsement of visual educators in many sections, will get under way.

A Dearth of Picture Youth

As a profession our greatest misfortune is our lack of genuine youth, an unhappy condition which is marking nine-tenths of today's featured performances with either forced inanity or stereotyped sophistication. This is because the average leading men and women are in one of two pitiable states. They are unavoidably and embarrassingly advanced in years or they suffer from a startingly uneven mental combination which renders their knowledge of art and its inseparable complement, realism, entirely negligible, while lending them an over-amount of that reprehensible affectation, commonly termed worldly wisdom. This latter applies to our ingenues and juveniles who, having many years to the good of Mary Pickford and Charlie Ray, scorn to be truly young in spirit with these two beloved personalities.

If youth and romance were not one and the same thing and if most fiction were not grounded upon romance, then consideration would not be necessary here. However, our audiences are now demanding "the real thing" from their cinema favorites, our producers are still desiring big returns upon their investments and our actors are invariably needing engagements. What is the answer, or rather, what will it be when more pressure is brought to bear upon the subject?

The populace must be convinced as well as just apparently catered to and although thousands of fans may yet be so simple as to enjoy a love story of adolescence, a comedy-drama with regular kids living the great adventure for the first time, it doesn't follow that they are dumb enough to appreciate the casting of Tommy Meighan and Louise Glaum in the principals. Neither are Lila Lee and Gaston Glass the world's idea of youngsters, granting that their years are perhaps sufficiently few as to meet requirements.

If we entrust our girl and boy parts to middle-aged performers and expect the people not to doubt our intelligence because we desire to pretend that dramatically age means nthing and that our choices are all excellent interpreters, we have made the falsest of moves. When we place blase children of the camera into any sort of human beings we are not only sacrificing beauty, but are setting up distorted standards for the modern juvenile mind to pattern. Certainly the first is foolish; the second dangerous.

Other than an observation to the effect that possibly our star picking methods have not been based upon wholesomeness in many cases, we have no solution to offer. Nevertheless, we believe that the theatre and studio have a great supply of competent youth hanging on just awaiting a real opportunity to be developed.

The wise director will look about him even if it upsets previously laid out systems and give the likely aspirant his chance. We are in dire need of more Bobby Harrons, May McAvoys and Gareth Hughes to rejuvenate our art and to justify our romance. —F. R.

The Titler is Upbraided

"Variety" has, as usual, a picture "kick" to register this week. What is more remarkable is that the current complaint has a meritorious foundation. If the treatment is somewhat exaggerated upon—well, we must pursue drastic methods to be effective, you know.

"If 'too many cooks spoil the broth,' how much are—no, is—'too many'? This daffydil query is prompted by the growing nuisance of preliminary screen footage that an audience has to sit through before the picture play begins. Count 'em.

"First comes an introductory strip, an animated cartoon serving notice that the screening is 'A Neighborhood Theatre Co., Inc., presentation.' From this there are 14 distinct steps before the play actually begins, to-wit: The title of the play, name of the star, name of the producer, name of the distributing company, name of the author, name of the director, name of the scenario writer, name of the cameraman, name of the art director, name of the employee who edited the film and wrote the titles, a necessary record that the New York State Censor Commission has psychoanalyzed the picture and found it reasonably legal together with a license number, the fact that the National Board of Review has also put the stamp of approval on it and finally a rod or two of 'lead title' setting forth in print the precept and moral of the story.

"And that isn't all. Once the picture starts and the audience gets interested in its action the play is constantly being interrupted by the distracting breaks of long titles, so elaborate that they have to be made in type so small they cannot be read from the back rows of an ordinary neighborhood theatre. No one argues against brief titles necessary to clarify the action, but the intrusion of a title writer's comedy or philosophizing upon the attention of an audience is a gross impertinence. Presently unless someone checks the tendency there won't be any room left for the pantomimic action of the play and the title man will have the screen to himself."

Current Reviews

"THE CALL OF THE NORTH"

A considerably more enthusiastic audience than is ordinarily collected in a Los Angeles showhouse greeted Paramount's "The Call of the North" at its Granada (San Francisco) opening this week. For that matter the picturesque northwoods story, taken from Stewart Edward White's "The Conjuror's House," should be well received, for it is as attractive an offering of its kind as has been released for some time. Presenting several different thrills and a pretty romance backgrounded against magnificent scenery, the film story is carefully executed by an irreproachable cast which has at its head Jack Holt.

This is the first individually featured Lasky picture that the dependable performer of "The Little American" and other days, has had. but his ability and following warrant the promotion.

He is seen here as Ned Stewart, a young man who has masqueraded under an assumed name for many years that he might apprehend and punish the murderer of his father. Holt is a virile masculine type whose hero poise is just real enough to be romantic. The combination is fascinating, but wholesomely so.

In the leading feminine role, Virginia Albret, is happily established Madge Bellamy. Her action is not involved, but it is dispatched with a simple artistry that would have occasioned special attention even had we not reviewed this actress' exceptional interpretation in "Hail the Woman." Miss Bellamy's youthful radiance is of rare and unforgettable sort.

Noah Beery could not be more advantageously situated than he is in Albret, the ruthless Factor whose smallness of spirit is displayed in his unreasonable jealousy and love of power. Beery always takes liberties in his characterizations. They are entirely justified here.

Achillo, another exceptional French-Canadian, is done in this screen story by Francis MacDonald whose interpretations are invariably pleasing.

Edward Martindel, Helen Ferguson, Will Jim Hatton, Jack Herbert and Jane Keckley all play minor parts well.

"The Call of the North" (inexcusably mistitled by the way) makes a picture far superior to the story. It is an adaptation that can't disappoint. Joseph Henabery directed it with Faxon Dean at the camera. Excellent work must be credited to each.

"STRANGER THAN FICTION"

We greatly fear that Katherine MacDonald's latest starring production, "Stranger than Fiction," is going to prove too altogether "strangely" incoherent to appeal to the average picture patron. However, commendation should be placed where it is due and therefore someone must be lauded for a radical idea that just missed taking on "Go and Get It" proportions, but besides a story lack sufficient to narrow its possibilities for entrance into big league stuff, it suffers strangulation in the way of a careless and incompetent production.

We have always contended that the picture within a picture proposition was feasible and of no little value but we cannot point to its ever having been properly accomplished for proof. Here the idea is unusually jumbled in an attempt at a surprise finish and then explained only unsatisfactorily. That the burlesque introduction has much clever humor only makes the eventual flop the more pitiable.

To say that Miss MacDonald is much better than usual in Diane Drexel, the society belle heroine with a fad, would be too much; on the other hand she easily maintains her standard with a mediumly well managed role. It is not so disastrous for actresses of her type to gain avoirdupois as it is in the case of the ingenue.

MARTHA MATTOX

David Winter, in the male lead, doesn't give a spirited portrayal by any manner of means, but for that matter the amateur detective, which he alternately neglects and ignores, is not in itself spirited.

Wesley Barry is the one high light in the picture as Freckles, another quaint little Dinty, with, however, too greatly curtailed footage.

Wade Boteler, in a "chew up the scenery" heavy, the Black Heart, we refuse to take seriously, because we have seen and will again see him in countless worthwhile pieces of work.

J. M. Dumont, in a satisfactorily handled part, completes the list of principals.

J. M. Barry directed this First National attraction.

CONTEMPORARY CRITICISMS
"THE BONNIE BRIAR BUSH"

(Famous Players-British)

"is one of the best of the foreign made Paramounts. It is an adroit picturization of Ian MacLaren's classic story of the same title ,admirably directed by Donald Crisp, who also plays a leading role. It is an excellent story of Scottish life of half a century ago, doubtless meriting more patronage than the modern public will accord it."—Exhibitors' Herald.

"Just why 'The Bonnie Briar Bush' was selected for screen presentation is hard to say unless it was because it makes such a pretty picture. It hasn't much of a story and what there is of it has been used with more or less regularity since the beginning of motion pictures. But the locale is Scotland, which provides opportunity for picturesque settings, kilties and bonnets, and what the picture lacks dramatically it possesses scenically."—N. Y. Morning Telegraph.

"This story has reached the screen and it seems awfully old-fashioned and conventional, for MacLaren's theme has served in a thousand and one patterns since the birth of the photoplay. The younger generation will probably not respond to it. One has to be a trifle old-fashioned with a leaning for quaint sentiment and romance and atmosphere to appreciate it.—M. P. News.

"THE LOTUS EATERS"

(Neilan-First National)

"The personality of Jack Barrymore, a story that certainly is well out of the ordinary in dramatic ingredients, and direction that never misses an opportunity, all contribute in making 'The Lotus Eaters 'one of the most unusual and entertaining pictures of th eseason. It has all the sure-fire audience qualifications: thrills, comedy, suspense, love interest, beautiful scenic locations ,plot and numberless likable characters played by a company of carefully selected types."—M. P. World.

"John Barrymore, the Byronic, is there this week in 'The Lotus Eaters,' Marshall Neilan's screen translation of Albert Payson Terhune's story. It is one of the most divertingly satirical productions within memory. And most insidious propaganda for the South Pacific clime. As to the neurotic Jacques Lenoi, pere, the great Barrymore is beyond criticism. And as the lovable, poetic visionary, Jacques Lenois, fils, who never saw a woman until he was 25, he will be understood and applauded by the sophisticated, the tired business man and the effervescent matinee girl. Mr. Neilan's tropical ensemble is gorgeous and artistic."—N. Y .Morning Telegraph.

"SCHOOL DAYS"

(Warner Bros.)

"has all the whimsical charm of "The Old Swimmin' Hole' and the exploitation possibilities of a 'Mickey.' It is seven reels of good clean fun, with Wesley Barry the chief fun maker, supported by a well chosen cast. In sets and direction 'School Days' measures up to any of the recent big productions along this line."—Exhibitors' Herald.

"The eternal small boy to whom a bath is a punishment and a school book an unnecessary evil has been so well portrayed by Wesley Barry in Gus Edwards's 'School Days,' produced by Harry Rapf for Warner Brothers, that this motion picture promises to be a screen gold mine. It has been well done, so well, indeed, that big time and small time audiences alike will find it full of delightful incidents, good acting and the eternal appeal of unquenchable youth."—N. Y. Morning Telegraph.

Walter Law has been asked by the American Legion to sing one of the roles in their all-star revival of "Pinafore" at the Philharmonic Auditorium December 19. Before starting picture work he was a member of the Jackson opera company.

Billy Joy, brother of Leatrice Jay, is writing the closing chapters of "Creole Blood," to be published in book form by Harper Bros.

The Screen Writers' Forum

Conducted by Ted Le Berthon
Editor of The Photodramatist

TRIFLING WITH TRAGEDY

Screen writers shuold ever bear one point in mind: audiences inevitably resent being tricked. One must take an audience into one's confidence: it is far better to confuse the characters in a photoplay, and the interplay of motives, only insomuch as the characters themselves feel confused. An audience, however, likes to be let in on intrigues, mysteries, motives. One may successfully surprise an audience, but one cannot successfully employ trickery, as that usually connotes a certain contempt of the audience mentality. It is the difference in reactions that affects the success of a screen story—just as a budding friendship is affected. Tell an acquaintance of a jest you employed at another's expense, and he will laugh heartily; perpetrate the same jest on him and—he may cordially dislike you for it.

The more times an audience can be surprised in the course of a story, the better, providing that the situations are logical—actually might have happened, so that anyone might have been misled; but to make an audience think you're attempting one thing and then with some twist at the end show you meant something else all along, is to invite chagrin—that is, in serious drama. In comedy, the characters may have the laugh on one another, and on the audience to boot.

True, some of the master fictionists, employing the uttermost irony, have deftly made a seeming tragedy appear ridiculous at the denouncement. With the highest passions and the most sacred human precepts involved, they have introduced a note of absurdity or incongruity in their stories. But they addressed and still address a few readers, a relatively scant handful who can see the ridiculous in the tragic—and the tragic in the most ridiculous. In other words, they address the disillusioned, those who have pitilessly analyzed threadbare every human concept—those who have junked all the gods and see Life as an unfathomable absurdity.

One cannot trifle, however, with the accepted precepts, ideals, and institutions in addressing a movie audience. Unlike the disillusioned, they have very concrete ideas as to what is virtuous and expedient; they do not want high romance and passion to be suddenly pierced with the barb of satire or with stinging mirth. Their serious photodramas must remain serious to the bitter—or preferably happy—end. This does not mean that humorous relief is not welcome in the course of the story, but the humor must not be directed against the premises. By the same token, the comedian must remain the comedian from the first flicker to the final fade-out; only an audience of highly developed people have the intellectual and emotional capacity to guffaw at a human being for several reels and then—as the photodramatist reveals the intrinsic tragedy of the same human being—weep for him.

As an instance, Charlie Chaplin has wanted to attempt tragedy; there is no question—to those who see deeply or know—of his ability to enact tragic roles; but the public stomach is too weak and its heart too circumscribed to permit this. To think that one who makes one laugh till the sides ache knows aught of misery or hopelessness—why, that would be a ghastly revelation of the eternal skeleton at the feast, of the futility of existence. Our public won't stand for it, and can you blame them? Here is something for screen writers to think about.

SINCERITY

Smart, clever words and phrases have no place in screen writing, unless they accurately describe something or someone or some situation. For their own sake, no. There is no such thing as fine writing for the screen. There is room for the beginner in screen writing, for screen writers of none too much subtlety or depth, but there is no room for the dilettanti. Screen writing may be sincere and valid as no other form ever has been, for the obvious reason that it is concerned with essentials and with essentials only. Either Sherwood Anderson or Willa Cather would make excellent screen writers, and photoplays made from the scenarios of either would be genuine human documents—providing they were directed by a man who stood for simplicity and sincerity, unadorned by anything spectacular or clever. Neither of these fiction writers employ big words or involved, obscure passages, yet they attain effects misty or clear according to their purposes. All any screen writer need possess is feeling, imagination, and a sense of the dramatic—a sense of conflicting values. He need not use tall-browed bookster's delights—those polysyllables that delight the dilettante and often, the connoiseur.

Psychologically, there is another angle to the validity of screen writing. The element of vanity is diminished to a large degree, or even eleminated. The writer of fiction has ever in his mind the eventual reading of his own published stuff and the contemplation thereby of his cleverness, his mental agility , his fine nuances. The scenario writer's brain child cannot be contrived cleverly, lest the director misunderstand; the screen writer's message must be crystal clear, sincere, and direct. He must sketch his picture in painstaking, minute details—in pictorial terms that do not admit of too wide interpretation. No public ever reads this scenario, this blue-print. For like the architect's blue print, or the musical composition, or play, it must be interpreted to be given expression before an audience. Of course, all interpretations are more or less unfaithful. The Beethoven Pastoral Symphony would be interpreted differently by an Iowan band than by an orchestra of excellent musicians directed by Muck or Nikish.

Unfortunately, from the screen writer's standpoint, the completed motion picture production is a finality. It is the first and last interpretation. There are not even the possibilities—from the vanity standpoint—that await the successful playwright, whose work may be interpreted horribly by a small town stock company and admirably by John Barrymore and associate players.

However, there is a law of adjustment at work even here. The screen writer whose story is immensely worth-while can rest assured that it will be entrusted to a director of some capability; while the mediocre story is ground through by a lesser light, in machine-like style. There is a demand for sincere stories, written specifically for the screen—not by eminent authors or playwrights, but by those who can express themselves in simple, honest language: the language of Chekhov, Hamsun, Latzko, Tolstoi. But the language must be pictorial and the story must be dramatic.

THE DRAMATIC PHOTOPLAY

There is a time-worn saying to the effect that "It's not what you do, but the way you do it." Let this sink into the consciousness of the sincere photodramatist. Any photodrama of serious import, to be effective, must be founded on some great passionate crisis, in a realm where values clash—where the reason is perhaps drowned by the powerful cries of the heart; duty versus inclination, the easy or the hard path, the conventions of the past or the visions of the future. Incident is purely secondary—not what the characters do, but the way they become transfigured or altered in any way is the thing of importance. Passion creates incident, the hungry heart makes romance; inner conflict changes the outward scheme of things—makes the world look different; makes the world appear bright or sombre, hopeful or hopeless.

Passion must be the dominant, and must be played in the same key throughout. Not only this, but let nothing of levity or nonsense or facetiousness enter this type of photodrama. It would be as if a conductor interposed snatches from cheap popular airs in the performance of the Brahms C Minor Symphony; or as if some cheap roisterer were introduced into the final scenes of "The Death of Tintagillus." Passion at its full stature overawes, is the ambassador of destiny, looming magnificently above mere incident and circumstance; it has naught to do with reason, and therefore is alien to humor, which springs from the reason process.

The humorous relief which many writers, screen writers, and directors make much of, often ruins an otherwise well-conceived photoplay, in my opinion, especially if there is a faint suggestion of slapstickianism. If anything is introduced for light and shade, for contrast, let it be the thing which, while provoking a smile, induces a sub-conscious undercurrent of pity—and contributes to a rounded characterization. It is the eternal

FOREIGN DIRECTORS TO VISIT US

Ernst Lubitsch, German producer-director of motion pictures, will sail for New York early in January, according to information from Associated First National, who distributed in this country Lubitsch's "Passion," "Gypsy Blood," and "One Arabian Night." Herr Lubitsch will make a tour of inspection and investigation of American motion picture producing and releasing methods throughout the United States.

Another prominent European director, Dimitri Buchowetski, whose "Danton," which he both directed and wrote, is being released in this country by First National under the title of "All for a Woman," will visit this side early in the new year.

Buchowetski, it is stated, has secured from the Oberrammagau authorities the sole rights to make a screen production of "The Passion Play," which it was recently proposed to exhibit in this country.

BEAUTY CONTEST WINNER

Kathleen Collins, of San Antonio, Texas, is announced as the winner in Thomas H. Ince's 1921 Beauty Contest, which has just been brought to a close. Miss Collins is expected to arrive in Culver City presently where she will be given the opportunity to become a screen star under the direction and guidance of Mr. Ince.

According to the terms of the contest, Miss Collins will be given a six months' contract with Ince as a material reward for her victory. At the close of this contract Ince will have the option on her picture work for the next five years.

WALSH ENTERTAINS

Producer R. A. Walsh gave a birthday party at his home recently for Lionel Belmore, who plays the Laird in "Kindred of the Dust," Mr. Walsh's latest photoplay. The dinner party also celebrated the completion of the editing of "Kindred of the Dust," recently made at the Brunton Studio from the novel by Peter B. Kyne.

"THE MAN ON THE COVER"

Frank Glendon, who plays the dominant role in "What Do Men Want?" which opens at the California Monday, is one of the screen's regular "he men." Male vampires and lounge lizards have no attraction for him, he states ,and, indeed, his best work has been along virile characterization lines. His personal attitude also follows this trend as he loves the big timber and high mountains, and his ideal vacations are spent far from civilization .

Jazz functions and public appearances hold none of the attraction for this actor that does his home. About his career Mr. Glendon says:

"During my fifteen years in the theatrical business I have had a terrible time trying to be famous. Twice I have been threatened with an attack, but on each occasion was saved by the intervention of a capricious Fate, which apparently prefers to see me struggle diligently while many others appear and, like meteorites, shoot by and beyond and burn out with the fierceness of their genius. But I have a sense of humor and I'll laugh that adverse Fate to death as sure as it is Fate."

LEGION IN FILM

The Hollywood American Legion has loaned its band to the Christie studios for a soldier comedy being produced with Neal Burns playing the lead under Scott Sidney's direction. Disabled vets are also prominent in the picture.

Mr. D'Eyncourt is production manager of the International Artists concern, and his journey to this country was for the purpose of studying both the directorial and mechanical methods of American studio production.

With Thomas Meighan as the star and Mildred Harris as the leading lady, "A Prince There Was," which George M. Cohan made famous as a stage play, opens at the Grauman Million Dollar Theatre Monday, December 12th.

The Santa Monica Baptist Church recently projected on their screen, for the benefit of the public and the congregation, the Pacific Film Company's five-reel scenic picture, "The Call from the Wild."

LYTELL AND BREAMER IN WRITERS' FROLIC

Bert Lytell enacted the leading role in a one-act "skit" staged at the Screen Writers' Cramp at the Ambassador Hotel recently. Sylvia Breamer, who is appearing with him in his new Metro picture, also had an important part in the playlet.

Leatrice Joy is playing opposite Thomas Meighan in "The Proxy Daddy," which Alfred Green is directing for Lasky.

Mrs. Jacques D'Auray has returned to Hollywood from an extended stay in Boston, where she has been convalescing after a severe illness.

An all-star cast has been assembled by Clifford S. Elfelt for "The Trail of Kisses," a comedy-drama, featuring J. B. Warner, which Carl P. Winther and C. F. Reynolds will direct presently. Included in the list are such players as Kathleen Myers, George Hernandez, Frankie Lee, Lydia Yeamans Titus and Alfred Hollingsworth. L. A. Corson has been engaged as photographer.

silencing of one who has laughed and played gaily, who has babbled with all the joy of a sunny stream or has chatted with the abandon of a happy bird, that is most poignantly moving. But the elements of coarse comedy, of nonsense, are sharp discords which will mar a photodrama of serious pretensions. No director better understands this than David Wark Griffith, though he fell from grace somewhat in "Way Down East."

Frank Lanning and Lee C. Shumway are included in the cast of Hoot Gibson's latest starring vehicle for Universal entitled "The Land of the Lost."

CANADIAN CONDITIONS IMPROVING SAYS BRUNET

Paul Brunet, president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., has just returned from a visit to Montreal and Quebec with the information that the financial and business outlook in the Dominion is very promising. The Pathe executive was especially impressed with "the feeling of friendship, even comradeship, for the United States which animates the principal officials as well as the people of Canada," he declared.

On his return to New York Mr. Brunet said that, respecting film conditions, the situation in Canada seemed to be analogous to that in the United States. The same is true regarding general business. While there is no evidence of anything like a boom in Canadian business, there is a noticeable betterment in the investment market. He quoted the published belief of the financial editor of the Montreal Star that deflation has largely run its course, while the general tendency is toward reconstruction. One of the first signs the public has seen of recovering is in the bond market. As a result of hi stalks with Canadian men of finance. Mr. Brunet is of the opinion that other classes of securities soon will become more attractive to the general investor—all of which obviously are healthful indications.

Mr. Brunet expressed the belief that motion picture interests throughout Canada, as well as in the United States, demand, more than any other single consideration, a reduction in prices of admission, especially in agricultural communities ,where the cost of going to the movies is in particularly sharp contrast with the people's buying power, owing to low prices of farm produce.

Immediately on his arrival in Montreal Mr. Brunet found himself the guest of honor at a welcoming assemblage of influential editors and other newspaper men. Mr. P. Arthur Cote, president of the Montreal Press Club, acted as master of ceremonies. After giving a lively description of Pathe's activities all over the world, he introduced Mr. Fernand Rinfret, editor of Le Canada and Member of Parliament for St. James Division, Montreal. Mr. Rinfret, who is one of the foremost newspaper men of French Canada, conveyed to Mr. Brunet the feelings of those present toward the Pathe Exchange, describing especially the services of that great organization to the cause of science of his talks with Canadian men of finance, and of popular education.

BALLIN VS. SHUBERT ON "SPLIT BILLS" POLICY

When Lee Shubert last week announced in Motion Picture News a Shubert Vaudeville service to the owners and operators of moving-picture theatres "to bolster up their drooping business," and volunteered the opinion that "the day of the moving picture a sa complete entertainment is a thing of the past," he started what promises to be a very lively discussion. Already Hugo Ballin, the prominent producer ,makes vigorous rejoinder to the Shubert announcement, declaring that "the place in the sun for which the standard motion-picture has been waiting so long ,is ready. The silver-sheet is the greatest entertainment in the world today." And furthermore asserts Mr. Ballin: "Split-bills of vaudeville and pictures must inevitably lead to the destruction of both."

$1000 FOR A PLOT

The Scenarist's Copyright

By Irving Baltimore

Since the great growth of the motion picture industry, with its attendant wave of high prices, accusations of plot theft have been hurled promiscuously by authors.

That this class of larceny has existed, is undeniable. The fault rests not with the producing company, but almost invariably with an unscrupulous member of the scenario staff, or other department, who seeks to enrich himself by the adoption of a novel situation, or original device, and its application to his personal use, without regard to property right. The guilty one not only renders himself, but also the producer, liable to damages, and an injunction may be obtained, restraining showing of the production.

The scenarist may submit his manuscript to any producer or agent. This act is no more than a display of his wares to a prospective purchaser, and he parts with no right or title until an agreement has been consummated for the purchase of the scenario. However, wherever feasible, it is advisable to choose the more substantial concern to deal with; then there is less likelihood of appropriation without compensation.

The fly-by-night producing company most frequently is the product of a stock selling scheme. After the promoter has pocketed the limit, he absconds, and the organization is, as a rule, left to a hasty dissolution, or maybe bankruptcy. This is the chance one must take in submitting a scenario to a new company, when not sponsored by the most reputable persons. Witness the Captain Stoll production of "Determination," the Master Productions, and scores of other ephemeral producing companies.

The term "gag," until recently confined to oral interpolation in a play, has been broadened to encompass bits of "business," which usually have no material connection with the enactment of the plot. Inasmuch as there is no title to an idea and an infringement must be shown by a cumulation of similarities, or a sequence of scenes, these devices may often he appropriated without incurring any liability. The comment "old stuff" is sometimes the only danger encountered by plagiarism of this type. Larceny of this character would naturally be most prevalent in the case of comedies.

The average scenarist labors under the delusion that he must register his scenario, or comply with some rule of law, to preserve his rights, whereas, they are inherent in his script. So long as he conveys no title to his story, he cannot lawfully be deprived of ownership, and the benefits that flow therefrom.

Registration of a scenario, however, does serve an invaluable purpose. It enables the author, with ease, to establish his claim thereto, not only acting as evidence of the nature of the story, but also affording a date to guide in determining the question of infringement.

The Register of Copyrights at Washington refuses to allow registration of a scenario, basing his action on the ground that the statutory enumeration of unpublished works does not include one of this nature.

However, the scenarist may avail himself of the statute enacted by the last session of the California Legislature. The Act provides for registration of scenarios with the Secretary of State. The manuscript must be accompanied by an affidavit of authorship. The filing fee is $5.00.

IN EXAMINER PLAYLET

Among the screen players who are slated to appear in the annual Christmas benefit of the Los Angeles Examiner are Lewis S. Stone and Robert Edeson, both of whom are to play featured roles in a playlet, "The Triangle," while Truly Shattuck will have an important part in the proceedings.

AFFILIATES WITH ROBERTSON & WEBB

King Young is no longer publicity director at the Katherine MacDonald studios, having left the Georgia and Girard street studios to devote his time to the interests of Robertson & Webb, casting directors. John H. Blackwood, former theater manager, and more recently scenario scribe, replaces Young with Katherine MacDonald.

TO PRODUCE INDEPENDENTLY

Charles Gay has severed his connections with the Century Film Corporation, and will go into business for himself, producing his own pictures.

HOOVER ART EXHIBITION

Much interest is being taken in the forthcoming exhibition of paintings and neoclassic impressions at the Hoover Art Studios, original wood cuts by F. Geritz, etchings by Arthur Millier, oil paintings by Mrs. Blair Thomas and figure batiques by Fay Wray.

TO FILM MONKEY COMEDIES

Harry Burns, director of Snookey and Joe Martin Comedies for Universal, is forming a corporation to produce two-reelers with little Napoleon, the chimpanzee of vaudeville fame. The pictures will be known as "Little Nap Comedies,' 'production on which will start soon after the holidays.

Upon the completion of his latest picture Bert Lytell is to start on a personal appearance tour of the West.

Charles Clary has just finished this week in "Hate," the Maxwell Karger production for Metro in which he plays an important role in support of Alice Lake.

Reginald E. Lyons has returned from Tulsa, Okla., where he made a western feature for the W. M. Smith Productions with Franklyn Farnum.

Cameron Coffey, the child actor and swimmer, will appear in a singing and dancing act for the Maple Leaf Club at the Gamut Club Saturday night, Dec. 10th.

WALES TO PRODUCE

R. Ellis Wales has returned from New York after an absence of three years, and is making preparations for four productions for Storyart Pictures Corporation, release being through Hodkinson. The first production will be a story by Richard Washburn Child, entitled "The Hands of Nara."

Surveying San Francisco

For many years San Francisco has offered innumerable inducements to the picture colony which she has anticipated appropriating, or at least sharing with her southern sister, the film capital. Recently several companies have started production at studios in and about the Bay City. Next week an editorial survey of the present San Francisco situation will appear in Camera! by its editor, Fanchon Royer, who is now upon the ground studying conditions at first hand.

Independent Producers,
Everywhere,
U. S. A.

Gentlemen:

We wish to call your attention to the newly formed Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., an organization of West Coast film men who have instituted this company to meet the needs of independent exchange men everywhere.

Our business will be based upon the principle of honest and conscientious distribution at minimum cost. Ours is an independent organization, with no hidden strings attached, catering to the independent producer. One motive alone—actual co-operation between the man who makes pictures and the man who sells pictures—will do much to eliminate the huge overhead expense necessary to operate the "in between system" heretofore used by distributing companies, resulting in the actual fact that exchange men will thus be enabled to purchase better pictures for less money than in the past, and the producer will receive quicker returns and better results.

We will distribute good standard pictures—the kind of pictures the market wants. Our program will range from one-reel novelties and comedies, two-reel comedies and westerns, to five and six-reel standard and special features. We invite your investigation and would be pleased to have you call and discuss the distribution of any subjects now in the making or contemplated for future production.

Very truly yours,
ANCHOR FILMS DISTRIBUTORS, Inc.

In San Francisco

If Los Angeles, the world's film capital, had not been aware of the fact that San Francisco, her rival sister city, has long coveted at least a portion of the picture producing industry, she would indeed have proven herself to be inordinately stupid, for of late years the northern town has continually held forth the most remarkable inducements to us in an attempt to attract and profitably hold our favorable consideration of her as a film making centre.

That this effort has accomplished possibly less success than would have been anticipated for it, has been due to several reasons of various proportions.

First and foremost, it is no simple matter to tear an industry out of its especially constructed plants and created atmosphere. Furthermore the climatic conditions of the Bay region have never been proven practical for picture taking. These are but examples of obstacles which have not yet been overcome.

Nevertheless, the San Francisco cordiality, coupled with its list of diversified locations, has attracted a few active companies into that territory. It is about these outfits, made up to a large extent of former Hollywood picture people, that we are concerned in the following space.

A surprisingly humming little studio is the Pacific, the entirely modern plant which houses the active companies in the San Mateo district. It was planned and erected by Jasper of our own Hollywood Studios, and there exists a marked family resemblance in layout and lines between the two.

Isadore Bernstein, formerly of Universal and National, oversees things. The only unit now "shooting" is Jacques Jaccard's Monroe Salisbury company taking a Northwestern written by the director. More stages, dressing rooms, etc., are under construction, which would point to an expansion or an idea of space letting to location companies.

All members of the organization are enthusiastic about the environment and seem to appreciate the more friendly attitude of the San Franciscans as compared to the non-professional mental trend of Los Angeles.

This feeling is also held by the Paul Gerson people who are preparing to produce two-reel comedies down in the city proper.

However, if several theatre managers are to be credited, the Arbuckle case has done much to dampen the enthusiasm of the more conservative boosters. One showman even pointed that his houses had been materially decreased by the unpopular tragedy.

Even so, that which we saw of northern California production was very encouraging for it and we could not help considering that competition is a stimulation of which both the Los Angeles film man and the Los Angeles long-hair have been in dire need.

That this situation can become in anyway unfortunate for us by detracting one whit from Los Angeles' prominence or its control of picture production is unthinkable. In fact, a few northern studios are badly needed as headquarters for locationing outfits.

Our own associates are up there making good upon a pioneering proposition. We wish them only the best of luck.

F. R.

British Complications

Just to prove that our American releasing problem is the "simplest thing in the world," the independent exhibitors to the contrary, we publish the following from "The Kinematograph Weekly." Truly there is much to be thankful for—always.

"It is probable that release reform will be hastened as much by the tactics of some renting concerns as by any other factor. One or two distributing houses are certainly, even if unintentionally, exposing the absurdity of the present system by offering features for short release to exhibitors whom they have previously loaded up with long-dated films. It is bad enough to be asked to shelve earlier bookings to make room for 'immediate' releases; when the same renter has to be paid for both bookings the joke becomes altogether too broad. Nor is the case any better if a producing organization, after filling up exhibitors with its films through a middleman, takes to direct distribution, or distribution through another middleman, on the short release system. In some cases the 1921 output of an American organization is being offered for early release while the exhibitors' books are filled up with its 1920 output. It is not fair trading, but immediate retaliation is difficult, and a real remedy can only come through all films being issued on the same plan, and on as short a trade show-release period as possible. At present, certain short releases are going into 'special exhibition,' because exhibitors loaded up with the same producer's earlier output, cannot take them; that state of affairs ought not to be allowed to continue."

Film Capital Production Notes

NEW FINANCING PROJECT FOR L. A.

News of the latest cinema project came to light this week through the filing of articles of incorporation at the local offices of the California Commissioner of Corporations by the National Motion Pictures Finance Corp.

The new organization is capitalized for one million dollars. While no Los Angeles bankers appear as officers or directors on the official records, it is reported that not less than two Southern California banking institutions have agreed to lend their support to the proposition.

Canadian, eastern, midlle west and Pacific Coast capital is said to head the enterprise for Laurence A. Lambert, for many years an executive of the Canadian Pacific Railway is named as president; Karl Merris, former general manager of the Decatur Fountain company, owned and operated by a million dollar company, is vice president; William W. Damron, president of the Industrial Manufacturing Company of Kansas City, is vice president; Alfred G. Roberts, retired president of Gillette, Gibson and Company and vice president of Sunkist Candy company of Los Angeles, is another vice president; R. L. Caruthers, former secretary of the Green Ridge Coal Company of Oklahoma is secretary; and R. J. Schroeder, more recently vice president of the Farmers' and Merchants' Bank of Independence, Mo., is treasurer.

President Lambert has been recently identified with Los Angeles business circles as the president of the Financial Loan and Investment company.

R. C. Millard, for several years comptroller of Universal City, has been chosen auditor. F. D. R. Moote and E. S. Patterson have been retained as legal advisors.

With the formation of this newest organization the picture industry will have two fiscal allies in the financing of independent production. The results achieved by the Cinema Finance Corporation is said to have made it possible to interest capital in another such project. The former organization which has done much toward keeping Los Angeles the center of the screen world had associated with it John E. Barber of the First National Bank; John B. Miller, president of the Southern California Edison company, Motley H. Flint, and Dan Murphy, wealthy oil operator.

According to President Lambert, the new organization will not encourage wild-cat production. An advisory council is to be formed that will pass on the merits of every proposition before a penny is advanced. This council will be made of experts in production, exhibition, exploitation, story values, and other necessary lines to estimate in advance the possible return from every picture.

In no instance will more than fifty per cent of the cost of a production be advanced, and then only when the producing company has a specific contract for the release of its pictures.

The next Eugene O'Brien picture for Selznick is entitled "Channing of the Northwest" and is starting production at the eastern studios.

BARTHELMESS ON THIRD

Richard Barthelmess' third production for Inspiration Pictures will be a version of George Hobart's play, "Sonny." The picture will be made in the east under the direction of Henry King.

Current Reviews

"FACE OF THE WORLD"

Clune's

After having read perhaps a half dozen radical roasts upon Irvin Willat's production for Hodkinson, "Face of the World," we have just spent the best part of an evening thoroughly enjoying it. Moreover, we consider it far the most interesting and artistic picture yet released by Willat upon this program. That Johan Bojer's novel from which the cinema story was adapted by the director has been quite cruelly murdered does not seem so irreparable in light of the fact that the result is an entertaining play which will probably hold forth a greater appeal than a more accurate translation of the original would have done. Personally we were entranced with the idea that there were no rollicking submarines necessary to the simple love story of Thora and Dr. Mark. However, the subject of submarines brings us around to the Willat miniatures which appear as expediently as usual.

Several of the situations contain carefully controlled kicks put over with a refinement that has not always shown itself in this producer's work. The titles and photography by Clyde de Vinna are more pleasing than the continuity.

The cast is excellent.

Barbara Bedford troupes through Thora, the human wife of a talented and ambitious poor man, doing the most consistently superior and "pointed" interpreting in her comparatively short career. Not a foot of her action is wasted nor an effect lost.

Edward Hearn, co-featured with Miss Bedford, is absolutely to be depended upon for a sincere, entirely convincing performance under any circumstance. Therefore, although Dr. Mark's footage has been slighted to a degree, he holds up his half of the bargain perfectly with an excellent characterization.

Lloyd Whitlock as Duprac, the heavy, is better situated than usual completing the triangle, while one of Harry Duffield's gentle, never-to-be-forgotten portrayals is included among the principals. He played Grandpa. With his death has gone a well loved screen character.

J. P. Lockney, Fred Huntley and Gordon Mullen are striking types to fill out the cast.

"WIFE AGAINST WIFE"

Kinema

Whitman Bennett's production of "Wife Against Wife," an adaptation by Dorothy Farnum of George Broadhurst's play, "The Price," is a good example of time, money and talent squandered hopelessly upon a puny, almost disgustingly Victorian theme which has apparently been literally translated for it rambles on and on, dragging several unreal characters through plots and counter-plots, jumping ten years (piecemeal) and arriving—nowhere. The main trouble is the plot's absolute dependence upon coincidence which never reasonably excuses the connection of the three different stories included in the play. Modern producers should use better judgement than the sort which would lead to the filming of a tedious tale like this.

The cast is really quite interesting even though several of the portrayals are greatly ovedrawn.

Pauline Starke, as Gabrielle Gautier, the little French model, is as fascinating as usual but not quite so youthful for some unhappy reason. Since Gabrielle has no particularly vivid moments, however, there is nothing to set her out.

Percy Marmont does the artist Dole, the chief cog in the plot, very well, indeed. He is a type and to all appearances a very good actor.

RAYMOND McKEE

Edward Langford enacts Gabrielle's adoring but misled husband satisfactorily, and Emily Fitzroy handles Mrs. Dole, the villainess. And, merciful heavens, what a villainess! She has the world licked on the ogre face, personality and carriage. The only difficulty is that there certainly never lived such a creature as she here offers. In any event, she is a sensation.

The direction is exceedingly uneven for while the scenes are staged well, it never once overcomes a poor continuity by inserting interest into it.

The public loves clever performing and detail but it demands a story. This one is unforgivable.

"THEODORA"

Pre-view

The Italian-made spectacle, "Theodora," which was produced by Unione Cinematograph Italia, and is being released by Goldwyn after having been cut down to eighty-seven hundred feet by that organization, is principally noteworthy for its massive settings and, in so far as we know, unprecedented mobs. Indeed, no previous production that we have seen from our own or the foreign studios has contained crowds to compare either in extent or management with the ones here seen. Particularly more realistic are they than those in "Passion," and other big German films.

As for the Byzantium court sets, we cannot believe them to be studio built entirely. Certainly they are overpowering in their solidity and detail. Aside from these technical elaborations, however, there is not a great deal to recommend "Theodora" as a box office attraction. Its plot, the love story of Justinian, Theodora and Andreas is just another tragedy rather haphazardly developed without due regard for the human elements.

Outside of the work of a fascinating Frenchwoman, in the title role, the acting is more or less jerky, unconvincing and entirely without transition. The male performances are altogether too effeminate to please American fans.

There is no exaggeration in the statement that this picture is stupendous, however, and the unusual "kick" in its wild lion work is not to be denied. "Theodora" might have cost anything.

"A PRINCE THERE WAS"

Grauman's

A simple, much padded, but exceedingly diverting little romance is Darragh Aldrich's "A Prince There Was," which Lasky chose as a starring vehicle for Thomas Meighan and produced under the direction of Tom Forman from Waldemar Young's scenario. Although it is largely to the credit of an unusual cast that the weakness of the story is in a measure overcome, the direction is also competent if not particularly brilliant, and the whole is fitted into convincing settings, as one would expect from the Lasky technical department.

Charles Edward Martin, the leading role, is a much more advantageous position for the star than have been countless others assigned to him. Martin is a dissipated millionaire who educates himself into the "prince" class. He is therefore, a thoroughly enjoyable "straight," flawlessly handled.

Mildred Harris supports Meighan in the principal feminine postion, a type of thing which she is pronouncedly more suited to handle than star parts. As the pretty young authoress, Katharine Woods, she makes a thoroughly interesting "feeder," in itself an accomplishment.

Charlotte Jackson, whom the titlers still like to call "Peaches," is her most intelligently appealing young self in Comfort Brown, a child slavey with initiative. Charlotte is one of the steadier burning infant lights of the cinema.

Nigel Barrie as a sympathetic editor and Arthur Hull as the deepest dyed of commercial villains are fortunate choices for their roles, while Guy Oliver, Fred Huntly and Sylvia Ashton offer some of their most superior characterization in the valet, Mr. Cricket and the landlady.

Harry Perry photographed the production to much more than satisfaction.

"WHAT DO MEN WANT?"

California

A vital theme of universal attraction which with subtle interpretation might have approached in value the one treated by Gardner Sullivan in Ince's "Hail the Woman," is included in Lois Weber's latest release, "What Do Men Want?" The continuity, direction and detail are so badly botched, however, that (according to the audience's own decree) it is to laugh!—or else be repulsed, for there is no utilization of delicacy in the presentation of this sex subject. It's lack is fatal! In any event the picture result is cheap, two painfully sordid love stories unevenly told. If the original

HUNTER AT MIRROR STUDIOS

Frank W. Tuttle and Fred Waller, Jr., have rented the Mirror Studios to produce a series of five-reel comedy-dramas featuring Glenn Hunter.

Mr. Hunter, who is now playing the juvenile role opposite Billie Burke in the Booth Tarkington stage play, "The Intimate Strangers," will also be remembered for his characterization of Bobby in Mr. Tarkington's "Clarence."

Mr. Hunter has several pictures to his credit, having played opposite Constance Binney in "The Case of Becky," and more recently as the juvenile with Norma Talmadge in "Smilin' Through."

Shooting on the first picture of the series is in the second week of production under the direction of Mr. Tuttle, who also wrote the story and continuity. Mr. Tuttle was formerly associated with the Famous Players' scenario department, where he adapted several successes for the screen, notably "The Conquest of Canaan."

Mr. Waller, who has charge of the photography in the Hunter series, was also lately identified with Famous Players, for which company he did the title work on "Deception," "Peter Ibbettson," "Footlights," "The Golem," etc.

Walter R. Sheridan is the assistant director. Albert Viragh Flower and Ernest Fegte are responsible for the art direction.

SUPPORTING SALISBURY

Surrounding Munroe Salisbury in the picturization of "The Great Alone," under production at the Pacific Studios at San Mateo, are Draga, a 15-year-old San Francisco girl, who is playing the leading feminine role; Lura Anson, who played the lead opposite Tom Meighan in "If You Believe It It's So;" George Waggner, the "Yousseff" of "The Shiek;" H. The Screen Writers' Forum

Conducted by Ted Le Berthon
Editor of The Photodramatist

There is one thing that the photodramatist residing in metropolitan centers must beware of: the metropolitan viewpoint! He must be brought to realize that motion pictures are shown in the tiniest hamlets, the smallest, grimmest villages, and at the most desolate outposts of civilization.

This does not mean that he should be circumscribed by this contemplation of stupidity engendered by provincialism. But, for the sake of his own art, he must beware of the provincialism of great cities! The motion picture, as a universal language, must be essentially universal in its treatment of ideas and ideals.

Nothing makes for swifter, radical decadence than an over-sophistication. Now the successful screen writer, with considerable income, resident of a large city, is apt to become saturated with the atmosphere of a super-sophisticated group of fellow artists, and to henceforth interpret life in terms of their codes and standards.

As a speculative thinker, the individual screen writer may entertain any views or theories of life which appeal to him; he may, with George Jean Nathan—Nietzsche by proxy—contemplate "the late Jehovah;' he may theoretically agree that the belief in a God is just as superstitious as a belief in a devil; but in his photoplay writing he must touch the common heart, the person who hopes, fears, suffers, plods, leans.

Therefore, he must know that the common people, in big city or rustic village, reverence their illusions; that without these illusions—if such they be—the commoner would face a stark, stony, pathetic waste, a world without color, without beauty. And beauty is the mother of illusion, which is hope.

The provincial concept of beauty connotes a moral beauty. Your commoner has never soared "beyond good and evil." The way a woman dresses and behaves is still a very significant thing to him. What would pass unnoticed in a fashionable cosmopolitan cafe, or in a group of "artists," shocks and grieves the American peasant. His association of ideas indexes a cocktail-drinking, cigarette-smoking woman as the antithesis of what he would have his own mother, wife, or sister be. He still believes that a liberal display of limbs, an extravagant coiffure, and a daringly lowcut gown are feminine devices for tempting the male of the species. To the man who moves in the same social stratum with modishly gowned women—most often women of culture, wit, and fine beauty—the coiffure, the snugly silk-clad limbs and the "rhapsodically" cut gown represent the frame of a more or less exquisite portrait.

A certain prominent director has attained many voluptuously beautiful moods and effects in his photodramas through contriving them in a pattern of sophisticated elegance. His scenarists have to provide him with stories in which gay, sometimes insolent, women are engaged in manifold intrigues. Cocktails of complex, subtle brewing; the exoticism of Oriental hangings; pale, yet sensual tapestries; incense; cigarette-smoking flappers; all are mirrored in his cinemas. He has attempted the Continental note. Perhaps he has achieved it.

Now, I could not be honest with myself and still declare that I have not hugely enjoyed most of this director's handiwork. One cannot deny beauty, and beauty he has attained; but his blend is too rich. Upon viewing one of his recent photoplays, I felt impelled to hie myself to the hills, to drink in the healing tonic of redolent trees and feel the thrill of strong winds. I longed for the reassuring touch of Mother Earth, for the softer tints and tones of foliage and rock—invigorating, clarifying. The viewing of the super-sophisticated photoplay affected me like an over-indulgence in French pastry. I needed the antidote of Nature.

BARBARA MAIER

One note of beauty that has been missing in the films can be supplied, perhaps by the same director. Instead of the "colour" induced by artificial surroundings, instead of beauty of voluptuous strain, producing what is arbitrarily termed a wicked atmosphere, why not the wantoness which comes from superabundant healthiness—the youthful impulses that leap from the sheer joy of breathing in the poetry of majestic forests or great rivers?

There is a vast difference between the interplay of healthful, natural forces, the romance of those in whom Life flows like a majestic torrent—of those who feel to their inmost fibres the meaning of the Earth—and the Earthly Paradise of a cigar drummer's day dreams.

But whether or not the photodramatist takes cognizance of a healthful or a decadent beauty, he must successfully intrigue the scenario staff reader, who—despite his faults—has sapience enough to know that the profits in the motion picture industry are derived from the extensive exhibition of photoplays in small towns. One producer has said that he was infinitely more concerned with the opinion of Peru, Indiana, or Orange, California, than he was with New York's or Boston's, as concerned with the ultimate box-office possibilities. And the small towns will rebel—and censorship will arise—if a sustained super-sophisticated cinema diet is proffered.

"A Blind Bargain" is the release title for the picture, "The Octave of Claudius," recently completed at Goldwyn.

GOLDWYN WRITER GIVES NEW ANGLE ON CENSORSHIP

That the censors are largely responsible for the present depression and falling off of attendances at motion picture theatres throughout the country, was pointed out by Paul Bern, scenario editor of Goldwyn, before members of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers at their last meeting in Hollywood.

"The writer for the screen has become so handicapped by the censors that he cannot help himself but is compelled to give the motion picture public silly, weak stories that do not begin to portray life as it really is," said Mr. Bern.

"Sex is life itself. If it were not, neither the censors nor the motion picture industry would be in existence. Sex is a vital element in the construction of drama. It is drama itself. Without it there is little left for the drama. The abuse of sex themes of course, has been evident. But there is an abuse of everything else in life on the part of the minority.

"We cannot show on the screen, for instance, such things as mob fights because as one censor said, this would incite rioting on the part of the poorer classes. The great ingredient in a climax is therefore removed. In short, the punch is taken out of a situation, an episode, a picture. This happens so frequently that nothing but the weak, ordinary, passive remains.

"To show good we must show bad. To show virtue triumphant we must show what it triumphs over. Otherwise, there is no drama. I predict that if censorship continues the time is not far distant when the public, which is now turning away from the motion picture because of the insipid stories we are compelled to create, will desert this form of entertainment to such an extent that our business will not be in the fifth but the twenty-fifth industry in this country."

Pickups By The Staff

INAUGURATES OPEN FORUM

As a demonstration of the sincere desire of the United Studios to fully cooperate with its producer-tenants, M. C. Levee, President of United, has inaugurated a series of weekly conferences which are being attended by Mr. Levee and his department managers and the representatives of the organizations which make their productions under the new United plan of cooperative production control.

The newly adopted rental proposition, under which the producer is charged a flat fee per picture, is a radical departure from the former Brunton cost-plus method, and Mr. Levee has planned the regular weekly "get-together" as the logical means of assurance of the smooth working-out of the plan through the medium of the open forum.

The first of these meetings, which was presided over by Mr. Levee, was attended by representatives of Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Joseph M. Schenck, who controls the Norma Talmadge and Constance units; Mme. Nazimova, Jackie Coogan Productions, Allen Holubar, Richard Walton Tully, Chester Bennett Productions, Benjamin B. Hampton, Lewis J. Selznick, J. L. Frothingham, Emory Johnson Productions and Hamilton-White Comedies.

Okey, Art and Technical Director; Thomas Little, Superintendent of Properties; Walter Strohm, Electrical Superintendent; A. T. Pelton, Purchasing Agent, and Al Reithe, Location Manager and Superintendent of Grounds.

In outlining the purpose of the conferences Mr. Levee said he believed these meetings would insure the rapid solution of problems that might arise and that they would give himself and his producer-tenants the benefit of "The other fellow's viewpoint."

PATHE ANNOUNCES RELEASE THEORY FOR COMING YEAR

Special preparedness to meet the needs of exhibitors during 1922 is announced by Pathe.

In this connection special emphasis is placed on the increasing value of the program made up mainly of the best class of short subjects. In a statement published more than a year ago, Paul Brunet announced that this tendency was foreseen and that Pathe Exchange was concentrating on short subjects and serials—the episode character of the latter placing it in the same classification. The present announcement declares that energetic action under this policy enables that company to face the new year with confidence.

The claim is made of having very satisfactorily solved the "feature problem" so vexing to a large class of exhibitors—meaning the picture of from five to eight reels that is attractively exploited and relied upon to file the house. The "problem" is that of the many exhibitors who, in order to meet the expense of playing such a feature, feel it necessary to omit from their program standard short pictures, although aware that these are established favorites with their patrons, Even if the "feature" is a sure fire hit it does not lessen the need for a diversified program, according to this theory, but if it is lacking in broad popular appeal, many in the audience will regret their admission investment who would have gone away quite satisfied after a hearty laugh over a comedy following the feature, or contained in a short subject program. Such would also seem to them to come back again sooner than had been their intention.

Referring to conversations with exhibitors in different sections, the case is stated in this way:

The tendency of the times is to give more for a dollar. When a movie patron goes to a candy store she finds that more and better candy can be had for a dollar than at any time in the past three years. Naturally she expects a similar advantage when paying her money in at the picture theatre box office. An audience is a gathering of people brought together by different motives. A certain percentage come to see the "Feature" but there is also a large number who attend through a desire to see the News reels. Others consider their money best invested in novelties, or comedies. It takes all these different groups of people to make a paying audience. And unless everybody in the audience gets something he or she especially likes, habitual attendance at that theatre is not to be counted on.

Roy Atwell is supporting Mary Miles Minter in "The Heart Specialist," under the direction of Frank Urson at Realart.

Clara Horton first came into screen prominence when she played one of the leading roles in "The Yellow Dog," a Universal-Jewel production made during the war.

What Pathe announces to be the only motion pictures for public consumption showing President Harding addressing the 67th Congress at its opening session, will be presented in its News Reel, No. 99.

Walter Law ,the well-known cinema actor, recently completed a 64-week tour of one of the bigger vaudeville circuits with a monologue act. He is just finishing an important part at the Pacific Studios, San Mateo.

idea had not been worthwhile it would not have mattered, but its mutilation is a crime.

On the whole, the cast is wasted upon the parts. J. Frank Glendon, in the leading role, for instance, lacks the opportunity to do his best work and the author has so arranged his action that he loses much sympathy. At that, his performance of Frank, the husband, is the most attractive in the piece. Glendon's personality should never be stilted as it is here.

Claire Windsor's chief feminine position, Hallie, the wife, is also vaguely unappealing and insipid, perhaps again due to the creator's lack of perception. It should be said that Miss Windsor herself is showing marked improvement in her work.

George Hackathorne, always clever, renders Arthur, the weakling who goes painfully astray, as sensibly as the impossible part could be played, but the effort is a little too great.

Hallam Cooley as Yost, the evil influence, never very menacing, by the way, and Edith Kessler in the wallflower complete the cast.

Wid Gunning distributes "What Do Men Want?" which was both written and directed by Miss Weber.

Supplemented by Sid Grauman's Christmas presentations, "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," will be given its world premier at Grauman's Rialto on Sunday. Created from George M. Cohan's stage play and George Randolph Chester's stories this production was directed by Frank Borzage, director of "Humoresque."

Among those included in the cast are Sam Hardy, the original Wallingford in the Cohan play; Norman Kerry, Doris Kenyon and Diana Allen.

ORIENTAL SHOWMAN IN STUDIO COLONY

Richard Bell, motion picture theatre circuit man whose main office is at Shanghai, China, has been a recent visitor at the Christie Studios, where a special film has been made to show Chinese audiences the inside of a typical motion picture studio plant.

Mr. Bell operates theatres, both for English speaking and native audiences through China.

FAIRBANKS TO ARRIVE SHORTLY

A general house-cleaning is now under way at the Douglas Fairbanks Studio and in the offices of the Mary Pickford Company at the United Studios, in anticipation of the return of the Fairbanks', who are expected to arrive in Los Angeles shortly.

At the Fairbanks Studio a new fire protection system has been installed, new film vaults and a series of cutting-rooms. It has been reported in foreign press dispatches that Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks were considering a joint production called "The Florentine Lover," an Italian story which they had originally planned to do abroad.

Richard Tucker recently appeared at the Philharmonic Auditorium in "The Iron Judge," a one-act play by Joseph Jackson, exploitation director at Goldwyn, and is now supporting Clara Kimball Young in "The Worldly Madonna," which Harry Garson is producing at the Garson Studios.

LYTELL AND DANA TO MAKE TRANSCONTINENTAL TOURS

Bert Lytell and Viola Dana, of Metro's list of stars, are about to embark on a "get acquainted" tour of the United States that will take one player or the other into practically every big city in the country. When Metro decided that a vacation of probably six weeks would be necessary, through a re-adjustment of film schedules, both Mr. Lytell and Miss Dana decided to make use of this period to make their transcontinental dash.

GUBBINS ON TRIP TO CHINA

Thomas Gubbins, who assisted Norman Dawn in the direction of Sessue Hayakawa's latest R-C production, "The Vermilion Pencil," is expecting to leave shortly for China to bring back a large stock of Chinese costumes and studio properties. Gubbins is an expert on Chinese technique in pictures. L. W. Tung ,Chinese business man of Los Angeles, is associated with Mr. Gubbins in the business venture and has already sailed for China.

Paul Terry, who creates the series of "Aesop's Film Fables" for the screen, has taken advantage of the recent Ku Klux Klan disclosures and made "The Wayward Dog," the newest animated cartoon of the series, which is scheduled for release the week of December 25th.

George Hackathorne is considering an offer from Archie Frazier, film magnate of Australia, to head a producing company of his own organization.

Legal Queries

ANSWERED BY IRVING BALTIMORE

Q. What is the duration of copyright in the United States?

A. Twenty-eight years, with privilege of renewal by the author or his next of kin, for a further period of twenty-eight years. Right of renewal must be exercised during the twenty-eighth year of the initial period.

Q. Under a contract for the services of an actor for a definite period, can he be forced to appear as provided for in his contract?

A. No. None can be made to perform a personal service of this character; but the actor would be liable for damages incurred by his failure to appear according to the terms of his contract. An injunction can be obtained, however, restraining the actor from appearing elsewhere, or for any other party, during the term of the contract.

Q. In the case of bankruptcy of a motion picture company, does one lose his claim for services rendered?

A. A claim should be filed with the Referee in Bankruptcy. The assets of the bankrupt concern are divided amongst the creditors.

In the case of corporations organized under the laws of California, or any other state, where stockholders liability statutes are in force, the claim may be collected from the stockholders, according to their proportionate interest, provided suit is brought within a certain period. Action must be preferred against the stockholders of a California corporation within three years after the original obligation was incurred.

Q. Are any rights forfeited by distribution and display of stills, posters, or "paper" of any other character, without copyrighting the same?

A. Only the right to the reproduction of the individual pictures. In the case of a photoplay, no right to reenact a scene, or any portion of the same, would be waived by the display of such advertising matter.

CHARLES CONKLIN TO STAR

Charles Conklin, fun-maker of the screen and former Mack Sennett star, will soon be starred at the head of his own company, according to announcement made by Harry S. Haven, who is president and general manager of the newly formed and incorporated Charles Conklin Company.

SALISBURY PICTURE UNDER WAY

Production at the Pacific Studios in San Mateo is well under way on "The Great Alone," the first of a series of pictures to be made by the West Coast Films Corporation starring Monroe Salisbury. "The Great Alone" is an original story by Mr. Jaccard and James Colwell with its locale in Alaska.

Degrees of Showmanship

An artist is never great enough to profitably allow his selfishness or his temperament to interfere with his art. A showman never accomplishes for his house heights of popularity from which he can afford, consciously or otherwise to overlook his showmanship, his ethics if you will.

At the first Christmas-week performance at Grauman's Theatre, several hundred patrons stood for one hour after the advertised opening time in a rain-tracked lobby awaiting admittance to the showhouse whose box office had collected their ticket money with no warning of the delay which was to bring them discomfort and disgust. Irate questioning brought no explanatory replies from the stoical attendants in charge and dissatisfaction ran high. A few of the more sensible fans, having recovered their admission, waded out into the deluge with thoroughly expressive countenances. Others remained in momentary expectancy dreading the cashier's surrounding rush and desirous of keeping under some sort of shelter from the raging elements. Nevertheless, the waiting was not endured patiently as was indicated by occasional outbursts in the lobby and later in the theatre itself by a regrettable demonstration during a musical number. It was an atrocious afternoon, which will long be remembered by those who stood it out.

If we hadn't personally experienced this identical procedure twice before under extreme weather conditions at this particular theatre, we would only remark it as a piece of sadly injurious inefficiency. But since it has precedents, we have wondered considerably—and still we cannot think it reasonable that even an unlimited number of observances regarding the size of the Grauman crowds in miserable weather will begin to offset the evil effect of the publicity spread by the "practiced ons."

Whatever the circumstance the famous Grauman showmanship standard is the greatest loser. Neither its popularity nor the public's good nature should be put to too tiresome a test. It doesn't mean enough and besides it is unfair all around.

F. R.

A Profitable Charity

While we are giving and receiving happy Christmas wishes we usually turn responsive ears to the charity pleas made by those who are perhaps more tirelessly unselfish than we. The mission of George E. Pelton, one of our industry's foremost benefactors of the needy, who collects money to facilitate the installation of the cinema in hospitals, public institutions, etc., should particularly appeal to the motion picture industry. Mr. Belton is doing a noble as well as a progressive work. What project is there to which we could more profitably contribute our bit at this season? Checks should be made payable to Charlotte Fisher, Superintendent of the Los Angeles Orphans' home, 815 El Centro, Hollywood.

The Trade Press Remarks

What seems to be the general attitude of the trade press toward the recently formed National Association of the Motion Picture Industry is set forth in the Exhibitors' Herald as follows:

"The negotiations that have been in progress for several weeks looking toward the formation of a new association of producers and distributors aimed largely to supplant the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry present several interesting phases.

"Readers will wonder why, if the negotiations have been in progress for several weeks, the trade papers did not print a report. The explanation is that the various trade publications were specifically requested to refrain from any possible premature announcement. Those associated with the new proposition apparently were so busy prevailing upon the trade press to withhold the report that they did not have time to guard themselves against talking outside the trade about the proposition which resulted in a New York newspaper getting and printing the report last week.

"The creation of a new association does not offer in itself an assured relief from the ills of the existing organization. The present National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has not been a failure, but there is no secret to the fact that it repeatedly has fallen far short of expectations. This has been more due to the apathy of the persons who should be interested than to any other single cause. The absence of team-work has been another factor. But a new association can hardly be expected to fare any better if every time an individual or a company is dissatisfied with something that is or is not done they cease co-operation with the organization and commence to oppose it publicly."

The Screen Writers' Forum

Conducted by Ted Le Berthon
Editor of The Photodramatist

A PERSISTENT CONTROVERSY

Like a muezzin, I am striking a note that will be responded to on all sides, and that will evoke countless norms, by inviting a recrudescence of that antiquated polemic: Are artists born or made? The motion picture field has been entered from divers pathways, the jousting ones on both sides uniformly recusant. I, for one, believe that the technique of screen writing as well as the technique of screen acting, direction, and cinematography can be taught—and learned. Whether an art perception or conception is congenital and innate or can be developed, is a matter which completely eludes me, is a mormeluche which I prefer to leave to the ministrations of some avatar.

Acting, novel and play writing, and screen writing have been taught in this country for some time back; and it would be the veriest recalcitrant who would doubt at least the partial efficacy of such instruction. Naturally, the earnest, perspicacious, and most naturally endowed persons succeed, while the supine and dull-witted fail to profit from the results of their studying.

It is the very objector to norms who finds himself cleaving to the fixed precept that screen writing, for instance, cannot be taught; the free-thinker too often becomes orthodox. So many actors vow they never saw the inside of a dramatic school, while writers say they just sat down and wrote. Granted. But this only means that they did not pursue a systematic course of study; that they pursued an eclectic method, a sort of second-hand absorption of what others had learned, a gathering of the shards of technique. It seems to me that the nub of the disputation is this: Does one prefer to learn directly and systematically or indirectly and irregularly?

However, a dialectic approach would convince me that any man or institution may teach any theory and technique of screen writing that has been mastered and prepared by any qualified individual or group, i. e., those who are indisputably authoritative.

I understand that Maurice Tourneur claims that there is no motion picture technique, that the photoplay is still nascent, and far from viable. This may be so, but we know that at least a certain form of continuity writing, of story preparation, is in vogue. That this form is transient, deliquescent ,is at least conjecturable—but there is a "present" technique; just as there is in the cutting, collocation, and assembling of the picture. And just so is there a fairly well defined technique in direction, lighting, cinematography and acting. There is much that is definite that is adhered to between the first cry of "Camera!" and the final projection upon an argent canvas.

That motion picture technique will be subject to much elutriation in the future, near or remote, is feasible; coeval with the passing of all art and literature through the alembic of Time. But the screen writer is ever living—even as you and I—in the present; he must seize upon instruments that are handy, and must not, in the interests of an incipient art, attempt to fly before developing wings—on solid ground.

I do not believe that the inauguration of scenario classes in many colleges and universities, or the teaching of the technique of photoplay writing by correspondence, is either an impractical or premature procedure on the part of the educators interested. There can be little doubt that the motion picture is to be America's contribution to the Arts, despite the titillation occasioned in so-called cultured circles today on the wings of such fatidical information. D. W. Griffith's declaration that an eighth art was in the making is not simply crass prejudice or naive pomposity. The handwriting is on the wall.

There has been a recent free-for-all denigration of the films in bookish as well as evangelical quarters, the one on the grounds of the rococo treatment accorded literary masterpieces, the other on the ground that certain directors slathered their cinema canvases with pornographic scenes and florid dashes of wild women, pre-eighteenth amendment disciples, and occasional ribald screen songsters. Furthermore, one Burton Rascoe in a recent BOOKMAN referred to all scenario writers as the back-wash of literature. According to certain self-conceded intelligentsia, it is direly unwise to even consider learning to write for the screen, lest one forego the benisons of the pale leaders of thought and cultur—and lose the track to the Paranirvanic bliss of these tall-browed ones. Well, what of it? Let the high-brow retain his umbrageous Thules, let him continue to rant and storm and buffet his eidolonic foes with steel and pen alike.

I am still in hopes that the writing of scenarios, or photoplay synopses, will advance to a point far beyond the present. That either photodramatists or continuity experts will reach apogees in this decade is improbable. Yet there is this possibility: writing in terms of sequential pictures ineluctably connotes a pictorial idiom. For instance, what marvelous visualization is expressed in the language of the critic Paul Rosenfeld, in describing some paintings by Ryder in a recent DIAL. Among other things Rosenfeld writes. "They are pools of very dusk, many of them so low in key that for a while they resist the scrutiny. Their rigid and heavily enameled surfaces have the colours of night when the moon is small and chill and hard, of ancient tapestries sewn with tarnished gold, or sere leaves in November and the smoke-blue of winter woodlands. Disks of saddest silver burn coldly amid profound and undulent blacks; rims of dreamy light glow palely as the green skies of after-sunset; dullest gold of night-cloud edge is subtly and mystically harmonized with sable and with the aureate browns of embossed leather. The fanfares of romance breathe through the tender, mysterious tones, the sensitive foaming forms. A white horse rears in the sinister gloom; the sea creams away from a bark like an opened flower; sails belly into the fathomless heaven and heave their craft towards the indifferent sorcerer's moon; a skeleton rider with scythe flits round the track into the dun immeasurable distance." Of course, this is not the description of characters, but it is adequate description; such descriptions of backgrounds would make for an adumbration and a mood in screen writing that would prove inspirational to directors of a higher type—men like Tourneur, Ingram, and the DeMilles, for instance. The language of feeling and poetry is the language of the higher drama and enwritten it will inspire continuity writers and directors to more poetic and artistic efforts—to finer employment of nuance—to all contributing factors that will make possible imperishable celluloid documents in the course of Time.

The technique of the short story or the novel is entirely disparate from that of the screen. Drama and poetry is the rub in the photodrama. Only the language of pictures can avail. The febrile efforts of eminent authors—a generous, kindly interpretation of the word eminent—to write for the screen, and their dismal and nearly complete failure to master the screen idiom, should thoroughly eclaircize the whole problem.

The screen never will stand in need of ardent pioneers, trained in the rudiments of screen writing, as it does today. Young America should be taught to express itself in the art form which is primarily America's —that symphony of the arts which will some day interpret nation to nation and race to race.

Jack Holt's first star picture for Paramount, "The Call of the North," comes to Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre New Year's week. The picture is an adaptation by Jack Cunningham of the play by George Broadhurst and the book, "Conjurer's House," by Stewart Edward White.

Bob Horner, who is directing a five-reel western for Western Classic Film Company, has taken his company, consisting of Monti Montague, Ena Gregory, Nelson McDowell, Lorence Bradstone, Harry Smith, and others, to Santa Susana Pass, to film location scenes.

Legal Queries

Answered by Irving Baltimore

Readers of the "Camera!" may submit any question of law. Answers will appear in this column, if of general interest; otherwise questions will be answered by mail. No names will be disclosed; however, all communications must bear the writer's name.

Q. What is necessary to assign rights to a copyrighted work?

A. Assignment must be in writing and filed for record with the Register of Copyrights, Washington, D. C., within three months; otherwise the assignee is precluded from setting up any rights as against subsequent purchases for value.

If any rights are reserved by the assignor, the same, or the rights conveyed, should be specifically set forth.

For example, if the intention is to convey only photoplay rights of a novel, the assignment should specifically state that such rights alone are conveyed; should the conveyance be couched in general terms, the assignment may easily be construed as conveying photoplay, stage, and rights of every nature incident to ownership of copyright.

Q. In case of breach of contract by producer, can the actor accept other employment and sue for full amount provided for in contract?

A. He may sue for full amount provided for in contract, but can only recover the amount actually lost by reason of the breach, said loss being established by the difference between the compensation provided for in the original contract, and the sums he earned, or could have earned in other employment during the period covered by the terms of the contract. This, of course, would not oblige the actor to accept other unsuitable employment, in order to reduce the damage sustained by him. However, any moneys he may have realized by suitable available employment, whether accepted or no, may be claimed by the producer as a set-off.

Q. In conveyance of motion-picture rights by the author, without specifying any restrictions, does he forego all rights thereto?

A. No. Although he cannot further avail himself of his work for motion-picture purposes, the purchaser or his assignee cannot garble or revamp the story as he may choose. The producer may make any reasonable adaptation, but cannot, without the author's permission, rehash the tale so that it will not reflect the story of the author. The author's reputation may suffer greatly by a mongrel reproduction of his story, and the law will accord him appropriate protection.

This subject is reminiscent of a phase of the recent suit involving Ferdinand Pinney Earle's "Rubaiyat," and of Fanny Hurst's reported scoring of those responsible for the picturization of her novel "Star-Dust."

Although there is record of no case where damages were awarded in an instance of this character, the trend of decisions, and the equities of the case, would indicate that the author, in case of an unreasonable perversion of his story, may enjoin its showing, or recover any damages sustained thereby.

Following his appearance in Phoenix, Mr. Van Loan may make a short tour of California with "Fightin' Mad," his latest photoplay, which features William Desmond.

His local appearance, it is reported, will be at the new Pantages Theatre.

COMPLETES TITLING "MONTE CRISTO"

Thos. N. Miranda, Fox editor, has just completed titling the latest Fox Special, "Monte Cristo." Among the pictures Mr. Miranda has titled during 1921 are "Shame," All Star; "The Last Trail," All Star; "The Connecticut Yankee," All Star; "The Road Demon," Tom Mix; "The Primal Law," Dustin Farnum; "The Big Town Round-up," Tom Mix; "At Your Service," Mix and the Selig-Rork special; "The Rosary," soon to be released.

"THE PREVIEW THEATRE"

There is a movement on foot fostered by Mr. Al Nathan of this city, whereby, if he receives the co-operation from the various moving picture studios making films in Los Angeles for distribution throughout the world, he will sponsor a unique theatre, in fact the only one of its kind in the world. He has partly made arrangements already for the theatre that will bear the unique title of "The Preview Theatre." The name of the theatre practically means what it says. It is the intention of Mr. Nathan to exhibit exclusively pictures of the foremost studios and directors of Los Angeles, prior to the final cutting which is usually done in New York City, after the negative arrives there. He will set aside one night each week for a well-known studio, and this will be maintained throughout the year. For example, every Monday night will be Goldwyn Night, every Tuesday night will be Universal Night, Wednesday night will be Paramount Night, and so on, each night being devoted to the particular studio furnishing the film for that evening. Sunday night will probably be devoted to independent producers, not affiliated with any releasing concern or studio.

Mr. Nathan's intention is to show these films at the "Preview Theatre," twice nightly, the first performance starting at seven o'clock, and the second at nine o'clock, in the evening. He will apportion a certain amount of seats gratis each night to the studio, a certain amount to the press, so they may review this picture before it leaves for New York, and also a certain amount of seats to the exchange manager, so he may invite such exhibitors as he wishes to see the film for booking at their theatres. This also gives him two or three extra months in advance to work upon his customers, before the finished print returns to California for release. The balance of the seats will be sold to the general public at fifty cents, a price which will include war tax. This is merely to defray the overhead expenses, and at the same time gives an audience to the director of unbiased opinions, who will approve or disapprove the picture, according to their own opinions. This is just what the director seeks, and can get in no other way.

In addition to the showing of this feature, in order to round-out a complete program, an added feature will be introduced, which is also an innovation to Los Angeles, and that will be in the form of introducing for the first time to the public, an opportunity for the various dancing schools, to stage a Prologue each week, given by the pupils at the institution, who have graduated, or are about to graduate from that particular school. In presenting these schools, Mr. Nathan has in mind such schools as the Denishawn School, Norma Gould's School, Earnest Belcher's School, Dagmar Dalgrin's School, and schools of this calibre. Each school will present a little tableau, which will run the entire week, and will in no way conflict with the picture shown on any evening.

A further innovation will be the introduction of a string quartet of ladies to furnish the necessary musical embellishments.

Mr. Nathan has already made arrangements with a few of the local producers, and contemplates the closing of the final deals with the balance of the studios, in the next few days, at which time he will also announce what theatre he has secured for the showing of these pictures.

Lois Zellner is responsible for the scenario of "My Boy," starring Jackie Coogan, now playing at the Kinema.

When William Farnum completes his present picture for Fox he intends going to Havana for a short vacation.

Looking Ahead

As we look another new year in the face we are slightly disturbed by an echo of the bitter wail raised over recent studio inactivity; for while there is not now the panic in the air that threatened for a time, several thousand actors are still resenting the foreign invasion that by filling many theatres the country over, with German and Italian films, has resulted in decreased domestic production and consequently in a less cheerful holiday season for their individual homes. When any man's personal comfort is hit he meditates and agitates—and the average picture man has experienced many balmier days than 1921 has included in its trying calendar.

Meanwhile, the larger producer is strangely silent probably for the very good reason that he has nothing to report. Capital is overly difficult these days and we doubt not that many are hanging on by the eye teeth who have not as yet been suspected of such.

One encouraging circumstance, however, appears upon the horizon. If our big, standard outfits are suffering untimely lay offs, there are yet some half dozen more companies shooting in Los Angeles this week than there were one year ago now, which indicates that history is repeating itself in the independent line. The small picture man did considerable to the apparently substantial General Film Company in the cinema's younger days. It is significant that four reliable releasing and two financing concerns for the independents have been lately organized. They are sure to find much business to consider.

Nevertheless this type of production has not yet been organized to the point where it is making up to the free lancer for that which he has lost in other quarters. We hope that the situation will soon be developed to such a position, for nothing but commercial selfishness is ever to be expected from any set of allied magnates.

Under no circumstances should we indulge in hysteria or pessimistic exaggeration. Conditions are undoubtedly improving if but slowly.

Maybe our attitudes have more to do with the general atmosphere than we have imagined. In any event we cannot afford to overlook even the slightest detail which might strengthen our prospects for 1922. The new year must unfold a new story. Every one's energy is necessary to help.

F. R.

The Ohio Convention

We reprint the following report upon the new organization of the Ohio exhibitors from the Moving Picture World both for its news value to our industry and to give us an excuse for the observation that every picture body and thing seems to have the strength of real organization behind it, save the Los Angeles independent producer. He is about old enough to find interest in worldly things if he has himself to support and competition to meet. However, we're off the subject.

"The most important convention of Motion Picture Theatre Owners yet to assemble in Ohio was opened on December 12 in the Waldorf Hotel, Toledo. Exhibitors from all the principal cities in the state were present, as well as visiting delegations from New York, Michigan, Illinois and other states.

"Among the leading representatives of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America were Sydney S. Cohen, national president; Senator James A. Walker, national counsel; Sam B. Berman, state secretary of New York; Francis Holley, director of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Public Service Department; M. J. O'Toole, chairman of the Public Service Department, member of the National Legislative Committee, Scranton, Pa.

"The purpose of the meeting was to more completely solidify Ohio exhibitors in a state-wide organization for the purpose of affording a better degree of protection to them in all matters requiring attention in and out of the industry. The special matter to be considered by the Ohio organization is possible adverse legislation which may come forward at Columbus after the new year, as well as to care for legislation of a national character at Washington.

"A number of conditions within the business itself, affecting the relative interests of producers, distributors and exhibitors, are also to be considered with a view to making such proper adjustments as will set aside every element of injustice and give all concerned a square deal in the conduct of their business. There are now two divisions of the organization in Ohio representative of the northern and southern sections of the state. For the purposes of purely local matters, these two bodies may still continue to function, but for all matters affecting the state as a whole, as national legislation, the state body created will have complete charge.

Film Capital Production Notes

FILMING RUSSIAN SCENES

Ariel Varges, the International News cameraman, is at present in Russia, and is supplying International News reels with pictures of life and conditions in the land of the Soviet.

It was Mr. Varges who made the first official pictures of Pope Benedict XV at the Vatican last year, and which were included in the International News reels as the news film "beat" of the year.

PREPARING MACDONALD'S NEXT

Violet Clarke's story, "Domestic Relations," which Katherine MacDonald has just completed, won for the writer a long term contract with B. P. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures, the organization that makes the Katherine MacDonald screen product.

Miss Clarke is now engaged in preparing the scenario of Miss MacDonald's next offering, "White Shoulders," by George Kibbe Turner. Under her contract with Mr. Schulberg Miss Clarke will confine her writing to the Katherine MacDonald productions.

COMPLETES SECOND

The Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers are now cutting and editing "No Ransom," which is the second of a series of twelve comedy dramas with western settings. "5:13," the first, is now being released through the Affiliated Enterprises. These scenarios are written and directed by Fred Caldwell.

EARLE FILES SUIT

As the result of the departure of Mrs. Queen Boardman, Herbert D. Newcomb and a film cutter for New York City with the uncompleted "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam," Ferdinand Earle has sent notices to all motion picture distributors in America warning that he has filed suit against The Rubaiyat, Inc., seeking to enjoin them from releasing, distributing or exhibiting the picture he produced.

SOUTH SEA PICTURE FINISHED

Messrs. Alder and Unander announce the completion of The Far East Productions Company's first presentation, "The Lagoon of Desire." The film has been edited and titled and will be taken to New York immediately.

The cast of "The Lagoon of Desire" includes Ruth Renick, Edward Hearn, Walt Whitman and Frederick Stanton.

A company organized in Los Angeles is producing, in a series of pictures of two reels each, adaptations from Grimm's Fairy Tales and other childhood classics.

Chet Withey, who directed Katherine MacDonald's last screen product, "Domestic Relations," a future Associated First National Picture release, is now engaged in editing the film.

NORMAND RESUMES WORK

Mabel Normand has resumed work on her next Mack Sennett feature, "Suzanne," after having been confined to her home with a severe cold.

"The Fox," starring Harry Carey, was presented on Broadway, New York recently, in the Central Theatre.

Ben Turpin and Phyllis Haver, under the direction of Bill Watson, are hard at work on "Bright Eyes," Turpin's second Mack Sennett two-reel special for First National distribution.

AT GOLDWYN

The photography on "The Dust Flower," a Basil King story, will be completed shortly. In the cast are Helene Chadwick, James Rennie, Claude Gillingwater, Mona Kingsley, Edward Peil and George Periolat. Rowland Lee is directing. Charles Kenyon made the adaptation in collaboration with the author.

Gouverneur Morris' Chinese fantasy, "What Ho—the Cook!" has been retitled "Whims of the Gods."

"Watch Your Step" has been chosen as the release title for Cullen Landis' first featuring vehicle, formerly called "The City Feller." This Goldwyn picture was written by Julien Josephon and directed by William Beaudine.

AT UNITED STUDIOS

Production on Norma Talmadge's first starring vehicle, "The Duchess de Langeais," will be commenced on January 2d. Frank Lloyd will direct.

Constance Talmadge will complete "The Divorcee" within a week and will take a brief rest before she commences work on her next production.

Jackie Coogan's second starring story, as yet untitled, will be completed in two weeks.

Chester Bennett, who is directing the starring activities of Jane Novak, is reading script in search of another vehicle for Miss Novak, while he is editing her recently completed production, "The Starveling."

Madame Alla Nazimova and her company, filming Ibsen's "A Doll's House," for her coming United Artists release, are on location at the beach where a rocky coast line is being used for one of the final scenes. The work of cutting and titling the picture will be started immediately as it is scheduled for release the second week in January.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd is taking the final scenes this week for his comedy temporarily titled "He Who Hesitates." Mr. Lloyd is also supervising the cutting and assembling of the picture, four reels of which are nearly completed. H. M. Walker has titled two reels.

Harry "Snub" Pollard finished a comedy this week and began production on a new one which R. J. Cedar is directing.

The following comedies were shown this week in preview at the studio: "Pardon Me," a "Snub" Pollard picture; "High Tide," a comedy, with Ethel Broadhurst, Mark Jones, George Rowe and "Sunshine Sammy" and "Rich Man, Poor Man—," a comedy with "Paul" Parrott and Ethel Broadhurst.

Plans are being prepared for another building to be erected on the Mack Sennett lot which will be used for a gymnasium.

Thomas H. Ince is preparing to produce "Bell Boy 13," starring Douglas MacLean, as an early 1922 special.

The recently completed Frothingham photoplay temporarily titled, "A Bride of the Gods," has been retitled "Shattered Idols."

Current Reviews

"RIP VAN WINKLE"

Clune's

Joseph Jefferson's stage version of Washington Irving's quaint legend, "Rip Van Winkle," is now released for the screen by Ward Lascelle, its producer. Perhaps the photoplay's chief charm lies in its pictorial value; but the performances are also attractively executed, while the effective subtitles do much to increase the delicate comedy and pathos through which the story is simply unfolded by the direction. The settings are all just what the imagination would paint them, for the village of Falling Water.

Five generations of the Jefferson family have played old Rip, the title role of the piece, for in it this time is featured the screen's own Thomas Jefferson whose portrayal of the famous character is undoubtedly as lovably wayward as any has ever been. He gives Rip the originally endowed Irving combination, a boyishly mischievous mind and on old man's tender heart. The kiddies will dote on him. Technically the interpretation would have been greatly improved by his affectation of a more realistic make-up in that section of the story which sees the hero awakened in a new world after twenty years of sleep.

Milla Davenport enacts Gretchen Van Winkle, Rip's wild cat spouse with a fire that marks her as vividly as the other role. Gretchen is consistently well played.

Gertrude Messenger and Francis Carpenter are happily cast in Meenie Van Winkle and Heinrick Vedder as children. Their round little faces and yellow heads are delightfully Dutch.

Daisy Robinson and Hal Craig enact the youngsters grown.

Pietro Sosso as Derrick Van Beekman, the exaggerated villain, provides a necessary obstacle or two and Max Asher is an excellent type for Nick Vedder, the tavern keeper.

"Rip Van Winkle" makes an exceedingly appropriate holiday program. It is a Hodkinson release.

"MY BOY"

Kinema

Sol Lesser presents Jackie Coogan in the child's first starring vehicle under his present contract, "My Boy," a picture which must be admitted to far exceed "Peck's Bad Boy," an earlier offering with the lad, from the standpoints of appeal, story, continuity and performances. We understand the original to have been prepared by Jack Coogan, Sr. Lois Zellner translated it to the screen. The direction by Victor Heerman, the titling and general arrangement are all meritorious. A well balanced combination of tears and laughter also pleases greatly. "My Boy," will do much to increase Jackie's popularity.

Certainly he has a rich opportunity in Jackie Blair, a little orphan immigrant who thwarts Ellis Island officials and attaches himself to a lonely old Captain in lieu of the proper family connections. The young actor has a remarkably sympathetic personality and an even more unusual power of transition with which to back it up. His tears are as spontaneous and sincere as his smiles. With such a range his favoritism is indefinitely assured.

The Captain, the lad's gruff friend and benefactor, is perfectly played by Claude Gillingwater who enacted the Earl in "Little Lord Fauntleroy." The two roles form a striking contrast proving this artist's great versatility.

Mathilde Brundage is fortunately placed and does excellently in Mrs. Blair, the boy's aristocratic, unknown grandmother.

Milla Davenport and May Foster complete the cast in minor roles.

First National distributes "My Boy."

JANE STARR

A PARISIAN SCANDAL

Superba

The most noticeable thing about the screen stories which Universal has been handing to Marie Prevost as starring efforts is their uniform senselessness. "A Parisian Scandal," the latest even does its best to outdo the others in this respect with a certain degree of success. In any event its plot is nil from a dramatic, a comedy or any reasonable consideration while we detected no theme whatsoever. To make matters less interesting the scenario by Doris Schroeder drags unmercifully in spots. Louise Winter is responsible for the original.

George Cox's direction and the somewhat elaborate settings afford this picture's only relief from absolute inferiority as even the able performers in the cast find it too great an effort to rise above the asinine individuals whom they play.

If Miss Prevost hasn't some genuine comedy to substitute for the inanely affected mannerisms which have been hung onto all of her starring roles thus far, she won't last long nor go far. We have been more than disappointed in her recent work. Here she does Liane Oudoff, a forced Parisian flapper.

Tom Gallery, in the male lead, doesn't help matters much although he shows a little more "speed" than he has previously been known to. Gallery plays Basil Hammond, a professorish young man in goggles.

Bertram Grassby and George Fisher are good for several laughs in rather inconsequential positions, Baron Stransky and Emile Carret.

George Periolat, Lillian Lawrence, Lillian Rambeau, Mae Busch and Rose Dione fill the remaining parts.

Productions on this order are hangovers from an earlier and less human cinema age.

"ALIAS LADYFINGERS"

Loew's State Theatre

A very entertaining comedy drama of crooks and others is Jackson Gregory's "Alias Ladyfingers," a Bayard Veiller production, starring Bert Lytell for Metro. It is even rendered fascinating by a succession of surprise twists that are a credit to the author's originality and to the direction's capability in "putting them across." The satisfactory scenario is by Lenore Coffey, while Arthur Martinelli's photography is up to his high standard.

The star's pleasing personality is allowed full swing in Robert Ashe, alias Ladyfinger's, a safecracker with a responsive heart. Ladyfingers is a sympathetic but tricky young man who provides some all around refreshing entertainment. Lytell needs just such situations.

Ora Carew is suitable in Enid Camden, the young lady, who captures the hero's attention and Frank Elliott gives one of his well known "slick" heavy performances in Justin Haddon, a lawyer.

Edythe Chapman, however, lifts the picture from the merely satisfactory to the entirely worthwhile with a truly wonderful characterization, Rachel Stetherill. A hard hearted, long headed, stubborn, old millionairess, who continually brings misery upon herself and those she cares for while covering a forlorn, sensitive spirit, she is the loveliest work of Miss Chapman that we have witnessed. She is consistently played and could not have been improved.

De Witt Jennings as Lieut. Ambrose, Stanley Goethals and Edward Connelly, complete the cast.

THE MAGIC PEN OF MOTHER GOOSE

The first animated cartoon in "The Magic Pen of Mother Goose" series, produced by the Harry Levey Service Corporation, and just released through National Non-Theatrical Motion Pictures, Inc., has already been booked for the primary classes of New York and Indianapolis public schools.

"It is just what we have been looking for and wanting for the primary grades," said Miss Hochheimer, assistant to Dr. Crandall in charge of Visual Education for the New York Public Schools. "Give us more of them."

"We will," answered Harry Levey, the producer. "'Hey, Diddle, Diddle,' is the first in the series. We'll take the children into partnership and let them vote on the mother goose rhymes they would like to see next on the screen. Tell all the children who see this one to write to National Non-Theatrical what they want next. If the teachers approve the idea and its execution why not let the children have a say?"

LYTELL BEGINS TOUR OF UNITED STATES

Bert Lytell clambered aboard the Pullman that will serve as his home for the next six weeks the other morning for the first lap of his trans-continental tour of personal appearances.

When Bert concluded work on "Sherlock Brown," the new Bayard Veiller production in which he is starred, he locked his dressing room at the Metro studio to remain closed until he has visited every big city in the country. It will be a flying trip, but it will serve to satisfy the star's long-time ambition to work before the footlights once more.

Plans for Mr. Lytell's new series of Metro pictures will be announced immediately after his return to the company's Hollywood studios.

CLUB MEMBERS IN FILM

Leon Rice, Vice-president of the Mission Film Corporation, returned recently from a business and professional trip to San Francisco.

A number of San Francisco Club women, who are interested in the Mission Film Productions, will come to Los Angeles around the first of the year to take part in the Red Cross scenes in the first production, "Carry on the Race," now being filmed at the Jesse D. Hampton Studios.

LINDER ON BENEFIT PROGRAM

Max Linder recently gave a comedy fencing scene from his burlesque on "The Three Musketeers," at the Examiner's Christmas benefit for poor kiddies.

Dr. W. E. Bolsinger, face specialist, will be in Los Angeles at the Clark Hotel for a month, starting January 15, to attend to his picture patients.

Barbara la Marr has been selected by Rex Ingram for the role of Antoinette de Mauban in his Metro production of "The Prisoner of Zenda."

"Broken Nose" Murphy, who insists that he ranks above Bull Montana in Hollywood's screen beauty classes, has been selected for a part in Viola Dana's new Metro picture, "Daphne's Disposition."

Victor Potel, "Slipery Slim," has donned the habiliments of a lean Romeo for George D. Baker's Metro production of "Don't Write Letters," in which Gareth Hughes is starred.

The last interiors for "The Great Alone," which Jacques Jaccard is directing for the West Coast Films Corporation, have been filmed with Monroe Salisbury as the star. Jaccard will take his company to Blairsden in the Feather River country for a few weeks, where snow shots will be obtained.

Frank S. Mattison, Director General of Shiller Productions, which has been producing one and two reel comedies since last April at the Mittenthal Studio in Yonkers, N. Y., has closed up the eastern studio, and is at present visiting relatives in Los Angeles.

BURTON RASCOE'S ARTICLE

I have always believed that fools enter where angels fear to tread; but often in moments of droll, though somewhat poignant reflection, a dark veil lifts, the spirit of the Cosmos chuckles ominously back of my shoulder, and the bitter revelation of the "low-down," the subconscious urge, the true motive, stares at me horribly. Try as I may, by whatever process of ratiocination, I cannot avoid the monstrous truth: the angels would like to be fools—for a while at least—and are very, very jealous of fools. True, angels prefer that all adhere to angelic conventions, but sometimes fools seem to be having such a wonderfully gay season of life that the angels begin to doubt themselves. What happens then? Well, what happens whenever one is jealous or fearful of anyone or any class? What happens when the dusty, bookish angels find themselves outnumbered by earth-bound and vulgarity-bound fools? What happens when it is somehow tragically sensed that the fools have a little wisdom and much wit, despite their lack of classified and catalogued knowledge—when fools joust with intellectual seraphs, when what Herr Nietzsche terms the pathos of distance is seemingly spanned?

An angel by the name of Burton Rascoe, in the November number of THE BOOKMAN, writes a most convincing and irrefutable article damning the motion picture of today; he has marshalled his facts in an impenetrable mass formation. Yet even the attaining of angelic stature is within the realms of limitation, and I fear that Mr. Rascoe, like the rest of us absurd and ridiculous finites, lives most of his days and nights in the Halls of Illusion. Life, like an opiate, has lulled him to pleasant dreams, from which—even as you and I—he only occasionally awakes.

In this dream state, so accurately described by Mark Twain in "The Mysterious Stranger," and by James Branch Cabell in "Jurgen," one is often entirely engrossed in the loving or slaying of phantoms; one is often actually slain in turn by Time while lolling in the humorless fields of some fabulous, quixotic Dreamland. In this state, one becomes easily aroused to frenzies over inconsequential things, forgetting or foregoing the grand perspective of Eternity. In this state, one is apt to become "het up" about such things as art and industry, and to actually separate and minutely define them. This is, of course, a bit of irony on the part of the Cosmic jester.

Mr. Rascoe in his article damns the motion pictures from Hades to breakfast. But why the note of rage? Why the hysteria, the calling of names, the sticks-and stones attitude? Instead of calling scenario writers "the backwash of literature," directors "vain-glorious," and actors "strutting pomade addicts," thereby weakening some otherwise sound argument, why didn't Mr. Rascoe remain "the gentleman" by employing the aristocratic weapon of silence? He could have thus asserted his contempt, without descending to the grosser vibrations and so betraying his innate jealousy of fools.

MIRIAM BELLAH

Only a bigoted ass would assert that the motion picture has produced any work of Art of unusual significance, or that at its heights it has approached the masterpieces of the drama and the printed word. But scenario-writing is a few years old; there has hardly been time enough to develop any Molieres, or Rostands—or Eugene O'Neills! Our playwrights and fictionists are the result of long evolution, with much tradition and example to build upon, whereas motion picture writers, directors, actors, and cinematographers are still experimenting—or being experimented with.

The grave trouble with Mr. Rascoe is that he really wants a millennium, where his brothers and sisters of the human race will all appreciate Bach, Beethoven, Sophocles, Aristophanes—and Burton Rascoe. He has not glimpsed or at least fastened upon the fact that he is only aware of the importance of his likes—which are himself—because he is able to look down upon the likes of others. (Again I feel indebted to Herr Nietzsche's "pathos of distance.") Therefore, for the intellectuals to become conscious of themselves the presence of the anaesthetic masses is required—for contrast.

Mr. Rascoe and all other intellectuals should root out their damnable jealousy and substitute an attempt at understanding or even pity—which is on the borderland of revelation. It is a fact that in all ages a great majority of folks have admired and loved things simple, sentimental, or obvious. No matter what strides the motion pictures make, there will always be a demand for photoplays which match the average comprehension, just as there will always be a demand for such songs as Gus Edwards composes and such novels as Harold Bell Wright achieves.

As to what is art or what is not art, I would refer Mr. Rascoe to the dialogues of Nagasena. I do not believe anyone capable of proclaiming where art begins and where it leaves off. Even among the self-conceded intelligentsia, two "authoritative" critics have been known to pass diametrically opposed judgments upon a tome or a painting or a musical composition. Straddling space is preferable to such mental acrobatics.

After all, Rascoe's attitude is an expression of class-consciousness. He wants only that called Art which he and his class can respond to with respect or reverence. But he must never overlook the fact that there are millions of souls who find beauty in things which he derides, who laugh where he sneers, who weep at things which would bore him.

Many things Mr. Rascoe says about economic conditions as determinants of photoplay productions are unquestionably sound. Perhaps in some quarter a finer artistic consciousness will be aroused which will function—so that the few as well as the many may be entertained, cinematically speaking.

However, it is always just as important and probably more important, that the masses be entertained and instructed with photoplays they can understand and enjoy. While it is untrue that the motion picture field, to quote Mr. Rascoe, "is held at present by ex-chauffeurs and ex-scene shifters," it is quite probable that these fellows speak the language of the masses, that they have it in their power to make millions of people laugh, cry, and think, who would fall asleep during "The Last Night of Don Juan."

There is a deeper law than economics which causes all forms of entertainment and instruction to be levelled for the most part to the many rather than the few. The many will not be overlooked while the few are being catered to; and the many are congenitally unable to rise to the concepts of the few.

Paradoxically enough, Mr. Rascoe—of the intelligentsia—childishly refuses to be perturbed by movie censorship because the movie magnates and the press did not cry out against the suppressions of Dreiser's "The Genius," or Cabell's "Jurgen," or against the impounding of "The Little Review," "The New York Call," or "The Liberator." Poor Mr. Rascoe, don't you realize that ninety per cent of the movie magnates and editors never heard of the above books and publications, much less of their being suppressed or impounded?

How does Mr. Rascoe expect the motion picture to evolve to an art if it is to be circumscribed by moralists? Suppose, to terminate futile argument on both sides, that we would plead guilty to his accusation that the motion pictures are today an industry, not an art? How about all our tomorrows? And doesn't Mr. Rascoe realize that if the moralists censor movies, they'll later go after literature and the drama? Isn't there a common cause here?

Pickups By The Staff

CHRISTMAS PARTY HOSTS

Hal E. Roach and Mrs. Roach acted as hosts recently when the Christmas doings at the Hal E Roach Studios took place at which 400 guests were present.

Jean Havez, of Harold Lloyd's scenario staff, opened the entertainment in the capacity of speechmaker, when he presented to Warren Doane, general manager of the Studios, a leather traveling bag and to Hal Roach for his new cruiser the Gypsy, a ship clock of bronze with the name of the craft engraved on it. Both gifts were from the employes of the Studios.

Clarence Geldert, President of the Mission Film Corporation, addressed the Brotherhood of the West Adams Methodist Episcopal Church recently on the subject of "A Clean Screen." This is Mr. Geldert's plan to interest the public in the industry as something more than a business, and get the men and women of America working for clean pictures and supporting the producers who are making them.

VACATIONING

Bebe Daniels is now enjoying her first vacation in several months, having just completed "A Game Chicken," an original story written for her by Nina Wilcox Putnam.

After finishing a comedy part as the cardinal in Max Linder's burlesque on "The Three Musketeers," Bull Montana has sailed for Honolulu.

GEORGE BERRELL

GETTING ACQUAINTED WITH INTERESTING PEOPLE

Cecil Holland

Cecil Holland, the screen's pre-eminent make-up artist, whose series of articles upon picture make-up proved so popular when they appeared in Camera a couple of years ago, has, in the past few months had more distinctive work to his credit than is often the case in this or any other business.

Besides creating unusual and invaluable types out of his make-up case, Mr. Holland is a recognized character actor. He will soon be seen in "Penrod," Neilan's latest production, and he interprets dual heavies in Lasky's "Moran of the Lady Letty." Not long ago he played Roger Unthink in "The Great Impersonation," and a part in "A Wise Fool," both Paramount offerings.

The remarkable character make-ups in "Little Lord Fauntleroy" are the responsibilities of this versatile young man as is the one affected by Claude Gillingwater in Jackie Coogan's "My Boy."

Mr. Holland numbers among his more spectacular creations the ape-man, played by Bull Montana, in Neilan's "Go and Get It," and the blind soldier in Pickford's "The Love Light."

A man with the ability of this one is not only an asset to any profession, he is indispensable to it.

ELIMINATE DAYTIME NOISES AT UNITED STUDIOS

Through an innovation just put into effect by M. C. Levee, President of United Studios, the carpenters and set-builders at United will work hereafter nights, thus eliminating the daytime noises that hamper production and affect the work of the directors and players.

HAYAKAWAS ENTERTAIN

The Viscount Elichi Shibusawa, of Japan, who was a recent visitor in Los Angeles on his way home from the arms conference at Washington, was the guest of honor at a tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa at the R-C Studios in Hollywood. The Hayakawas explained the mechanics of picture-making to their guests, showed them the shops and stages of the studio, and then took them to the projection room where bits of Hayakawa's last picture, "The Vermilion Pencil," were screened.

SONG FOR NEXT TALMADGE PICTURE

The Norma Talmadge Film Company has just closed a contract with M. Witmark & Sons, music publishers, whereby the song, "Smilin' Through," by Arthur A. Penn, will be used in various ways as an exploitation aid, when Norma's next First National Picture, "Smilin' Thorugh," is released in February.

Teddy, who has become famous as a dog actor in Mack Sennett Comedies, was an active worker during the holidays in collecting funds for the Salvation Army's Christmas benevolences. Wearing the garb of the army and carrying a tambourine he collected large sums.

Production Notes

AT LASKY'S

William DeMille is just getting into the story of "Bought and Paid For," which he is producing, and which Clara Beranger adapted from the play by George Broadhurst. It is announced that Mr. DeMille is adhering closely to the stage version. Agnes Ayres and Jack Holt play the leading roles with Walter Hiers in the part which Frank Craven created.

William D. Taylor is practically through with his production starring Betty Compson entitled "The Green Temptation." This picture has been made with the working title of "The Noose" and is adapted from a magazine story by Constance Lindsay Skinner.

With the first suggestion of a return of clear weather James Cruze took a portion of his company making "Is Matrimony a Failure?" to Bakersfield for the last shots. T. Roy Barnes plays the leading role with a big cast, including Lois Wilson, Lila Lee, Walter Hiers, and others.

Wallace Reid, directed by Philip Rosen, is back from the Mohave desert and nearby locations, where scenes were made for "Across the Continent," which Byron Morgan wrote expressly for Mr. Reid.

Back from Arizona, where in spite of the rain they succeeded in getting what they went for, Thomas Meighan's company, directed by Alfred Green, making "The Proxy Daddy," is now at work on interior scenes at the studio.

May McAvoy's company is completing "Through a Glass Window" on location. This is a Realart picture. Maurice Campbell is directing the story by Olga Printzlau. Playing the male lead is Edward Hearn, who recently returned with the first company to actually make pictures in the South Sea Islands.

Constance Binney is completing scenes in "The Sleep Walker," a tale which treats of somnambulism. Edward LeSaint is directing. It is a Realart picture for release through Famous Players-Lasky Corp.

R-C STUDIO NOTES

Pauline Frederick, Sessue Hayakawa, and Doris May, with their respective companies, are scheduled to start work again on January 9. Miss Frederick's next picture will be a film adaptation of William J. Locke's novel, "The Glory of Clementina." An original screen story, "Gay and Devilish," will be Miss May's new starring vehicle, while the name of Hayakawa's next story has not yet been announced. Officials of the studios have also stated that a company of well known players will probably be organized at once to begin on a special production. R. J. Tobin, vice-president and general manager of the studios, is expected to return within a few days from New York, where he has been conferring with other company officials on future activity at the local studios.

AT METRO

Maxwell Karger, who heads a Metro producing unit that bears his name, has been selected to direct a new special picture. Filming of the starless feature will be started in Hollywood on the resumption of work following the midwinter vacation at the studio.

Carey Wilson, who has just been added to the Goldwyn scenarios staff, has completed a one-act play entitled "Saffron."

"PENROD" LEAVES FOR NEW YORK

The celluloid "Penrod" is en route to New York.

Under the care of D. J. Gray, film editor for Marshall Neilan Productions, the motion picture version of Booth Tarkington's book and play is crossing the continent to the headquarters of Assocated Fist National Pictures, which organization will handle the distribution.

Leeds Baxter, business manager for the Neilan organization, is also making the trip east with "Penrod" to arrange for the special handling of this production.

The final editing of the picture is being handled by Mr. Grey on the train so that it will be ready for presentation before the First National officials by the time the print reaches New York.

EDWARD HEARN

Plans for Mr. Neilan's next production to be made in Los Angeles, are now under way. The picture will be based on a Saturday Evening Post story, negotiations for which are practically completed. Actual "shooting" on this film will be started within the next ten days.

INCE STUDIO NOTES

F. Ely Paget, of the scenario staff, has received a bonus for suggesting the title, "Skin Deep," under which the Ince production by Marc Edmond Jones and directed by Lambert Hillyer will soon be released. Milton Sills and Florence Vidor are featured.

Irvin V. Willat and his company making "Pawned" are in San Francisco where final scenes are being filmed along the water front.

Interiors for Thomas H. Ince's "The Hottentot," have been completed under the direction of Del Andrews and James W. Horne. The production will be finished this week. Douglas MacLean, Madge Bellamy and Raymond Hatton head the cast.

Jean Havez has written music and verses for a song entitled "A Sailor-Made Man," which will be sung at the Los Angeles showing of Harold Lloyd comedy of the same name.

GUNNING ANNOUNCES EXPANSION

Wid Gunning's arrival from New York last week brought out several facts regarding the Wid Gunning distributing corporation, which are of importance to the independent motion picture producers, for whom Mr. Gunning has established an independent market.

In the expansion of his Los Angeles Branch, Mr. Gunning announces the following appointments, effective immediately: George Slater, formerly of the local Realart office, and Frank Hefrom, formerly of Paramount and Realart in Seattle, as special representatives in charge of sales; James Burden as sales assistant and booker; Isabel McWilliams as cashier.

In addition to the distributing branch, Mr. Gunning will, as in the past, maintain his personal offices, which will be in charge of C. H. Goodwin, Mr. Gunning's personal representative, handling production detail. Mr. Goodwin, who has been in New York with Mr. Gunning for the past four months, was formerly of the George Loane Tucker productions staff.

The California and Miller Theatres have recently run "What Do Men Want," a Wid Gunning picture. The latest release of the corporation is "White Hands," directed by Lambert Hillyer and produced in San Francisco. Other specials now playing are "The Blot," "Quo Vadis," "The Girl from God's Country," "The Old Oaken Bucket," and "Our Mutual Friend."

All the profits of the distributing corporation, of which Mr. Gunning owns 100 per cent of the stock, will be divided among the actual workers who sell and exploit the productions, adopting the co-operative plan of paying well those who work intelligently and earn unusual reward, thereby applying for the first time in the film business the profit sharing principle well known in commercial fields.

Editorial

"The meeting was opened about 2 o'clock by M. G. Smith, a well-known Toledo exhibitor. Mr. Smith welcomed the exhibitors and then introduced Director of Law Lawton of Toledo, who spoke for Mayor Cornell Schreiber, who was unable to be present. Mr. Lawton said that no class of men come in more pronounced or more frequent contact with the public and that their influence for good in this relation is incalculable. He told of the efforts put forth by a number of theatre owners which added materially to the elements of entertainment, education and general instruction in different localities.

"James A. Mattox, president of the Southern Ohio Exhibitors Association, was then introduced by Mr. Smith and made a very pleasing response to the address of welcome made by Mr. Lawton. He expressed the hope that the theatre owners would measure up to the exalted station set for them by Mr. Lawton, and that they would in every way conform to the duties encumbent upon them as caterers to the entertainment and general welfare of all communities.

"Secretary Sam Berman of the New York State exhibitors, told of the efforts made at Washington to bring about the repeal of the 5 per cent film tax. He spoke of the value of organization in New York and other states and urged all of the exhibitors to pay special attention to the work at hand and realize how important organization is to them in this state.

O'Toole on Legislation

"M. J. O'Toole of Scranton, Pa., spoke on legislation generally. He called attention to the need for a better understanding between the people of all localities and the picture theatre owners and said this could be brought about through elements of service which the screen is able to give. He said that when this is done there would be no more adverse legislation, as the power of the screen for good would be so manifest in all parts of the United States as to bring to the side of the theatre owner favorable public opinion which would not be set aside.

"He instanced the fact that the present president of the United States, Warren G. Harding, was a newspaper publisher in Marion, Ohio. He placed beside Editor Harding the motion picture theatre owner in the same city. He declared that both are practically in the same line of business from the standpoint of publicity, one presenting news and other information on a printed page and the other visualizing it on a celluloid film. Both are operating constructively for the good of the community, both are to the front in all matters where the promotion of progressive public programs are necessary, and yet one is free of taxation because this service is generally recognized and the other pays taxes because his division of the service is not as fully recognized.

Cohen Reviews Events

"National President Cohen was next introduced and was received with applause. Mr. Cohen told of the development of the national organization from the initial meeting in Cleveland two years ago. He pointed with pride to the fact that the organization grew with such rapidity the first year that at the Minneapolis convention this year, over 2,000 exhibitors were present from all parts of the United States.

"He said that the purpose of picture theatre owners of America is the protection of its members and their investment, and were it not for the efforts of this organization many theatre owners would be in a deplorable condition today.

"He called attention to the negotiations with Famous Players-Lasky and said that he was pleased to say that all of the promises made by Mr. Zukor since the Minneapolis convention have been kept and that the best of feeling now prevails. He said there were a few matters yet to be taken up and expressed the hope that these, too, would be adjusted in the same agreeable manner.

Massachusetts' Peril

"Mr. Cohen dwelt at length on the work of the national organization in legislative matters. He claimed that were it not for the power thus presented and the ability of the theatre owners to concentrate their energies along this line, there would be no repeal of the film tax and adverse legislation of all kinds would have passed in the various states. He said that in Massachusetts there was to be a state-wide referendum on the question of censorship and that this was the first state where such a condition was presented. He called attention to its great importance to every exhibitor in the United States, as it tends to fasten permanently censorship on the country if the people of Massachusetts declare in favor of the proposition. He said the national organization and the Massachusetts exhibitors are arranging to defeat the proposal in the referendum vote.

"Referring to the question of other producing companies and the manner in which disputes were being adjusted, Mr. Cohen called attention to complaints against Associated First National Pictures, Inc. He alleged there was nothing personal in any of these disputes and the only purpose was to produce justice for the exhibitor. This, he said, would be done irrespective of the personnel of any of the companies involved.

"The dinner at the Elks Club Monday night was an interesting affair and brought to the front a number of personages friendly to the motion picture interests of Ohio, and yet in no manner definitely identified with the business. At the speaker's table the rather odd situation was presented of lawmakers from two different states, mingling with the warden of the State Penitentiary in close association with three ministers, all fraternizing with the representative picture men and women of the state.

"Senator James A. Walker of New York City was introduced as toastmaster. The first speaker introduced was Mr. O'Toole, who spoke on public service within the lines of the motion picture industry.

"The Rev. Dr. Arnold of the Washington Street Congregational Church was next introduced. He told of the use of motion pictures in teaching religious lessons and said he regarded them of the utmost importance and second only to the pulpit in potency in public appeal.

Praise from Pastor

"The Rev. S. McLeod Smith, secretary of the Federation of Churches, said that he came to this section from Buffalo, where he helped to put over the censorship law in New York State. He said he was in favor of censorship but at the same time recognized the fact that the picture people are improving the character of pictures and making them more educational and serviceable to the people. He said that unless the picture interests had the churches behind them that they would fail in any effort put forth.

"Dr. Francis Holley told of the work being performed by the Bureau of Commercial Economies in conjunction with the Public Service Department in forcing forward industrial, educational and other programs of a helpful nature in the United States and elsewhere.

Mrs. Titus of the Toledo Federation of Women's Clubs and connected with the motion picture committee of that organization, complimented the picture people on the many improvements in pictures and extended them the greetings and the helpful agency of the members of the women's clubs.

President Cohen's Talk

"National President Cohen was greeted with applause when he was introduced by Senator Walker as the "George Washington of the Motion Picture Republic." Mr. Cohen entered into a serious discussion of the problems confronting the organization, telling of the advances made since the Cleveland convention and declaring that the future welfare of the industry as a whole centered entirely in the exhibitor body. He called attention to the different conventions now being held and the enthusiasm everywhere manifested by exhibitors. He declared that the unity found in the picture theatre owners everywhere is the keynote with guarantees their safety.

FILM COLONY AND CHURCH

By Benj. B. Hampton

Misunderstandings which have arisen between the film colony of Los Angeles and the church element are the result of the attempt before prohibition of screen notables to live a Manhattan life in a "home town" city, and because of the fact that disgruntled girls who had not made good in the films claim to be "movie stars" whenever they became involved in scandal.

I predict that the time is not far distant when film folk and church folk will walk hand in hand, and together put their shoulders to the wheel of universal welfare.

I am not making a defense of the film colony—it is not necessary—but rather analyzing the conditions that have brought about a misunderstanding between the two elements in Los Angeles.

Having been a newspaper and magazine editor myself before becoming a photoplay producer, I appreciate the fact that because of their position in the limelight any action on the part of screen stars is of necessity vastly more news value than similar incidents in the lives of doctors, lawyers, ministers, or society men and women.

In New York there are thousands of professional people, and because of its area and population their individual actions are swallowed up in the vastness of the metropolis.

In Los Angeles, with its six hundred thousand against Gotham's six millions, the arrival here of a new type of individual such as the photoplayer aroused a general interest that caused the public to take a keen personal interest in their actions every hour of the twenty-four.

Their midnight parties in beach cafes and suburban country clubs, before the Volstead act, attracted the attention of the other classes who were having parties at the same type of resorts, and because of the prominence of the film stars their parties were related from tongue to ear, each time possibly receiving added imaginative details.

If a lawyer and a cinema celebrity were in the same auto in an after-midnight wreck, by reason of modern news values, the name of the latter got all the play in the headlines, and the former was lucky to get mentioned at all.

Los Angeles has become the home of a great player population, and is still recognized as one of the greatest home-loving towns in America, despite its metropolitan growth. Suppose that the 2,500 lights of the photoplay world were all a force for evil, this city would get a reputation for wickedness and vice all over the world.

In a few isolated instances players have given themselves over entirely to the pursuit of the primose path, and have gotten into trouble as a result. But why condemn the remainder of the 2,500 for the tactical errors of a few.

The minister's son is on trial for murder; but does the community say that all minister's sons are potential murderers?

A doctor is charged with assault, but do we find the medical profession blacklisted on that account?

A lawyer is threatened with disbarment for dishonorable practice; but we are not condemning every member of the Los Angeles County Bar Association.

The individual players that are deserving of censure should be censured, but the entire motion picture colony should not be carelessly thrown into the shadows because of a noisy, foolish minority.

The publicity work for many picture stars has been crude. Press agents have tried to make the public think of their clients as exotic, enurotic, esoteric individuals, have emphasized their freak pets, their champagne baths, their silk pajamas and diamond studded lingerie so that they have literally made curiosities out of them. For Los Angeles, at least, the public should be made to realize that the photoplay workers are just plain, every day folks, living quiet lives, having babies, buying their homes and becoming normal, sensible citigens of the capital of the motion picture world.

PRODUCING IN OAKLAND

The Stewart Motion Picture Company has taken a five-year lease of the Smith estate of East Oakland, Calif., where they will make a series of pictures with all star casts. Marie Walcamp has already been signed. Webster Cullison is supervisor of direction.

OUR GREETINGS of the season would be incomplete without a word of appreciation for our friends whose patronage and loyalty have made possible this bank's growth.
Looking forward, we are gratful indeed that this expansion, in which they have taken so active a part, enables us to constantly increase the value and breadth of our service to them.

Why Studios "Close Down"

It is both notable and significant that most of the studios which have NOT "closed down" during the last year have been regular clients of the Photoplay Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Four years ago we expressed the opinion that producers who consistently select their plays because of their intrinsic screenability, rather than because of their "literary" value, were destined to achieve and maintain financial success.

And now, four years later, we hold tenaciously and justifiably to the same opinion.

Nor have the producers who have regularly come to Story Headquarters for their stories had occasion to differ from that opinion. They have been too busy making good pictures for a market that is starving for good pictures to entertain the thought of "closing down."

It is not the policy of the Palmer Sales Department to urge the purchase of one story at a high price (just to make a sale), but rather to endeavor to select material that will make for continuous successful production.

Vol. IV. SATURDAY, JANUARY 7, 1922 No. 39

You!

You are a creator, an interpreter or a builder in one of the world's greatest industrial, educational and artistic undertakings. You are well known in your profession as a competent worker with a big future or you are famous among the peoples of the universe as that irresistible fascination, a player of the silver sheet. Further than this, you take big chances with your money and art in the cause of progress and you assist materially in the financial maintainance of your government. Your charities cannot be numbered. Therefore you are not only a popular entertainer and educator of the world but a highly desirable citizen of the United States of America, and as such you find yourself continually affected agreeably or adversely by such legislations, sentiments, and financial conditions as your banking and trading neighbors experience; this, in addition to the hundred and one circumstances and regulations that you feel peculiarly through your own line of endeavor.

Now, as a great artist, a public benefactor and a self respecting human being, do you set forth your political, religious and professional views that they may be noted and taken into account as an element not to be overlooked by your national politicians, legislating reformers and the outside capital within your own industry when they are arranging your destiny in their conference rooms? Do you even dominate the community that you brought about by your presence and that your dollars are still nourishing? You don't and you know you don't, or if not, we are telling you now. Even in the capital of your great industry you count merely as any wealthy boob always counts with an outfit of ungrateful commercial vampires. You're a woolly sheep who will be led to the shearing perhaps with a hypocritical smile, perhaps with an undisguised kick. Sheared, however, you will be by those who do not even sense your mentality and soul. Why? In what does your futility lie?

In your good nature and your unusual modesty, the two great sins of an otherwise quite human people. Where are they who have manufactured the famous "temperament and egotism" stories of the picture celebrity? Rather where are they so credulous as to take studio vagaries with which you amuse yourself and friends as the real expression of your personality which in its very reticence has failed to protect itself?

Did it never occur to you that a little fiery display for the benefit of your city officials, city merchants and city professional slickers might serve a more profitable end, now and again, than the meaningless ones in your dressing room? If your agreeable disposition refuses to rile at obvious wrongs you are yet an actor! If when you consider the manoeuvers of your Railroad Commission which grants advanced rates to Los Angeles telephone, gas and street railway corporations at a time when your phone has been dead for three weeks, your gas is half air and you haven't been seated in a public conveyance for six months, you do notice a tightening of the spinal column, you are really that greatest of all creatures, a fighting child of the flesh!

If you are in favor of an ad valorem tax on imported films, if you are strenuously opposed to censorship, blue laws and unfair taxations, you stand between the sharks within and without your business and your fellow workers as a humanitarian. There will be several million years in which to wax good natured when you have gained planes where earthly hostilities are unknown. You may dwell in becoming modesty when the other fellow has learned to comfortable than genius'.

Let your gift of expression advance your material self that eats, sleeps, and is supposed to get its jobs largely over the willing wire as well as your art and you will have accomplished a man's place in the world, sometimes more comfortable than a genius.

This little paper, run for the picture people by picture people, has generalized for you through the several years just past, but your individual viewpoints are more vital. Self appreciation embracing a little talk and much action is your salvation now. All of Camera!'s resources are at your disposal when you awaken to your responsibilities and privileges. The work ahead of you is exceedingly great but the cause is your own.

European Notes

The German "Film Express," published in Berlin, provides the highlights on European production and exhibiting conditions which we reprint below. Some of the attitudes expressed are more than significant.

"The American film duty bill having passed the House of Representatives, is now under discussion in a Senate committee. The bill provides for a 30 per cent ad valorem duty on all cinematograph pictures imported, but the most important point is that the ad valorem is based on the cost of a similar piece of work in the United States. Foreign manufacturers are agreed that the adoption of such a law would absolutely close the American screens to work produced elsewhere, and the American bill has therefore caused the greatest uneasiness throughout the

Current Reviews

"FOREVER"

Grauman's Rialto

No recent filming of a classic has occasioned more interest and comment within the picture profession than has that of "Peter Ibbetson" (retitled "Forever"), Du Maurier's sensational novel which is just released by Paramount. This, both on account of the popularity in certain circles of the story and John Nathan Raphael's stage version of it and because of the surprising fact that, cast in the tragic title role, was a screen comedian, Wallace Reid.

If we were at first startled by the arrangement we have been equally pleased with the general outcome, a production that is an achievement for its artistic producer, George Fitzmaurice. With the strokes of a master, he has painted into his picture all of the delicately toned romance with which the author unfolded the radical basic theory in his story. The performances too are guided to great beauty by the same hand which utilizes the clever material at its disposal to the best possible advantage.

When we consider that nearly as much has been dared by those who screened "Peter Ibbetson" as was ventured in its original publication, we appreciate the extent of Fitzmaurice's ability as a human story teller, for while the theme has already been enthusiastically accepted in its various forms by the artistically educated, it is the picture theatre masses (having at best little knowledge of the fine arts yet ordering the financial fate of all photodramas), that are meeting it now with something akin to reverence. Only the subtle handling of "Forever" makes it live for the average film fan. Arthur Miller photographed the Ouida Bergere scenario exquisitely. The detail has been faultlessly managed.

As for the famous Peter himself, he is well accounted for by the surprising Mr. Reid who plays the part picturesquely and convincingly, deserting his comedy affectations for the more fascinating serious romance at which, by the way, he is exceedingly apt. He runs the gamut in the love-making line as Peter, the French-born, English-raised lad whose real nature is never separated from the sunny southern gardens of his youth. The gentle honor of those gardens remains ever in his consciousness rendering him a condemned murderer, then a "lifer," but finally bringing him the blessing of a love almost too spiritual for this earth. Possibly a little more characterization could have been employed in this interpretation, but for the audience nothing is missing. Reid invests very profitably more interest than is often found in his rather care-free work, here. He is strikingly graceful.

Elsie Ferguson is lovely in the intense Duchess of Towers, the grown Mimsie, the adoration of Peter's entire life. Her smallest touches contribute indescribable refinement to her character which is the poem of a love too terrific to be halted, too sweet to be injured by a lifetime of separation. There is something quite wonderful about this actress whose personality expresses itself in violet shadows. She is perfectly placed in this photoplay.

Montague Love and George Faucett offer two artistically executed roles, Col. Ibbetson and Major Duquesnois. The exaggerated villainy of the Englishman is always fitting and the Napoleonic veteran is a gem. The parts are highlights which add immeasurably to the dramatic value of the production.

Elliott Dexter, Paul McAllister, Dolores Cassinelli, Barbara Dean, Nell Roy Buck, Charles Eaton and Jerome Patrick ably dispatch the remaining work.

One can only regret the retitling of this lovely story. It is otherwise a credit to Paramount.

BABY PEGGY MONTGOMERY

"RENT FREE"

Grauman's

A sprightly, regulation, Lasky comedy for Wallace Reid is "Rent Free," adapted by Elmer Rice from the story by Izolă Forrester and Mann Page. Dealing with the exploits of an aggressive young artist in the quest for an abode free of the rent terror, it includes the usual light love story, this time brought into being upon the roofs of New York over which the hero casually travels as he would the highways, the to-be-expected mix-up resultant of his appropriation of a wealthy villainess' vacant mansion and the inevitable, happy ending with a slightly valuable surprise twist. The general effect is, however, rather charming and many moderate laughs reward the efforts of the cast and title writers.

Howard Higgin's direction is good and the camera work by C. E. Schoenbaum meets the high Lasky standard.

The star's rendition of Buell Armister, Jr., is spirited enough to amuse any one and careless enough to intrigue—high school maidens. For years he has done this sort of thing to the public's apparent satisfaction.

Lila Lee, a bit more willowy than usual, enacts the feminine lead, Barbara Teller, to the increased merit of the picture. Her position is hardly complex.

Lillian Leighton's characterization of Maria Tebbs is accepted by the audience with keen delight (Miss Leighton's comedy is the most dependable that we know) and Gertrude Short occasions several further laughs as Justine Tate, Barbara's pal.

Winnifred Greenwood is a thoroughly odious heavy, Countess de Mourney, who is nicely balanced by Clarence Geldart's Count.

Lucien Littlefield in Batty Briggs, an absolutely irrelevant part, the slight value of which lies in its ridiculousness, Henry Barrows and Pal complete the cast of this Paramount production.

"LOVE'S PENALTY"

Clune's

Hope Hampton Productions presents its star in "Love's Penalty," a current local release, written and directed by John Gilbert. Now if he just hadn't written the story,—but he did, we saw it and a review has to follow. Perhaps it would be best to start by saying that this screenplay has more moral than entertainment value, but the statement is inadequate. The plot is based upon the old idea of the vengeance of a girl brought down upon the man who had ruined her sister and inadvertantly caused the girl's death, but more clumsily arranged it could never have been, even in the dark ages, gone by. It starts as a lecture from the pulpit but whether the lesson is on the need of discretion between young girls and their employers or the futility of human vengeance would be hard to state. The last scene is set under a Christmas tree which may or may not be a part of the rector's story. There is no way to tell from the cutting. The direction clarifies none of the muddled situations. The result of the whole is far from what the public has been educated to expect.

Miss Hampton as Janis, the stronger sister, is more animated than we have known her, but her transitions are neglected. The part is not particularly sympathetic.

Jack O'Brien in an entirely meaningless, unjustified position plays opposite the star, but it is Percy Marmont who offers the important male role in Saunders. This last is the one relieving performance in the cast.

Landers Stevens is also among the list of players.

A mediocre star like Miss Hampton should be well bolstered by superior story material and careful direction.

Otis Harlan and Thomas Ricketts are playing important roles in "The Duchess de Longeais" starring Norma Talmadge under the direction of Frank Lloyd.

Betty Ross Clarke interprets the principal feminine role in the next Earle Williams-Vitagraph production entitled "The Man from Downing Street."

Marguerite de la Motte will go with Douglas Fairbanks for his next picture after she is through with "Jim," which John Griffith Wray is directing for Thomas H. Ince.

ANITA STEWART

Starring in "Rose O' The Sea" for Louis B. Mayer

December 19, 1921.

Grace M. Adair,
Advertising Sales Manager, "Camera!"
4513 Sunset Boulevard, Los Angeles.

Dear Miss Adair:

It may please you to know that a small advertisement in "Camera!" was the means of obtaining a LEADING ROLE for Miss Carmen Arselle. Miss Arselle is playing opposite Dick Hatton in the Prairie production, "Four Hearts," a five-reel state-rights feature to be distributed by this company.

Mr. Hatton was in search of a leading woman and happened to pick up a copy of "Camera!" from my desk. He saw Miss Arselle's picture in her advertisement, arranged an interview and signed her.

If the players generally only realized the great value of advertising, "Camera!" would be treble its size—and their bank accounts would be treble their size.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE!

With best wishes, I am

Sincerely

W. M. Parker,

H.WP Western Pictures Exploitation Company

VETS IN PICTURE JOBS

The motion picture industry ranks high among businesses striving to aid the unemployed ex-service men.

"Hey Buddy!" was the password at the Lasky Studio for several days recently when William D. Taylor engaged veterans to play the parts of French, Italian, Belgian, British and American soldiers in "The Noose."

Besides engagement of war veterans as extras, these men are employed in various capacities around the picture plants, as well as vocational training students of motion photography and other technical subjects.

Hope Hampton, the First National star, is due here shortly to make a picture.

The wife of Alec B. Francis, well known character actor of the screen, passed away recently after a brief illness.

"Forever," co-starring Elsie Ferguson and Wallace Reid, opens its second week at Grauman's Rialto Sunday, Jan. 8th.

Viola Dana, Metro star, left for New York via San Francisco. She will make personal appearances at screen theatres while away from the studio.

Bert Woodruff is convalescing after an automobile accident and will be ready for work in about three weeks.

Little Richard Headrick, child actor, has recovered from an attack of diphtheria which for a time caused alarm among his professional friends.

Marie Mosquini, leading lady in Harry "Snub" Pollard comedies, will make her first journey east in March or April.

The Screen Artists' Guild, recently formed, will attempt to bring about better productions through cheaper manufacturing costs. Norma Talmadge and Charlie Chaplin are figures in the move.

Lilliam Guenther, the child actress, has returned from Arizona where she has been on a concert tour. Lillian will start on another tour the first of February taking in the middle west.

Lloyd Hamilton's latest release, "The Vagrant," opened the new Vermont Theatre on Vermont Ave. recently. This marks the sixth new theatre in Los Angeles that has shown a Lloyd Hamilton comedy on its opening night.

"The Eskimo Baby," an original song by Hazel Madelin Lindoft, was recently featured by the Blue Bird Cafe, Ambassador Hotel, Morosco Theatre, and Loew's State Theatre. Remick is handling the song for Miss Lindoft.

Harold Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. Hal Roach, Mildred Davis and her mother left recently for New York to be gone a month or longer. Many of the studio people were on hand to wish them good luck and a happy New Year.

"Just Around the Corner," a Cosmopolitan Production, will come to Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre, Monday, Jan. 9th. The cast includes Margaret Seddon, Lewis Sargent, Sigrid Holmquist, Fred G. Thompson, Edward Phillips, Peggy Parr, Mme. Rose Rosonova and William Nally.

Editorial

world. In some states counter-measures against the American film have been considered.

"But now the American film industry itself has taken a decided stand against this film duty and raised an energetic protest against the bill, pointing to the fact that the American film is absolutely capable of competing both at home and abroad. After this step by the largest American trade association, the bill in its pesent form may already be considered as miscarried, and thus the film world-market is disencumbered of a grave danger. The film business is international, and can thrive in all countries only if all artificial barriers are removed and a free exchange from people to people is secured. The film is not only a piece of goods as every other merchandise, but it is an artistic product, apt to bring the peoples of the earth again in closer touch. From this viewpoint the government of each country must look upon the intrinsic nature of the film."

"The President of the German Republic, Mr. Ebert, recently visited the film city Woltersdorf, where the 'May Film-Gesellschaft,' in close nennection with the 'Europaische Film-Allianz G. m. b. H.,' is at present finishing the grand film work, 'The Indian Sepulchre.' It must be considered most gratifying and helpful to the interests of the entire film industry that the leading personage of the Republic is manifesting such a vivid interest in the young German film industry. The visit paid by the President to the film city Woltersdorf was not meant for the film, 'The Indian Sepulchre,' just finishing, but for the organization of the film city on the whole."

"In Belgium the film-control commission of the department of justice (section for protection of the youth), has been exercising its functions since the first of March. The films shown in so-called family presentations must bear the stamp of this commission. Children under 16 may attend only such performances. It has already been reported in the 'Lichtbild-Buhne' that the owners of cinemas took defensive measures against this and organized a boycott against the censor, although they were willing to have children barred from their shows. Report has also been made of the countermeasures considered by the Belgian government, which contemplated the organization of a provisory distributing agency by the state until such time as the boycott against with.

"The new censorship is based on the law of November 1, 1920. Under this law, youths under 16 are forbidden to attend any film shows except such as are especially approved for the youth by the control-commission. Violation of the law is punishable by imprisonment from one to seven days, and by a fine of five to 25 francs ,or both. In addition, the offending cinema can be closed for a term not exceeding six months.

"A royal decree provides the following constitution of the control-commission: It is erected in the department of justice, and is composed of a chairman, a vice-chairman and a number of advisors and substitute advisors.

"The president divides the commission into committees of five members each, and names the chairman of each committee. Each committee must contain one member who is appointed by the royal government. A detailed scenario and a list of all titles, subtitles, commentaries and tests must be submitted to the commission, with the name and titles of the producer and the length of the film. The commission can restrict itself to the examination of the material, but is also empowered to require that the film shall be shown for it. The commission is obligated to make its decisions as quickly as possible, and to notify interested persons of such decisions."

Film Colony Rumors

It is rumored that a new co-operative company with a capitalization of $250,000, known as Co-operative Producers, are about to start production at the "U." F. H. Croghan and David Hartford are president and vice-president respectively. It is understood that Lewis Stone, Lon Chaney, Noah Beery and Henry Otto have already been signed for forthcoming productions.

It is understood that Louis B. Mayer is about to add two new companies to his producing units. Further details to follow later.

Local film circles are interested in the reported engagement of Mary Miles Minter and T. E. Dixon, son of the pencil magnate, who just arrived from New York where Mary met him last year. The report is that Director Cupid will screen the final fade-out on this romance next summer.

Sponsoring of a film studio to make pictures in Mexico exclusively for Latin-American exhibition is being considered by the National Motion Pictures Finance Co. While this company would not erect its own studio there, if conditions warranted, part of the money might be advanced by the California corporation. Dr. Miller has just returned from Mexico as the guest of President Obregon, and he believes that American-made pictures are not sure fire in their appeal to the Latin-American populations of Mexico, Central and South America.

Rockett Brothers claim that their plans for the new year will necessitate their starting production activities in about three weeks.

There is a possibility that Anita Stewart whose contract with Louis B. Mayer terminates presently will join the R-C forces. Other players who are mentioned as future R-C stars are Robert Gordon and Pat O'Malley.

PATHE PRESENTS FOCH WITH TOUR FILM

Through the courtesy of Paul Brunet of Pathe, Marshal Foch took with him when he returned to France recently, a two-reel motion picture record of America's reception to him on his tour of the United States and Canada.

MADAM PETROVA'S PLAY IN NOVEL FORM

Olga Petrova's stage play, "The White Peacock," in which she is at present starring, will make its bow presently as a novel. The Four Seas Publishing Company of Boston, Mass., recently made Madam Petrova an offer for the fiction rights.

CLEVER DOG CHOOSES CAMERA!

"Pal," Harry Lucenay's intellectual bulldog who has a prominent part in Wallace Reid's latest picture "Rent Free" can actually read, for if he is told to pick out "Camera!" from the other newspapers and periodicals laid on a table, he can do it without any cue whatsoever. He is the only dog in the world who is able to do this astonishing trick.

Why Studios "Close Down"

It is both notable and significant that most of the studios which have NOT "closed down" during the last year have been regular clients of the Photoplay Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Four years ago we expressed the opinion that producers who consistently select their plays because of their intrinsic screenability, rather than because of their "literary" value, were destined to achieve and maintain financial success.

And now, four years later, we hold tenaciously and justifiably to the same opinion.

Nor have the producers who have regularly come to Story Headquarters for their stories had occasion to differ from that opinion. They have been too busy making good pictures for a market that is starving for good pictures to entertain the thought of "closing down."

It is not the policy of the Palmer Sales Department to urge the purchase of one story at a high price (just to make a sale), but rather to endeavor to select material that will make for continuous successful production.

"HOW TO WRITE MOTION PICTURE SCENARIOS"

By Donald H. Clarke

Quotation marks enclose the title of this article for what the writer considers a mighty good reason. That is, the title was first used by some one else about the same moment that writing for the screen first became a reasonably profitable job. It is impossible to state here exactly how many persons are writing articles—and advertisements—under that title, or similar ones, at the present moment. We'll admit it's quite a number and let it go at that.

The first point is that it is a great deal easier to tell some one else how to do something than to do it one's self. Directions for shinnying to the top of a flagpole are simple. Mounting a flagpole is something else again. It's not only real work, or looks remarkably like real work, but it also requires a sort of native aptitude. Real flagpole climbers are rather scarce.

So far as the records show there have been no correspondence schools for flagpole climbers. A young chap just naturally goes in for it, and before he knows it—if he lives—there he is, a full-fledged flagpole climber. Some call him a steeplejack. You may prefer that word yourself.

Correspondence schools didn't make William Shakspeare a playright, or John Keats a poet, Rupert Hughes a successful novelist and photoplay writer or Jack Dempsey heavyweight champion of the world. They learned in the school of hard knocks—particularly the last named.

Statements thus far may have given rise to the impression that an attack on correspondence schools is under way. Nothing could be further from the thought or the purpose of this writer. Schools of all kinds are the greatest single force for progress in the world.

The present purpose is entirely different. It is this: "Taking a course," or reading a few books, or listening to a few lectures on "How to Write Motion Picture Scenarios" or "How to Make a Success Raising Onions," is only a very small beginning. It makes a good leavener for the necessary ingredients of natural talent and hard work. The recipe might run something like this:

"Add as much education and information as possible to as much talent and ambition as happens to be in the pantry at the time and then pour in hard work continuously until done. Serve hot."

Heywood Broun wrote the other day that the mere mechanical task of writing is as arduous and as uninteresting as the job of making buttonholes—thousands of 'em day in and day out. The rewards of success at writing are, however, a heap more noticeable than the rewards that come from doing buttonholes.

Hard work—everything else being equal—is the big thing. A serious purpose and hard work that disregards everything else in life so far as is humanly possible is necessary to real success in any field of endeavor. Of course, this doesn't affect the dilletante, or any one else who's merely a dabbler.

Paul Bern, editor of the Goldwyn Scenario Department, has written an article called "Advice to the Amateur Scenario Writer." He begins by saying:

"Don't write scenarios. But if you feel you really must, that there is nothing that means more to you than the writing of stories for the screen, then go ahead, and write voluminously and exhaustively and continually."

Mr. Bern then goes on to detail some necessary points such as, to write simply, to avoid speech as much as possible, to be dramatic and stirring, to be bright and not morbid, to deal with subjects with which you are familiar, and concludes with the words:

"Don't write scenarios, but if you feel you must, then write with everything in you, with your heart, your soul, your blood—for the screen is a jealous mistress and demands everything you have to give. Then perhaps you will succeed."

Which all means that the way to write for the screen is to work like the dickens. There's no short cut to success as a motion picture writer any more than there is to success in any other profession. If there was one, a lot of the people who are giving advice would be following it.

TULLY HONOR GUEST

Among the guests of honor at the annual dinner meeting of the California membership of the Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity, held recently at the Union League Club, was Richard Walton Tully, the noted producer who is now on the coast filming "The Masquerader," starring Guy Bates Post.

The toastmaster at the banquet was the Right Reverend Bishop Joseph H. Johnson. This was the first occasion of its kind where a film producer was one of the guests of honor and a speaker. Mr. Tully was a member of the fraternity at the University of California, from which he graduated in 1901.

CUMMINGS TO START NEW SERIES

Irving Cummings is about to star in a series of stories of five reels or more. The first will be "The Man from Hell's River," an adapation of the James Oliver Curwood novel, "The Coyote."

Shouting Truth from the Housetops

—truth is a rare thing anyway. But oh how rare a thing it is to find the truth about the motion pictures.

And that is the very reason for the existence of SCREENLAND—a motion picture magazine that is made where the movies are made.

Whether you are a motion picture fan or not you will enjoy its many pages of rotary gravure, that new and beautiful way of printing photographs in colors.

You will enjoy the fiction, too, because it is the best that money can buy. Sometimes it is about the moving pictures, but always it is interesting—and think of this, it is illustrated by pictures of the stars themselves who pose in the characters of the story! That is something new.

Then, if you are a fan, you will turn to the "Little Hints for Playgoers," because here you will find the real truth about the latest pictures.

Being made where the movies are made, it is naturally in SCREENLAND that you find the actual stories of the stars and productions, and there is a something in these stories that cannot be put into them by writers and editors who live miles and miles away from the place these stories deal with—HOLLYWOOD, the wonderful.

You will probably turn next, if you are an aspiring scenario writer, to the department entitled "What's the Matter With My Story?" This department is a treat to all of our readers who are also writers, because it enables them to send in their stories for a thorough criticism and analysis without any charge whatsoever.

And such writers! Elinor Glyn, Rita Weiman, Rob Wagner, Byron Morgan and Gouverneur Morris—every one of them writing all about the pictures they are making, and writing about them especially for you through the columns of SCREENLAND.

Of course, we have intimate photographs and chatty stories, too. One just couldn't help it when one lives here as we do in the heart of an industry so full of romances as the motion picture industry is.

We are just as anxious to have you see the first copy of SCREENLAND as you will be to see the next one. We will send you one for nothing if you ask for it—

Or just clip the little coupon below and write your name and address on it and send it in with $2.00. That means twelve months of the newsiest, breeziest, classiest motion picture stories and photographs you ever read or saw in all your life. And remember—it is all the truth, because it is "made where the movies are made."

A Few Observations

We thought that it was about time for the re-issue artists to get busy again after the dull spell and here they come insolently offering for sale "The Two Orphans," an "Edison-Film Torino-Attraction," after the manner of the contemptible publicity pirates who peddled an unauthentic, antiquated version of "The Three Musketeers" at the time of Fairbanks' release of the big picture.

This week's thieving exploiteers, however, are more brazen than most, when they catch-line their inserts with this startling intelligence, "The Production with a Million Dollars Worth of Publicity behind it." Boasting of one's dishonesty is a dangerously daring thing and in this case the whole project is doomed to futility, for the ordinary exhibitor is far too intelligent a man to permit of his being roped into dealings with any such public-fooling aggregation.

One is tempted to question "of whose property?" to the admonition "get your share" further on in the insert. Since organizations of this calibre never seriously injure any big producer, Frank Valle's, which is making a stab at this deal, may never even be noticed by Griffith, but the entire exhibiting business should recognize and sidestep those who indulge in these detestable practices. Strange, isn't it, that there are yet individuals in the world who overlook the fact that everything gained must be equivalently paid for?

Before leaving the poor Orphans, we wish to remark that they have been further maltreated by the most incoherent review recently inscribed appearing this week in the Moving Picture News. In his criticism of the latest Griffith Production, Laurence Reid with many lofty but oft-repeated phrases, undertakes an analysis of the play which he compares somewhat unfavorably to Ernst Lubitsch's "Passion," before winding it up with this illuminating praise: "richly photographic mediums such as the closeup and the long shot and the soft focus serve to feast the eye with their appealing effects." Meaning which?

We understand that Hearst, through his Chicago American, is pushing a movement to preserve for posterity those films which shall be annually voted the year's best, and presented to some governmental agency. To this end Watterson Rothacker has been consulted upon the life of film as it is now prepared and the possibility of eventually insuring a photodrama for 15,000 years that coming civilizations may study the beginning of screen literature.

This is an entirely commendable, far-sighted project, and one worthy of every encouragement. Unlimited vision is necessary to all progress.

The French "Musee Pedagogique," connected with the Ministry of Public Instruction, is placing motion picture equipment and films in all of its country's schools. After all our efforts in that advanced direction, we have let France beat us to the absolute decision that the visual method of education is the most efficient. Both the French and the cinema will profit by this significant step.

A great deal has been lately argued upon the first run exhibitors' presentation policy, which was attacked some weeks back in these columns by Wm. D. Taylor for the Motion Picture Directors Association. The directorial body contends that present day showmen are injuring the cinema by the so-called bolstering process of their features with prologue effects, straight vaudeville, etc., which latter is claimed to detract from the picture in its own house besides necessitating the high admission rates through which attendance is diminished. It was pointed out that vaudeville is for the vaudeville theatre and that it is often boring to picture fans, anyway.

Personally we have suffered this experience but having attended approximately three hundred such embellished performances in the past year, we could not be perfectly sure that our taste in the matter coincided with that of the casual observer. Upon our last review day, however, we were lent confidence in our own opinion when, after sitting through an hour's preliminary regulation entertainment at one of the city's foremost picture theatres, the film production put in its appearance to be met with this breathless ejaculation from the rotund lady at our elbow, "Well, thank Fortune, that's over. Of all the tedious programs—." Later that day, our own housekeeper came forth with the intelligence that one of the week's most successful releases had been spoiled for her by the "'long drawn out acts" preceding it. Thereafter we conducted a private research upon the question to be continually met with different expressions of this identical attitude. We offer this information in great triumph, but of course our pain has been more severe and longer endured than most.

A suggestion that the exhibitor could advantageously spend an hour weekly in his audience might not come amiss. His ticket buyers usually know what they want; likewise that which is undesirable to them. F. R.

NELL SHIPMAN TO START PRESENTLY

Nell Shipman is now selecting the cast for her next feature, "The Grub Stake," written by Miss Shipman, nearly all of the scenes for which will be made in Alaska. Bert Van Tuyle, Miss Shipman's manager and director recently returned from a location hunt in that country at which time all arrangements were made for housing and transporting the entire company.

Felix Graf, manager of Miss Shipman's wild animal zoo, which now comprises over 100 animals, will leave for Alaska in a few days to purchase three complete dog teams to be used in the coming production. He will also purchase polar bears and other animals to add to the zoo. Nearly all of Miss Shipman's former staff will be re-engaged.

COMPANY STARS CECIL HOLLAND

Protean Arts, a new producing company, has recently been formed to star Cecil Holland, character actor and make-up artist, in a series of short subject novelties. The first of these pictures has already gone into production at the Fine Arts Studio under the direction of Raymond Cannon. Wm. Foster, secretary of the A. S. C., is photographing the series.

JESSE D. HAMPTON STUDIOS

DISTRIBUTES PRINTS FROM L. A.

Producer J. L. Frothingham has instituted a new departure in the film business by the shipping of his prints on his latest production, "Shattered Idols," to the various First National exchanges throughout the United States, direct from Los Angeles. Heretofore, it has been the custom of producers to send their negatives back to New York, where prints are made and distributed.

AT THE UNITED STUDIOS

Jack Pickford is conferring with the Pickford organization about the details of his forthcoming production, "The Tailor Made Man." It is understood that Anthony Paul Kelley is negotiating with the Pickfords over the writing of the script.

Jackie Coogan's current production, now nearing completion, will be called "Lost and Found."

Allen Holubar has commenced production on "The Soul Seeker," starring Dorothy Phillips.

More than two months will be required in the making of the Norma Talmadge production, "The Duchess de Longeais," which is now in progress.

WESTERN PICTURES NOTES

Most of the scenes in Irving Cummings' forthcoming starring picture, "The Man from Hell's River," by James Oliver Curwood, will be photographed at Truckee. The cast selected to date includes Eva Novak and Wallace Berry. Abe Friedman has been retained as cinematographer.

As soon as word comes from Bear Valley that there is a heavy fall of snow, Charles W. Mack will take the Lester Cuneo company there for scenes in "Snow-Bound," the Henry McCarty—Leo Meehan story. Francelia Billington will probably play opposite the star.

Final scenes were shot this week at the Louis Burston studio on the David Butler picture, "According to Hoyle." It will be about three weeks before Mr. Burston will start casting the next Butler picture.

Webster Cullison, who directed the "Philo Gubb" comedies featuring Victor Potel, is preparing a melodrama for the independent market, which Western Pictures Exploitation Company will distribute.

Current Reviews

"THE LIGHT IN THE CLEARING"

Clune's

The long-awaited release of "The Light in The Clearing" has taken place and it is now the public's opportunity to see what T. Hayes Hunter, the producer of "Earthbound," has been able to do with Irving Bacheller's widely read story. Perhaps peculiarly, that story which, augmented by the Hunter reputation, will do the attracting at the box office, pans out to be the one unsuitable element in the photoplay. This is because it is fundamentally a novel. That William R. Lighton has adapted it as lucidly as he has, is to his own great credit, but there are too many threads in it to render the result a compact photodrama. Nevertheless, the almost perfect casting of the realistic characters and the competent management of the whole by the director gives us a pictureplay fraught with delicate situations, and intense crises. Drama is its keynote, by means of which its opening, carrying and completing are achieved. The photography by A. Scholtz presents some quite wonderful weird effects and is otherwise lovely.

The most vivid, predominant portrayal in the cast is Rovin' Kate, a mad outcast, superbly shaped by Eugenie Besserer into a heart-rending force irresitible in its strange simplicity, entirely affecting in its exquisite artistry. From Kate's thrilling introduction through her anguished action as the cheated mother to her tranquil finish, she is the work of a great and a true artist. Added to Miss Besserer's indescribable performances in "Scarlet Days," "The Greatest Question," etc., and her various comedy efforts, this part establishes the fact that here is the screen's foremost feminine interpreter.

The next strongest position in the tale is Ben Grimshaw, a miserly blackguard, characterized colorfully by Frank Leigh. As the loveless money seeker of a little New England town, Leigh is entirely convincing, but it is the subtlety in Grimshaw's repentance, made too late to save the life of either son or to bring happiness into his own, that determines his life in the portrayal.

Amos Grimshaw, his greedy, unpleasant little son who comes to crime and death through the neglect and perversion of his parent is excellently done by George Hackathorne.

Andrew Arbuckle, Arthur Morrison, Alberta Lee, John Roseleigh, and J. Edward Brown are picturesque types to be situated in Horace Dunkleberg, Uncle Peabody, Aunt Deel, Joe Wright and Squire Fullerton.

Edward Sutherland and Clara Horton in Bart and Sally control the young romance.

The Dial Film Company presents "The Light in The Clearing" through Hodkinson.

"TWO MINUTES TO GO"

Kinema

There is something funereal about the backsliding of any proven artist into mediocrity. It is so senseless! Nevertheless that is often the trend when a picture star aspires and accomplishes his own direction. However, in the case of Charles Ray, we had considered that there was a decided difference. Our proof was the "punchy" "Scrap Iron," his first personally produced release. That, in spite of his auspicious start, things have not held up so well for him can only be deduced from his last two, below-standard pictures, "The Midnight Bell" and "Two Minutes to Go."

The latter, a Richard Anders story, scenarized by Al Ray, is the current First National release. It is a simple college yarn that evidently appeared a lot peppier on paper than it turned out on celluloid.

LENORE LYNARD

Taking too much footage to get under way, it commits the unforgivable by losing the observer's interest barely regaining it in the last reel. There is nothing new nor dramatically valuable in the plot while the facts that the comedy situations are almost entirely lost upon the audience and no real sympathy is justified by the leading roles, indicates that "Two Minutes to Go" was a hurried, thoughtlessly executed proposition.

The subtitles, consisting mostly of involved college yells, are snapped onto the screen far too often, only to be slid off again before they can be followed to the end.

This picture cannot possibly prove of any benefit to the star; we think that it will be by a narrow margin that he will escape harm from it. His part, Chet Burnett, a college football hero who forsakes the pigskin and resultantly his general popularity to work his way through school as a milkman, means little and its footage is surprisingly limited. Were it Ray's unselfishness toward a finished old character performer which occasioned the slashing of his own role it might be highly commendable, but generosity to a mob, which fills most of the film, someway seems a futile thing. Burnett has none of the gripping appeal that is expected to mark Ray's work from his own superior precedent and no humanizing comedy.

Mary Anderson displays a great deal of attractive spirit in the feminine lead, Ruth Turner, just an average girl, while Philip Dunham, after working desperately through the story for laughs finally gathers a few toward the end in the Spanish Professor.

Truman Van Dyke provides opposition in "Angel," the caddish yell leader, and an invaluable touch is offered by Tom Wilson in the football coach. You can bank on Wilson to do something perfectly in most Ray vehicles.

Lionel Belmore, Lincoln Stedman, Gus Leonard, Bert Woodruff and Francois Dumas adequately dispatch the remaining action.

George Rizard's photography is very good.

"JUST AROUND THE CORNER"

Grauman's

They claim for "Just Around the Corner" in the exploitation that it in another "Humoresque" and for once they almost tell the truth for this Cosmopolitan production of a Fannie Hurst story possesses much of the human interest appeal that marked the former and is certainly within the experience of a greater class than was the Borzage picture which, it will be recalled, was basically Hebrew.

"Just Around the Corner" is a chronicle of the sorrows and happinesses of the Birdsongs, a family representative of that section of America's great lower middle class which dwells in the city. Including such homely details as only that great humanist, its authoress, would think to embrace in a story, it has been transferred to the screen for everyone's enjoyment by Frances Marion in a complete scenario.

Miss Marion has also guided the interpretation of the play with her direction, a great improvement, by-the-way, over her work on Pickford's "The Lovelight." She displays an unusual comprehension of detail here and makes her uncomplicated little tale live strenuously for her audience.

If there is a noticeably weak spot in the picture, it falls at the end which dwindles out somewhat. However, the dozens of laughs and tears in this screen drama of very callow youth and the average loving but forceless mother are better entertainment than that to which the public is accustomed. The finish will matter little to it.

Henry Cronjager's photography is also excellent.

In Ma Birdsong the invalid mother who follows her instinct faithfully in her care for her children, Margaret Seddon gives a finished performance. The part which she plays is exceedingly natural and shows considerable capability.

In this story, however, it is the two youngsters, who approach the sensational in their clever balancing of pathos and comedy.

Lewis Sargent, a former Fox kiddie, plays deliciously the big hearted, "hard boiled" Jimmie, who in a messenger's uniform casually heads the household though he is as yet several years removed from manhood; and it is he who at one moment sends the house into an uproar with his ingenious mannerisms only to pull tears from it the next with the helpless, frightened childishness which will creep out under strain. Nine tenths of the picture's sympathy is his. The boy has a great future.

An equally serious piece of acting, if one that is certain to prove less popular from the fan's viewpoint, is accomplished by Sigrid Holmquist in Essie Birdsong, the weaker-minded sister, deluded by the dazzle of her first love affair. Thank fortune in this character we enjoy an illiterate screen youngster undisturbed by superfluous amounts of beauty or the luxurious manners of our best

Where to Find People You Know

STERLING PLAYERS SUPPORT GUY BATES POST IN "THE MASQUERADER"

Supporting Guy Bates Post in "The Masquerader," which marks his film debut and also the first screen offering of Richard Walton Tully—to be distributed through First National—is a cast of exceptional merit, fully up to the statement of the personnel of this star's and this producer's stage companies. The film is being directed by James Young, whose most recent post was with Katherine MacDonald on "The Infidel," a forthcoming First National release. Wilfred Buckland is the art director of "The Masquerader;" he will be remembered as the first man in the industry to hold such a position and as the leader in his field today as well. George Benoit, a verteran cinematographer, with a rich experience in France and this country, is at the camera.

Edward M. Kimball portrays Brook, the aged and devoted valet to Chilcote, one of the two characters played by the star. Kimball's wide film experience amply fits him for this important role. Herbert Standing, another veteran of stage and screen, soon to be seen in Mack Sennett's second dramatic offering, "For Love of Money," plays Herbert Fraide in "The Masquerader. Lawson Butt, especially remembered for his sympathetic performance in "The Miracle Man," will be seen as Mr. Lakely, a newspaper publisher. Kenneth Gibson will create the film characterization of Bobby Blessington, Chilcote's faithful secretary.

The women in the cast present names of equal prominence on the screen. Eve, Chilcote's wife, will be portrayed by Ruth Sinclair. The role of Lady Astrupp, the vampire of the story, has been entrusted to Marcia Manon, whose recent performance in "Ladies Must Live," was a memorable contribution. Robins, the devoted landlady of the boarding house where lives Lodor—the other character portrayed by Guy Bates Post —will be played by Barbara Tennant, the well-remembered star of Eclair and World Film days.

The story of "The Masquerader" treats of the substitution of one John Loder, an ambitious and earnest newspaper writer for his distant cousin, Chilcote, the leader in the House of Parliament, who has allowed the morphine habit to drag him down to the lowest stages of depravity. As will be remembered by who have seen the stage play and who have read the original novel, the story affords many opportunities for lavish production as well as highly dramatic acting, not only in the stellar roles but throughout the personnel of the cast.

PARAGON PREVIEW

A preview of Paragon Productions current picture was held Wednesday evening at the Glendale theatre. Jack Richardson, formerly of the Sennett studio, is being starred in Paragon's present series which is being directed by Bruce Mitchell. The company is producing at Universal City.

CADMAN WITHHOLDS MUSIC FOR RUBAIYAT FILM

New and unusual complications were injected into the legal controversey over Ferdinand Earle's film version of "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam" when Charles Wakefield Cadman, composer, who wrote music to accompany the photodrama recently received a registered letter from The Rubaiyat, Inc., demanding that he turn the music over to the company. Mr. Cadman indicated that he will refuse to comply.

This stand was taken by Mr. Cadman on the eve of the premiere performance of his oriental rhapsody, "Omar Khayyam," by the Philharmonic orchestra in Los Angeles. The composition will be withheld from theatrical performance until the suit now pending in Federal court over the Rubaiyat film is settled.

"I wrote special music for Mr. Earle's production of 'The Rubaiyat,' and I do not want it played with any mutilated version of the story," said Mr. Cadman. Mr. Cadman's music for "The Rubaiyat" is protected by six copyrights covering themes he composed for the film story produced by Mr. Earle.

Recently a group of stockholders, disagreeing with Mr. Earle over editing the film, seized several reels of it. Mr. Earle retains 15,000 feet of negative film that they overlooked and consequently has warned the film trade that an attempt may be made to market the film in uncompleted form. A New York preview of this picture has been announced for tonight.

CHRISTIE RECIPE FOR GOOD COMEDIES

Al Christie, who is producing the two-reel Christie Comedies for Educational's program of short pictures for the whole family, has set up an ideal for his staff in making his comedy films which takes hard work to live up to.

"I want to preach the doctrine of DO rather than listing a lot of disagreeable DONT'S," said Christie in discussing the difficulty of evolving humorous situations for the camera to record. "Don't rules are generally made to be broken, and I hate rules around our studio, anyway. I would rather set up a standard of things to try to do. Here is this standard for the two-reel comedies:

"1.—Get a plausible story which might happen to real people. It may be worked out farcically or in regular dramatic and logical sequence. But it must be entertaining.

"2.—All the actors must look like human beings whom one might meet in every-day life.

"3,—Take your time. It is not how many pictures you make but how good they are that counts. This advice is particularly for directors.

"4.—If you are torn between sticking to the story or going afield for a laugh, stick to the story. If the story is amusing, the chuckles will take care of themselves.

"5.—Make the backgrounds as beautiful as you can. Few people will notice the expensive rug on the floor, but they will notice it if the floor were bare.

"6.—Try to take your part without trying to be funny.

"7.—Try to seem to enjoy your work. If you don't enjoy it, find other work.

"8.—Make your pictures for your family. The majority of the people who see them in theatres are just about like your own wife and kiddies."

W. S. Smith, general manager of the Vitagraph studios, has returned from a week's rest at his ranch near Colton.

"Buddy," sixteen-year-old brother of Marguerite De La Motte, J. L. Frothingham star, is spending a few days with his sister at her Hollywood home.

Gale Henry recently completed an important role in "The Noble Cow Person," starring Jack Richardson for Paragon Productions.

GERMAN NOTES

According to Prague statistics, Germany furnishes 61 per cent of films for the Czecho-Slovak cinema theatres.

The distinguished Berlin film journalist and advertising expert, Arthur Mellini, died, 45 years old.

The well-known Italian film actor Maciste was engaged by Director Jacob Karol to appear in a series of German films.

The cinema theatres in Frankfort-on-Main having been closed six weeks as a demonstration of protest against the amusement tax, they were reopened on August 18th.

An agreement was concluded between the German and Italian governments whereby both countries may mutually facilitate the importation of certain goods, among these, the film.

The Coal Commissioner for Greater Berlin has consented to an increase of the electric current contingent allowed to the motion picture theatres, from 3 5to 80 per cent of the 1916 consumption.

The increase of duties provided in the contemplated financial reform for Germany will also embrace the importation of films. It is intended to raise the import duty, now amounting to 200 mark pro kilogramm, by doubling this amount, and in addition the corresponding gold premium will be levied.

ROY STEWART JOINS THE NATIVES

That all motion picture people do not claim the East as their native habitat is evidenced by a perusal of the membership roll of Ramona Parlor No. 109, Native Sons of the Golden West.

The following members of the profession, who are acting as committeemen for the big membership drive which Ramona Parlor has under way, first saw the light of day within the confines of California, the land of sunshine, fruit and flowers plus the animated celluloid:

Trotwood D. Crittenden, actor, Ince Studios.

Alfred L. Gilks, cameraman, Lasky's.

Eddie P. Coffey, assistant cameraman, Lasky's.

Bert C. Lynch, assistant cameraman, Lasky's.

Frank E. Lowry, director and producer.

Charles J. Marley, Exchange manager, Vitagraph.

Sam W. Whitehead, assistant Exchange manager, Vitagraph.

A. K. Beockmann, mechanical department, Universal.

Robt. E. Marley, laboratory man, Ince Studios.

Roy Stewart, who is now starring under the banner of the Western Pictures Exploitation Co., was born in San Diego and recently gave the bucking bronco the go-by and straddled the grizzly bear at Ramona Parlor and is now a full-fledged Native Son of the Golden West and sports the Bear Flag pin on his coat lapel.

The membership drive committee informs the Camera! that it invites all eligible Native Sons to attend the next dance which will be held at its club rooms presently and which will be interpretated in the good old Western way—no expense or war tax added.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice June announce the engagement of their daughter, Mildred, to Edward Capps, D.D.S. Miss June has the leading feminine role in support of Billy Bevan, one of the newest stars of the Mack Sennett organization.

Current Reviews

ingenues upon all occasions. Miss Holmquist makes Essie the real thing, that most pathetic of all things, an unknowing girl creature.

And the cleverness of the cast does not end here, for Edward Phillips, a stranger to us, offers one of the finest-thought-out, young, devil-may-care rounders that it has ever been our privilege to witness. Without exaggeration he makes Joe Ullman, "the classy" ticket-speculator, an accurate page from the life of misguided city youth. His action is so true that not one of the laughs to his credit is forced. Joe's soul is little and ugly, but even so you can't hate him for his life's environment is before you in every gesture. We shall see Phillips again to our great gratification.

Fred C. Thompson, Peggy Parr, Rosa Rozanova and William Nally are well established elsewhere in the picture.

"Just Around the Corner" is really deserving of a long run.

"THE IRON TRAIL"

California

Rex Beach Productions offers a screen version of the author's story, "The Iron Trail," through United Artists this week. The exploits of a young Irish railroad man against terrible opposition in Alaska are dwelt with chiefly in the play which is an entertaining melodrama of the old style. In it, as might be expected, the parts are played without characterization and the direction halts not to insert living touches. The suspense is let down slightly by the overdoing of it and because of surplus subtitles at a time when the whole needs snapping up, if anything. Nevertheless there are several real punches and a lot of fast action.

Wyndham Standing plays the Irish Prince characteristically, lending him considerable hero charm.

The feminine lead is done by Alma Tell who is not entirely easy on the screen, perhaps due to inexperience. Anyway as Eliza Appleton, a star reporter, she cuts a rather interesting figure.

Reginald Denny also plays a principal part in this picture which, was directed by R. Wm. Neill.

MAGNA CHARTA

Until screen authors and producers obtain a charter specifying and guaranteeing their privileges and rights, the great slaughter of unprotected motion picture dramas will go merrily on.

Some of us who are half artists and half fighters and who are ready to expend ninety per cent of our energy in order to win the freedom to devote the remaining ten per cent to creative work on the screen, manage to bring to birth a piteous, half-starved art progeny.

The creative artist today labors without the stimulus of a public eager for his product, labors without the artistic momentum that fires the artist's imagination and spurs his efforts as in any great art era.

Nowadays the taint of commercialism infects the seven arts, and the art pioneer meets with constant petty worries and handicaps.

Only once in a blue moon, in this matter-of-fact, dollar-wise age can the believer in better pictures hope to participate in a truely artistic treat.

In the seven years I have devoted to the screen, I have witnessed many splendid photodramas ruined by intruding upstarts and stubborn imbeciles. And I determined not to launch the production of my Opus No. 1 until I had adequately protected myself against all the usual evils of the way, especially as I was to make an entirely new type of picture.

In order that my film verison of the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam might be produced under ideal conditions and safeguarded from intolerable interferences and outside worries, I entered into a contract with the Rubaiyat, Inc., that made me not only president of the corporation and on the board of directors, but which set forth that I was to be author, production manager, director, cutter and film editor as well as art director, and that no charge could be made against the production without my written consent, and that my word was to be final on all matters of production. The late George Loane Tucker helped my attorney word the contract, which read like a splendid document.

Alas, I am now told that only by keeping title to a production until it is declared by yourself to be completed is it safe for a scenario writer, an actor or a director, who is supposedly making his own productions, to contract with a corporation; otherwise he is merely the servant of that corporation, subject at any moment to discharge, with the dubious redress of a suit for damages that can with difficulty be estimated and proven.

Can there be any hope of better pictures as long as contracts and copyrights are no protection against financial brigands and bullies?

We have scarcely emerged from barbarism, for contracts, solemnly drawn up between human beings, in which the purposes are set forth in the King's plainest English, serve only as hurdles over which justice-mocking financiers and their nimble attorneys travel with impunity, riding rough shod over the author or artist who cannot support a legal army to defend his rights. The phrase is passed about that no contract is invioliable—and yet we think we have reached a state of civilization!

The suit begun by my attorneys in the federal courts to prevent the present hashed and incomplete version of my story from being released and exhibited, may be of interest to screen writers. For the whole struggle revolves not in the slightest degree around the sanctity of the contract, but centers around the federal copyright of my story which I never transferred in writing or otherwise, and which is being brazenly ignored.

Imagine my production without pictorial titles; and imagine "The Rubaiyat" with a spoken title as follows, "That bird is getting to talk too much!"—beside some of the immortal quatrains of Fitzgerald!

One weapon, fortunately, remains for the militant art creator, when all is gone save his dignity and his sense of humor; and that is the rapier blade of ridicule, that can send lumbering to his retreat the most brutal and elephant-hided lord of finance.

How edifying—the tableau of the man of millions playing legal pranks upon men such as Charles Wakefield Cadman, Edward S. Curtis and myself and others who were associated in the bloody venture of picturizing the Rubaiyat! It has been gratifying to find the press of the whole country ready to champion the artist's cause.

When the artist forges his plowshare into a sword, so to speak, he does not always put up a mean fight.

What publisher would dare to rewrite a sonnet of John Keats or alter one chord of a Chopin ballade?

Creative art of a high order will become possible on the screen only when the rights of established, independent screen producers, such as Rex Ingram and Maurice Tourneur, are no longer interferred with and their work no longer mutilated or changed or added to by vandal hands. And art dramas, conceived and executed by masters of screen craft, cannot be turned out like sausages made by factory hands. A flavor of individuality and distinction of style cannot be preserved in machine-made melodramas—a drama that is passed from hand to hand and concocted by patch-workers and tinkerers.

A thousand times no! For it will always be cousin to the sausage, and be like all other—sausages.

The scenes of a master's drama may have a subtle pictorial continuity and a power of suggestion quite like a melody that is lost when just one note is changed. And the public is the only test of what is eternally true or false. What right have two or three people to deprive millions of art lovers of enjoying an artist's creation as it emerged from his workshop?

"The Rubaiyat" was my first picture and produced in spite of continual and infernal interferences. It has taught me several sad lessons, which I have endeavored in the above paragraphs to pass on to some of my fellow sufferers. It is the hope that I am fighting, to a certain extent, their battle that has given me the courage to continue, and that has prompted me to write this article. May such hubbubs eventually teach or inforce a decent regard for the rights of authors and directors and tend to make the existence of screen artisans more secure and soothing to the nerves.

FERDINAND EARLE.

Jack Ford, Fox director, is back in New York from a trip abroad.

Walter du Courcy and Mrs. de Courcy are being congratulated upon the birth of a son named Walter Edwin de Courcy, Jr.

During the recent fire which threatened to destroy his dressing room, Antonio Moreno, Vitagraph star, suffered some slight burns on the hand.

Pola Negri comes to the Grauman Million Dollar Theatre Monday, Jan. 16th, in "The Last Payment," a Paramount photoplay written by John Brennert and George Jacoby.

Milano Tilden, formerly stage manager for Guy Bates Post, is acting in a similar capacity with "The Masquerader" company at United Studios.

Why Studios "Close Down"

It is both notable and significant that most of the studios which have NOT "closed down" during the last year have been regular clients of the Photoplay Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Four years ago we expressed the opinion that producers who consistently select their plays because of their intrinsic screenability, rather than because of their "literary" value, were destined to achieve and maintain financial success.

And now, four years later, we hold tenaciously and justifiably to the same opinion.

Nor have the producers who have regularly come to Story Headquarters for their stories had occasion to differ from that opinion. They have been too busy making good pictures for a market that is starving for good pictures to entertain the thought of "closing down."

It is not the policy of the Palmer Sales Department to urge the purchase of one story at a high price (just to make a sale), but rather to endeavor to select material that will make for continuous successful production.

Hide and Seek

We may only suppose that the somewhat hysterical controversy in which the exhibitors' trade papers have lately been indulging with regard to their own and their rivals' circulation has been brought about by the desire of each one for the gain which it figures should be forthcoming in the way of additional producer-advertising, after it has vanquished all competitors with proof of its own superior scope and the other fellows' intent to misrepresent.

It appears, however, that the elements concerned in the situation are working somewhat unintelligently in circles since the average, long-suffering producer meanwhile doesn't care a particle about any phase of the argument, but in his haste and ignorance he continues to lavishly contract for an insert on his current productions in each publication that the ground may be entirely covered from his angle. However, if his were the time to investigate the matter he would discover as we have, that not one exhibitor in fifty ever books a picture from a trade magazine anyway, and that while the psychology of such publicity is good from several considerations, the idea that he must be represented in every periodical of the type is foolishly wasteful. He would further learn upon inquiry that ironically enough, while it has been his own lack of perception, during late months, that has kept twice as many exhibitors' papers in existence as are either necessary or practicable, the fact that the showmen disregard his advertising in them today is also his responsibility.

The small town theatre managers know from bitter experience that the "punker the picture the more attractive and excessive" the publicity spread through these media by many picture makers. Why, therefore, should they be taken in by purchased description of pictures whose drawing power is otherwise questionable? According to the opinion of a dozen such men operating houses in and about Los Angeles, the press sheet is the thing. They can tell from the stills, the cast and the story contained in it whether or not a given film will appeal to their audiences and in their own small ways they are nearly as busy as the photoplay magnate, finding as few moments as himself to devote to vivid magazine spreads.

We intend no particular moral here, having expressed only an accumulation of attitudes picked up at random. It seems to us, however, that the whole game is one of hide and seek with only the exhibitor safely under cover.

A Fighter

An article syndicated in the trade magazines last week stated that Nate Watt, a local film man had filed suit to prevent Universal from using Louis Victor Eytinge's scenario, "Peterman," in which that company is starring Herbert Rawlinson. Watt claimed that Eytinge, an inmate of the Arizona State Prison, had previously turned the story over to him. Below, Mr. Eytinge, our very good friend, explains the entire circumstance.

"When here in December 1919, Nate Watt had asked some of us to let him take a couple of our stories to Los Angeles. Jack Van Riter gave him 'Turn For the Worst' and I handed him an old short story of mine titled 'Jack Gilbert, Peterman.' In January 1920, Watt secured permission to handle this story, the authorization reading 'As my agent and associate.' Failure to reply to any of four letters sent him, two in January, one in March and one in November 1920, disgusted me—the last of these letters having been a demand for return of the story and cancellation of his agency. 'Peterman,' as sold to Universal, was not conceived nor written until July-August of 1921.

" 'Jack Gilbert,' as turned over to Watt, was written and published in 1907 and the publishers, at my request, have authorized Universal to use any incidents it desires in connection with 'Peterman,' an entirely different story.

"Nate Watt never paid one cent for any story—never replied to my letters—nor did he show a similar courtesy to Van Riter and now he wants to cut in on a slice of easy money.

"But—Judge Bledsoe fooled him, for he threw the Watt petition out of court, but did give him permission to file an amended complaint. He hasn't done so yet—I hope he does, for then some folks will find out that even a convict can fight and fight damned hard. Pinckney wasn't the only chap to yell 'Millions for Defense, but not one copper cent for tribute'—or—may one say 'Blackmail' Had I not met so many better folks in the movie world, my experience with Watt would have sufficiently disgusted me."

Film Capital Production Notes

ENTER KLUMB PRODUCTIONS

The filming of "The Desert of the Damned," written by Bert D. Essex for the newly incorporated Roy H. Klumb Productions, will be started on or about February 1st, and will be a seven-reel special in which an all-star cast will appear. Interior scenes will be made at Universal City and the exteriors will be "shot" on the Mojave Desert. It is expected that two months will be required to complete this film.

In the organizing of this new production company, Mr. Klumb worked in affiliation with Edward T. Schoetzer, a Chicago manufacturer, who heads a group of business men of that city in financing this project.

The producing activities will not be confined to special features alone. Starting simultaneous with "The Desert of the Damned" company will be a second unit making a two-reel comedy drama, entitled "Peace in Pieces," in which will be starred Mr. and Mrs. Harry Todd, remembered for their starring work in the Snakeville series of comedies made by Essanay several years ago. This picture will be directed by Murdock MacQuarrie, and will be followed by a series of similar Todd vehicles.

In harmony with the Klumb policy of pursuing somewhat different trails in the picture sphere, this concern is forming a releasing organization of its own, establishing offices in all the key cities of the United States and Canada, through which it will furnish complete programs to exhibitors. Walter Caughlin has been appointed as manager of the sales department.

"FOOLS FIRST" TO START PRESENTLY

Marshall Neilan has purchased the right to Hugh MacNair Kahler's "Fools First," which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, and will use this plot as the basis for his next First National picture following the release of "Penrod."

By arrangement with Marion Fairfax, who has been responsible for many Neilan scenarios, this author-producer will write the scenario; Frank O'Connor is to collaborate with Mr. Neilan on direction.

ELECT OFFICERS

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Hal E. Roach Film Laboratories, Inc., was held this week at the studios. All films for the company are now handled by the studio laboratories, with Charles Levin in charge. Following are the officers elected for the coming year: Walter Lundin, president; Charles Parrott, vice-president and J. L. Murphy, who will attend to the business of the laboratory in connection with the purchasing department of which he has charge.

NEW COMPANY TO MAKE COMEDIES

A new company with R. V. Quick as president and Dick Johnson as vice-president, has been formed and will start filming presently a series of twelve two-reel comedies at the Bernstein Studios, which has been leased for the purpose.

William Scott is cast in Charles Ray's forthcoming comedy drama for First National as yet untitled.

CHAPLIN REISSUES

The first comedies made by Charles Chaplin for First National are to be revived. February 6th, "A Dog's Life"; March 6th, "Sunnyside"; April 3rd, "Shoulder Arms," and May 1st, "A Day's Pleasure."

AT UNIVERSAL

The Arroyo Seco and surrounding territory is being used in filming sequences for the historical serial, "With Stanley in Africa," featuring George Walsh.

"Both Booths" is the name of the current comedy film being directed by Craig Hutchinson.

COSMOPOLITAN REORGANIZATION

William Le Baron has been advanced from Scenario editor to director-general of production for Cosmopolitan Productions and Verne H. Porter, editor of Cosmopolitan magazine since 1918, has been appointed scenario editor. Howard Irving Young has been named film editor.

There will be a production board composed of Messrs. Le Baron, Porter, Joseph Urban and William Sistrom, and also an editing board. H. P. Carver continues as general manager.

Harry Burns started recently at the Morris R. Schlank Studios on the third of a series of comedies, in which Little Napoleon, chimpanzee, is starred.

Current Reviews

"DISRAELI"

Mission

"Disraeli" has come to the screen as "Disraeli" at the hands of George Arliss could only come, naturally, charmingly, majestically. Surrounded by everything to be desired in the way of background, support and scenario situation, he is as though alone an immortal, commanding figure exquisitely chiseled by Mr. Arliss' finest art. England's shrewd, far-visioned but always human Jewish statesman, the big spirited hero of Louis Parker's play, is the cleanest cut character yet brought to the celluloid by this peerless actor who, as we all know, is responsible for the original creation of the role upon the stage. To say that Arliss' work is superb would seem superfluous; perhaps to review him at all is superfluous for there is little left to say of the man who can thrill with the slightest gesture, who has attained the ultimate in his art, while never drifting beyond the understandings of all who love the beautiful.

Nevertheless, it remains to be further remarked that Mr. Arliss' current effort has been given an entirely satisfying production from all angles.

Particularly indicative of much capability is the direction of Henry Kolker, which executes Forrest Halsey's technically correct and pleasing continuity with real cleverness. Harry Fishbeck's camerawork is without exception completely laudable.

An ideal cast appears in the photoplay's other well-known and loved situations.

Mrs. George Arliss fills her old position, Lady Beaconsfield, with her own quaint grace and wholesome manner; and Louise Huff, that adored little ingenue of several years back, as winsomely youthful as ever, but with more pronounced poise, makes of Clarissa a bit of lovely, living Dresden china.

Reginald Denny is completely at home in the Victorean Viscount Deeford, a more picturesque role than he has often been assigned and one that is better played, by the way, while Margaret Dale must be credited with some well put over little subtleties of her own as Mrs. Noel Travers, the self confident adventuress who seeks the Suez for Russia.

E. J. Ratcliffe, Frank Losee, Henry Carvill, Grace Griswold and Noel Tearle complete the list of players appearing in "Disraeli." This picture, rich in every photoplay requisite, is a United Artists' release.

"THE LOTUS EATER"

Kinema

A picture team composed of Marshall Neilan and John Barrymore would prove insurance to the box office success of any production as, without doubt, the minds responsible for the screening of "The Lotus Eater," First National's current release, well knew when arrangements were negotiated for the direction of the cinema's heralded artist by its most sensational producer. Not only the public but the entire picture profession has been eager to witness the result of this combination, the more because of the fact that the Albert Payson Terhune story chosen as adequate material to engage the time of these foremost figures, as first written, contains but one situation through which all of its drama and its exceedingly abbreviated comedy are but subtly suggested rather than frankly disclosed. It was therefore plain to all that much additional matter would be required to extend "The Lotus Eater" into a long reel subject. Hardly, however, would we have considered anyone anywhere equal to the liberties which have been taken with this clever literary effort of Mr. Terhune. Commencing with an entirely imaginary sequence based upon nothing in the original, the play switches every few minutes from the dramatic to the most ridiculous of slapstick entirely eliminating the fundamentals of the story, besides adding various characters and changing the attitudes of the others at will. Marion Fairfax's scenario, while quite amusing in places, contains nothing of drama, nothing of Terhune and, in jumping from one element to another with unwarranted speed, accomplishes a somewhat botched effect. There isn't a question but that the surprisingly inserted slapstick is Mr. Neilan's contribution to "The Lotus Eater" for it has noticeably marked many of his later offerings but the psychology of "Go and Get It" is not that of this photoplay, so that what were "kicks" in it are slaps or else near outrages in the present subject. Nevertheless, as a picture, "The Lotus Eater" may prove entertaining generally or at least in some of its aspects, which achievement is largely conceded to be the main consideration.

JACK STRUMWASSER

The technical effects are well handled, while the photography by David Kesson varies from the superlatively artistic in the case of the island exteriors to the mediocre in the first reel or so.

Barrymore is his comedy self as Jacques Lenoi, a rather unheroic young Frenchman who is not eventually protected from the female of the species because she is concealed from him until he is twenty-five. Barrymore is always to be appreciated and enjoyed, but he moves somewhat jerkily for the camera here, a slightly detracting item, and does not otherwise entirely convince of his interest in the part. We prefer him in real drama.

Colleen Moore has a simply appealing little ingenue to offer, Mavis, an island dweler; and Anna Q. Nilsson is ideal in Madge Vance, the heavy, whom Terhune far from intended as such.

John Carson is a regulation J. Barney Sherry piece of opposition, more present than startling, while Frank Currier as the Dean, and Wesley Barry in Jocko, are good touches.

Ida Waterman completes the cast of this production.

"GRAND LARCENY"

California

Albert Payson Terhune is being much screened these days which is odd when one considers the radical revisions which he is forced to endure during the process. It would almost seem that, if a man's story were desirable for filming, at least it would be adapted with sufficient accuracy to retain his characters' original motivations, even if the developments proved a little extreme. What we greatly suspect, however, is that it is the name, rather than the work of Terhune which is being purchased by producers. Still there is mystery to an extent, for a valuable name implies popularity and that in this case would surely mean the world's recommendation of the stories which our scenarists are studiously conventionalizing either through fear of their daring or through unpleasant habit which has created the dastardly villains, theatrically uncompromising heroes and unwaveringly virtuous heroines, today recognized as almost impregnable screen standards.

"Grand Larceny," Goldwyn's current release, however, has not been quite so badly mutilated as the above might lead one to believe, for outside of justifying a woman whom the author had no intention of justifying and villainizing the perfectly human third corner of his triangle, the filmplay with particular regard to its effective titles, has been interpreted with fair consistency. In any event it makes an entertaining problem picture which is a big issue.

Wallace Worsley's direction takes all possible advantage of the points provided in Bess Meredith's technically satisfactory scenario and Ernie Miller's photography is all that could be desired by the most exacting.

In Kathleen Annixter, the leading feminine portrayal, Claire Windsor appears to good advantage proving herself better directed than usual. She also has a more noticeable ease in this role than has often times marked her work.

Elliott Dexter as Annixter, Kathleen's first husband, gives a characteristically strong performance which will delight his large following, while Lowell Sherman in the other man, or Annixter's successor in the life of his wife, competently handles each detail as it presents itself.

A clever piece of comedy-relief is the responsibility of Roy Atwell, who plays an amusing "safe chaperone."

"Grand Larceny" has been given a rather elaborate production and should prove a very fair attraction.

"Three Live Ghosts," a George Fitzmaurice production for Paramount, presented by Adolph Zukor, opens at the Grauman Million Dollar Theatre, Monday, January 23.

Lambert, president of the recently organized National Motion Pictures Finance Corporation, a company formed to aid the independent star and producer in making pictures in Los Angeles.

Charles Ray, Associated First National star, told of his recent trip to New York, and Richard Willis, his general manager, formerly a publicity man, told of the strides made in photoplay exploitation within the last decade.

The report of the nominating committee offered as candidates for officers for the coming year Arch Reeve, of Lasky Studios, for president; Peter Gridley Smith, Marshall Neilan Studios, Vice-President; Harry Ham mond Beall, Benjamin B. Hampton Productions, Secretary; Malcolm Stuart Boylan, Universal City, treasurer. Ten other members were nominated for the board of directors, five of which will be elected.

A cable tramway for airplanes is being constructed at the Hal E. Roach Studios that is 150 feet high and 200 feet long, with capacity to carry a weight of over six tons. Two biplanes, that are practical, are now being built at the Studios, each large enough to carry six passengers. The planes are being built for use by the various comedy companies and will be completed in about two weeks.

BARBARA BEDFORD

FROTHINGHAM STARS ESTABLISH RECORD

To have a total of seven consecutive productions in which they appear for various producers released by the same motion picture distributing company during a period of twelve months, is the distinction of Marguerite de la Motte and Marcia Manon, artists under the management of J. L. Frothingham, the producer. The former star but recently finished work in "Shattered Idols," a Frothingham special, and is now under contract to make three consecutive pictures for Thomas H. Ince. Miss Manon has finished work in an Ince production, "Skin Deep," and in a Frothingham special, "The Man Who Smiled," and is now essaying a role in "The Masquerader," for Richard Walton Tully.

"THE GLORIOUS ADVENTURE" AS FICTION

"The Glorious Adventure," the natural color film play produced by Mr. J. Stuart Blackton, with Lady Diana Manners and an all-star British cast, has been made into a serial story and also a novel by Felix Orman, Literary Director of the Blackton Productions and author of the scenario.

The first installment of the story appears in the January issue of "The Picturegoer," and the novel is to be issued by Cecil Palmer, in a volume illustrated with twenty-four scenes from the film play, about the time that this production is shown at the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden. Before coming to England, Mr. Orman had long been identified with theatre and motion picture activities in America, and had been associated with various magazines, including "The Outlook." He was at one time Literary Director of the Periodical Publishers' Association of America.

HAS NEVER MISSED A PERFORMANCE

The actor who adds to distinguished artistry a record for reliability will carry off the victor's palm on the stage, as in every other walk of life. Since he opened in "The Masquerader," more than six years ago, Guy Bates Post has never missed a performance, and his characterization of the difficult dual leading roles in that stage classic has been uniformly of the highest excellence.

RECITAL PLEASES

Ryus, piano, and Brahm von den Berg, are among the featured stars of the cinema and opera who furnished the major portion of the first of a series of four monthly twilight recitals given Sunday afternoon in the Glendale theater in aid of the organ fund of the new Holy Family church of Glendale.

AT LASKY'S

William de Mille is still preparing "Bought and Paid For," his forthcoming production of George Broadhurst's play, which was adapted by Clara Beranger. Agnes Ayres and Jack Holt will play the leading roles.

January 30th is the date set, approximately, for the start of Agnes Ayres' new star picture, "The Ordeal," by W. Somerset Maugham, adapted by Beulah Marie Dix. This will be a William D. Taylor production and he is now arranging for his sets, cast and other matters.

May McAvoy is taking advantage of a present between picture vacation to gather wardrobe necessities for coming productions.

Paul Powell is nearly through with "Tharon of Lost Valley," with Dorothy Dalton. The company has been away on location for a great deal of the time on this picture.

Jack Holt starts presently on a new star picture under the direction of Joseph Henabery. This will be "Val of Paradise," by Vingie E. Roe, adapted by Will M. Ritchey.

MICKEY DANIELS

CAMPAIGN TO COMBAT FLAYING OF FILM COLONY

A propaganda campaign to combat magazine and newspaper articles, which have carelessly or maliciously attempted to paint Hollywood as a modern Babylon with a touch of Sodom and Gomorrah thrown in, will be launched jointly by the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, the Motion Picture Producers Association, and the Screen Writers' Guild, if the plan proposed recently by B. B. Hampton at a get-together session of film representatives and Hollywood business men is carried out. Frank E. Woods, supervisor of production at Lasky's, spoke for the Screen Writers' Guild of which he is present, while Wedgewood Nowell, who was chairman of the meeting, spoke for the photoplayers.

RECENT PATHE RELEASES

Late Pathe releases are: "The Midnight Stage," starring Frank Keenan, of the new series of Pathe Playlets.

Review No. 140 current issue of the screen magazine.

"The Clash of the Clans," fifth episode of the new Pathe serial, "White Eagle," starring Ruth Roland.

"Years to Come," Hal Roach comedy, featuring "Snub" Pollard.

"She Loves Me Not," latest re-issued one-reel comedy, starring Harold Lloyd.

STUDIO DEAL CONSUMMATED

The old Griffith Studios, the birthplace of "The Birth of a Nation," "Broken Blossoms," "Daddy Long Legs," and "Kismet" and well known for the number of present film stars who appeared in their first film productions at this studio, has recently been sold by the Triangle Film Corporation of New York to the Fine Arts Studios, Inc., of California—incorporated for $100,000, which will operate as a leasing studio.

The officers of the new corporation are Nat Deverich, president; Andrew D. W. Reid, vice-president and John Rikkelman, secretary and treasurer, all of whom have been affiliated with the film industry many years. Mr. Deverich has been associated with the Pickford interests, Marshall Neilan Productions and Famous Players-Lasky for the past ten years and also has directed independent pictures. Mr. Reid was D. W. Griffith's illuminating engineer for six years, having to his credit the lighting of "Broken Blossoms," "Intolerance" and "Way Down East." Mr. Rikkelman was connected with the Griffith Laboratories both in California and in the East.

Work has already been started on improvements under the direction of Ralph De Lacy, technical man and art director, who erected and dressed the sets in "The Connecticut Yankee" and "The Count of Monte Cristo."

The studio includes a large and complete wardrobe which has been thoroughly renovated under the direction of Margaret Whistler, who costumed "The Queen of Sheba" and "The Connecticut Yankee." This wardrobe is being operated on a rental basis for the film industry of the city as well as giving special attention to the companies leasing space at the studio.

The office and accounting is under the direction of C. H. Olsen.

The studio has purchased new lighting equipment, which together with the direct current supplied assures photographic results.

The laboratory situated on the studio grounds and included in the purchase has been leased to the Chester Bennett Laboratories, under the office management of Rex Hodges with the laboratory in charge of Abe Sholtz.

Already operating on the lot are the Campbell Comedies, making kid and animal pictures on an Educational Release and the Protean Arts, making short subject specialties. The Ralph Graves Company is also contemplating an immediate start on this lot.

FINEMAN, BURR AND ZIEDMAN JOIN FORCES

Another new company has made its bow, including three old-timers in the business, who have joined forces to make pictures. They are Bernard Fineman, who recently sold his rights in the Katherine MacDonald company, Charles Burr, president of Affiliated Distributors, and Bennie Ziedman, formerly associated with Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks. The new company will be called the Edwin Carewe Pictures Corporation, and all productions will be made on the West Coast.

"Hell's Highway," a Northwest Mounted Police story, will serve as the first vehicle for the new organization.

Jeanie MacPherson, who is in New York vacationing, was at the recent opening of "Foolish Wives," Von Stroheim's biggest Universal special.

The Man on The Cover---An Impression

By Ted LeBerthon

What public personality has exerted the widest influence upon our national life in the past five years, has left the deepest imprint of his being in the foregrounds of our consciousness? If this question were propounded in the class-room, the answers would probably be many and varied. Wilson, Hoover, Pershing; Irvin Cobb, Booth Tarkington, Rupert Hughes; D. W. Griffith, Thomas Edison, Henry Ford; all these could be suggested, but I believe their adherents would be mistaken, owing to a predisposition toward political, literary, theatrical, or inventive figures.

I believe that motion picture players repeatedly featured in roles which emphasized some such salient characteristic as courage, agility, wit, or wholesomeness, influence most profoundly our national ideas of ethics and conduct. Wilson, or Tarkington, or Ford are known, respected and felt through their achievements, but such cinema stars as William S. Hart, Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, and Charles Ray are known and felt far more intimately—through their cinema selves their every gesture, every fleeting mood, every idiosyncrasy, every distinctive characteristic become common knowledge.

After thoughtful consideration, I have come to the conclusion that Charles Ray is not only most representatively and typically American, but that his personality is etched deeper in our hearts than that of any other public figure. To me, he stands for that substantial something which Walt Whitman sang of and which Carl Sandburg sings of, and can no more be thought away than a mountain can be thought away.

Charles Ray is not the screen's most romantic figure; to womankind he is more the eternal husband than the eternal lover. In him are not the fulgurous, magnificent sweeps of color that invite swift, ephemeral and therefore tragic romance, but the protective and comforting spirit of a good, strong tree with friendly branches. He is earnestly, exactingly sincere; while every Don Juan is intrinsically a liar. Our friend Ray in his pictures needs backgrounds of endless, undulent hills, of warm, luminous skies, of trees, meadowlands and grasses; his spirit is too large and expansive for confinement within drawing room walls and too hardy and elemental to exist within the aura of equivocal meanings and dainty distinctions.

Gold is deemed the most precious of metals because of its rarity. Charles Ray appeals to most of us because he is essentially different from most of us. The texture of his ego has sternly resisted any despoiling o fits substance; I do not believe his heart will or can dance to any fiddler's calling. The voice of things wanton and sinister cannot penetrate to his sanctuary, if I have interpreted aright the emanations of his spirit as it guided thought and emotion across the silver screen. There are some men and women who can do no conscious wrong, whether they will or not; no matter what ratiocination is indulged in, the soul frowns and forbids from its citadel.

Charles Ray's popularity will persist long after our Reids and Moores and Valentinos are forgotten ;he will always be the last and truest lover, whose awkward arms are open to sister, mother, or sweetheart alike. He will be beloved by youngsters and grownups and old folks. There is that surety and dogged sincerity that will always invite trust, belief and a welcome into the heart of the family—a welcome that is sometimes withheld or grudgingly given the gorgeous youth with roving eyes of molten gold, Grecian profile, insinuating presence.

I met him a couple of years ago in the office of Sid Grauman, the cinema magnifico. He was faultlessly attired in clothes of fashionable cut. The conversation I forget, but I remember that he was quietly positive.

In Los Angeles one sees him at symphonies, operas, plays, football games and automobile races. His automobiles seem to me a trifle gaudy, and I imagine that he probably invites such an ornate touch to indicate his fellowship with the motion picture colony. I understand that he is a serious and persistent reader.

No amount of contacts, no cultivation of sophistication, will ever change Ray, if I guess right. I don't believe he could ever change himself. Were he to dress like John Drew and become a frequenter of lobster palaces, midnight frolics and noisome joy-rides, I am sure his soul would retain the austerity of the great plains and the impregnability and inaccessability of lonely mountains.

His sheer cleanness and wholesomeness are unmatched by any other figure on the stage or screen. As Time passes, and he grows older, will anyone take his place? I doubt it; his particular niche may remain forever unfilled. When his guileless, whimsical, mother's boy personality fades into middle age, and newer idols are being worshipped and other exemplars of youth and freshness arrest the attention of capricious humanity, and some of us are much older, we will sometime vividly recall the presence that is the Charles Ray of today—as sometimes in deepest dreams we encounter those we will never again see in the hours when we are awake.

WHEN it is possible to adapt the time-tried policies of yesterday to the demands of modern usage the result is always highly satisfactory.

On the sound principles and policies which the early Californians associated inseparably with the name "Hellman" has been built this modern bank which in strength, service, and convenience so well meets the demands of the Californians of today.

My Dear Friends,

Have been a busy little girl and as I am changing in my appearance thought I had better let you know.

My hair is longer as well as my legs—beg pardon, limbs, or rather twigs in my case. Anyway I am 56 inches tall.

Successfully yours,

POLLARD IN TWO REELERS

Harry "Snub" Pollard signed this week a five years' contract with Hal E. Roach, who will feature the comedian beginning February 15th, in two reel comedies. Mr. Pollard will start production next week of his 105th comedy. He has been associated with Hal Roach for the past five years.

Emmett King is handling an important role in "That Lass O'Lowrie," Priscilla Dean's latest photoplay for Universial.

Hugh Saxon has returned from an extended vaudeville tour through Northern California.

Contemporary Criticisms

"THREE LIVE GHOSTS"

"No question about what this picture will do. As a stage play it made a tremendous hit. A great many people have read the story. With exploiting to match the cleverly produced picture, an exhibitor would have to be pretty hopeless who couldn't coin money with "Three Live Ghosts." . . . . "The characters couldn't have been better chosen, several of the original members of the stage company being cast in important leading roles. Romance, laughs, and anti-climaxes are piled up right and left in the picture, assuring an avalanche of gold dollars at the box office."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Frederic S. Isham's big Broadway stage success, "Three Live Ghosts," shows improvement as an entertainment feature by its transformation into a photoplay by George Fitzmaurice. The adaptation was made by Ouida Bergere, and the clever manner in which she has injected new melodrama and motion picture lore, for the original dialogue, has added much to the picture."—Exhibitors Herald.

"An expert blending of delicious humor, a certain amount of drama and a good deal of human appeal, makes 'Three Live Ghosts' an entertainment that cannot fail to meet with general approval. But it is its natural and sparkling humor that is most responsible for putting the picture over with the bang it received, for instance, when the reviewer saw it in a crowded house in the Rivoli Theatre, where it played to good success for the week."—Moving Picture World.

"The popular play from the pen of Frederick S. Isham, which graced a Broadway theatre for many months, and was among the most favorably talked of dramas in 1921, will unquestionably score as emphatically a screen hit of 1922. It sets a precedent which promises improved pictures, if those which follow keep an even pace. . . . .

"The plot has not been kept intact, additional melodrama having obviously been injected because the original situation depended entirely upon dialogus. More fitting motion picture lore has been substituted which will not be apparent to those who did not see the original, and those who did will be bound to admit the necessity of the change. Indeed, in adapting "Three Live Ghosts," Ouida Bergere has done a work of which she may well be proud."—Motion Picture News.

"ACROSS THE DEADLINE"

"From a point of scenic value, 'Across the Deadline' is entitled to praise, in that the locale, the great Northwest, is interesting, the photography wonderfully beautiful and the atmosphere held distinct, throughout. Also, the star, Frank Mayo, does some splendid work, is good to look at and is deserving of a story which would give him sufficient range to show to advantage. For the story is neither new, novel or easy to take seriously."—Motion Picture News.

"For pictorial purposes, the middle of the street in a Western town, may serve effectively as the hard line between right and wrong, the churches on one side, the saloons on the other. Getting down to facts, however, the metaphor seems a bit far-fetched, when it is to unnaturally emphasize that wickedness cleaves to one side of the curb, and righteousness to the other, and one cannot cross without being defiled or reformed. . . . . There are some good climaxes, some attractive outdoor sets, including in particular, the waterfall, and there is a pleasing love story. . . . .

"The two leading roles are in the capable hands of Frank Mayo and Molly Malone. Some of their best work suffers an anti-climax, however, when the long, bookish subtitles are flashed on the screen, especially at dramatic moments, when the words should be short and direct."—Moving Picture World.

"For those who like virile tales of the wild west, where strong-minded, religious citizens are pitted against lawless, vengeful men, no better production could be recommended than "Across the Deadline." It is a story replete with tense dramatic incidents, some mystery and several strong climaxes. It was filmed for the most part amid beautiful pines and the western atmosphere is further carried out by sets representing a rough mining village.

"The role of John Kidder gives Frank Mayo plenty of opportunity to display his prowess with his fists and Molly Malone is a pleasing and pretty heroine. Russell Simpson has a particularly strong role as the father; Enoch Kidder, Joseph Swickard, William Marion, Frank Thorwold and Lydia Knott appear in the cast."—Exhibitors Herald.

"HAIL THE WOMAN"

"'Hail the Woman' is built upon a theme that reaches in and grips both the mind and the heart and therefore the continuous attention of the average moving picture theatregoer. This theme is superbly interpreted in every department of production. And it is an argument—mind you, not a preachment nor a sermon—against one of the vital problems of the day: that of the double standard of morality. . . . .

"Written by C. Gardiner Sullivan, the story presents a vital human document. It is interpreted by a cast that performs brilliant work individually and perfect team play collectively, which guarantees tremendous effectively."—Moving Picture World.

"That Thomas H. Ince and C. Gardner Sullivan are unbeatable as a combination is proven in "Hail the Woman," which will be accepted as one of the really outstanding pictures of the year. Mr. Sullivan has long been recognized as a master writer of the photoplay. . . . .

"'Hail the Woman' is something of which he should feel highly proud. The same feeling should be expressed by John Griffith Wray, the director, and Mr. Ince, the supervisor."—Motion Picture News.

NEW VIDOR PICTURE

Florence Vidor has begun work upon "The Real Adventure," from Henry Kitchell Webster's novel.

Frank Hayes, Walter Perkins and H. Gordon Mullen have been chosen to enact roles in B. B. Hampton's "Golden Dreams," under production at United Studios.

PALMER PLAN OF PHOTOPLAY WRITING

Why Studios "Close Down"

It is both notable and significant that most of the studios which have NOT "closed down" during the last year have been regular clients of the Photoplay Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Four years ago we expressed the opinion that producers who consistently select their plays because of their intrinsic screenability, rather than because of their "literary" value, were destined to achieve and maintain financial success.

And now, four years later, we hold tenaciously and justifiably to the same opinion.

Nor have the producers who have regularly come to Story Headquarters for their stories had occasion to differ from that opinion. They have been too busy making good pictures for a market that is starving for good pictures to entertain the thought of "closing down."

It is not the policy of the Palmer Sales Department to urge the purchase of one story at a high price (just to make a sale), but rather to endeavor to select material that will make for continuous successful production.

LONDON TO HAVE SUPER-CINEMA

Published reports in New York reaching London state that Douglas Fairbanks has leased the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, and that beginning with "The Three Musketeers" an extended season of productions starring Mr. Fairbanks and his wife, Mary Pickford, will be inaugurated under Mr. Fairbanks' direction.

Such reports are stated to be incorrect. Walter F. Wanger, former general manager of the production department for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has taken over Covent Garden for a season, installed symphony orchestra under the direction of Eugene Goosens, and turned the historic London Opera House into a picture theater similar to those on Broadway in New York.

Mr. Wanger's policy will be to present only screen masterpieces. As his first attraction, he booked "The Three Musketeers." This will be followed by J. Stuart Blackton's photoplay in natural colors, "The Glorious Adventure," presenting Lady Diana Manners and an all-star cast, which has been a year in preparation.

Mr. Wanger, with his wife, Miss Justine Johnstone, the Realart Star, took up their residence in the British capital some months ago. Mr. Blackton and his family have been in London over a year, and most of that time Mr. Blackton has been working steadily on his first British production.

Londoners seem to have taken keenly to the idea of a super-cinema along the lines of the big picture houses in New York, and the newspapers have been enthusiastic in their reception of Mr. Wanger's experiment.

CHARACTERS WELL KNOWN

Health Commissioner Dr. Royal S. Copeland of New York City, recently refused to promote a film offered to him by a committee of women.

Mrs. Wood Allen Chaplin, chairman of the Motion Picture Committee of the Federation of Women's Clubs, and her colleagues, made the offer and showed the film in the commissioner's office.

Some of the principal characters of the film are the heart, the lungs, the liver and other organs. The continuity shows the progress of a drink of that brand of post-Volstead liquor known as "lillies" from the moment it enters the lips until the ambulance arrives.

It is understood that the film will be released independently of the big exchanges.

CAST IN HAMPTON'S NEXT

Madame Rose Dione, Babe London, Edith Ward and Audrey Chapman will be seen in important roles in "Golden Dreams," which Jean Hersholt, Gus Peterson and Dick Rush are directing for B. B. Hampton at United.

HARRIS BUSY

Wadsworth Harris is playing a part with Norma Talmadge at United, and has also been engaged to enact a part with the Guy Bates Post company at the same studio. Mr. Harris recently gave a dramatic and patriotic recital in Philharmonic Auditorium at the invitation of the Men's Club of Temple Baptist Church.

J. Frank Glendon has just been chosen for the leading masculine role opposite Marie Prevost in "Kisses," which King Baggot is directing at Universal.

DIRECTORS SUPPORT ACTORS IN HEAVY FOREIGN FILM TARIFF

Welcoming comparison of American motion pictures with foreign-made productions, but desiring to protect thousands of American workers from retrenchment policies of domestic producers, the Motion Picture Directors' Association through its director president, William D. Taylor, has wired the Senate Finance Committee urging that imports of foreign films be either limited in quantity or taxed on value, with volume and cost of film production in the United States as a basis.

The telegram filed by Mr. Taylor points out that motion pictures are being produced abroad far cheaper than they can be made here, and that producers are now establishing units or making affiliations abroad and are drastically cutting down domestic production. The eleven months ending May, 1921, compared with the previous twelve months, he asserts, show an increase of 36 per cent in imports of exposed film negative and a decrease of 26 per cent in exports.

"The members of this association would deplore exceedingly a situation wherein domestic producers would find it economically profitable to make pictures in Europe at lessened production costs and bring them to the United States for cutting, editing, and distribution ostensibly as American productions," declares the director-president of the M. P. D. A.

The Senate Finance Committee is now preparing a report on the Fordney Tariff bill, which imposes thirty per cent ad valorem duty on foreign-made motion pictures imported into this country.

The present national association of producers and distributors is opposing the thirty per cent tariff, fearing retaliation by foreign nations. They argue that then American manufacturers would have to produce abroad to enter the European market on a basis equal to their foreign competitors. This, they allege, would throw American actors, directors, workmen, artisans and laborers out of employment.

On the other hand the actors favor a sixty per cent duty based on American valuation, and through the Actors' Equity Association, charge the producers with desiring a low duty in order to take advantage of cheap labor and materials in producing films abroad for use in this country.

The motion picture directors favor limiting imported negative (exposed) to a designated percentage of domestic film production, this percentage to be divided among foreign countries in proportion to their respective volumes of film production.

As an alternative measure they suggest a heavy protective tariff, based on production cost in the United States at the time of entry.

PANTHEON PRODUCTIONS SIGNS RUSSIAN PLAYERS

Pantheon Productions has signed a contract with Ludmilla Franzowna Battalina and Alexander Ivonowitch Janowsky, formerly of the Moscow Art Theatre of Russia, to play in a coming production.

William Scott and Harvey Clark have been chosen to enact important parts in Charles Ray's forthcoming picture for Associated First National.

J. Crimen Zeidler will leave this week for the Yosemite to spend a month with the Irving Cummings company, filming scenes for a James Oliver Curwood northwestern special, under Director Fred Sittenham. Mr. Zeidler's sister, Leatrice Joy, played one of her first screen roles with Irving Cummings in "The Whip," several years ago.

CLUMSY WORDS

By Donald H. Clarke

Words are somewhat like latch keys. You slide a word into an ear, and it unlocks a thought. Sometimes the same word unlocks different thoughts in different heads. That's principally because words are clumsy keys. There would be a heap less of argument in the world if it were possible to just shoot full-fledged thoughts from mind to mind by a wireless like method. Wouldn't there?

But the clumsiness of words isn't the only difficulty about exchanging ideas. Another trouble is that many persons do not keep a full stock of mental images on hand. Words are likely to mean nothing but different sounding noises to such persons. The key turns the lock all right, but there's nothing inside.

This thought came to the writer the other day at a luncheon given by Samuel Goldwyn to Rupert Hughes. Mr. Hughes was giving a most interesting talk, mostly about critics and about motion pictures, and said in part:

"Three centuries from now a certain kind of critic will be roasting the life out of the moving picture producers of his time and referring to today as the golden age of motion pictures when people devoted themselves to high art of principles and wrote the great successes of the screen.

"I think that the motion pictures are doing marvelous things; that there are great geniuses at work producing, writing and acting magnificent pictures.

"I think that Tom Mix is an heroic figure. Cowboy exploits, in which he rides a horse down the side of a mountain or dashes across the desert, contain epic qualities as glorious as the adventures of Homer's heroes or the heroes of the picturesque novels that literary critics praise so highly. They also contain landscapes of the noblest beauty.

"I predict that in a few years there will be critics thinking themselves the most artistic of the artistic who will make fun of novels and plays, poems and essays and sculpture and paintings as cheap and clumsy devices in comparison with the magnificent charms of the motion picture. They will laugh at the sculptor who pounds away at a block of marble trying to chop out a beautiful image; and they will point to the motion picture director who can select from thousands of beautiful women and reveal them in motion; posing them and lighting them at his divine pleasure; grouping them in friezes and giving them all the magic of life. There will be critics who will laugh at the novelist who ransacks his thesaurus and his dictionary hunting for unusual adjectives, which anybody can find who will look for them, and pitifully trying to express with stupid words the beauty of a youthful face; the pity of a lip that trembles with grief; the ache of a heavy heart; when the moving picture geniuses can make all of these emotions live and breathe with a vividness that will bring forth real tears, real laughter and real sobs and present them to the public with a vividness that cannot be resisted."

The temptation to keep right on quoting from Mr. Hughes' remarks is overwhelming. But there's enough now to emphasize the point of this piece. That is, that motion pictures are keys that open no chamber of the mind to find it empty. They supply the image. They are the images.

A great artist, poet, sculptor or painter is one endowed with the tremendous gift of visualizing for the many.

"Stupid words," Mr. Hughes said.

"Three cheers," say we.

A Reorganization

It has been suggested that the Affiliated Picture Interests is about to reorganize in an attempt to acquire a membership really representative of the motion picture industry whose interests it sometime ago set out to champion. In spite of this commendable aim, however, it is an admitted fact that the profession entertains scarcely any regard for the organization as it is now operated, a knowledge which has proven most disturbing to the conceivers of the new movement; and it is the organizers themselves who are now seeking a remedy.

Whether the elimination of the concentrated "big producer" element, which has kept things pretty well blocked thus far in the Affiliated, will do the work or whether an entirely new plan must be drafted to gain the desired end are phases now under discussion, . .

If the industry's various associations feel that there is value in an undertaking of this kind, and surely its theoretical worth is evident, now is the time for expression. Let us not indulge in the general tendency to neglect our opportunities for speech only to whisper discontentedly when matters have passed out of our hands.

An Unexpected Leavetaking

Last week, as will be recalled, we remarked a few angles of the 1922 trade paper situation at which time we stated that only producer-extravagance in the matter of insert advertising had made possible the number of publications of this sort in existence. This week we are startled by the intelligence that two of the foremost exhibitor magazines in the field are abandoning their West Coast offices on or about February first because their running expenses have not been justified during the past few months of quiet.

Although some such break has long been looked for, these closings come suddenly enough to severely jolt that portion of the profession which is interested. It is to be hoped that the law of average is at the bottom of these removals rather than that they indicate a continued depression in the industry. In fact we cannot but be confident that such is really the case as the independent market has never been better nor conditions more encouraging to production activity in this line. In such an event there is nothing whatsoever to be deplored by anyone concerned.

From Our Correspondents

When we reflect over that which is brought forth by some of our editorial efforts we wonder that our heart is strong enough to continue.

The following communication proves that our idea "went over" but where and how is something we might worry about if we had time.

Rives, Tenn., Jan. 22, 1922.

"Dear Editor:

"Quoting from the Literary Digest a quotation from the Camera! 'That our greatest misfortune is our lack of genuine youth,' perhaps if the people really do feel the truth of what you see in the same old faces that appear on the lighted sheet, there will be some hopes of younger and new faces to take the place of the old ones.

"That is why I am dreaming dreams of a career for myself on the lighted sheet, and why I am writing to you to see if I could get you interested in me.

"This quotation from your paper woke me up to the fact that perhaps we younger beauties can make Mary Pickford and others fade away as old who truly have lost their youth. I am 17 and pretty, so a town of 10,000 inhabitants declare, for I have just won the prize of a $20.00 gold piece with 2,000 majority in a beauty contest.

"Doesent that fact give me the right to try, but I do not know where to begin will you kindly tell me how,—could you get some of the movie companyes interested in me.

"Could I enter the beauty contest that is to take place in Los Angeles soon will you kindly tell me to whom to apply for admission? I have been complimented on my beauty all my life but never thought seariously of it, untill I read your quotation, then I thought if I can win a name and a comfortable living from my looks, why not "Trusting I have not asked you to do more for me than you can do, I am awaiting a reply.

"BERNICE FLACK."

The next we don't profess to follow intelligently, but we firmly believe that the lady is contradicting us in at least two paragraphs. The rest of the time we were merely misunderstood.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 17, 1922.

PICKFORD AND FAIRBANKS PURCHASE STUDIO

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks have purchased the Jesse D. Hampton studios. By this transaction they put the stamp of their approval on Southern California as the hub of the picture universe.

"Although we may go to Europe for a portion of each year," said Miss Pickford recently, "Hollywood will always be our headquarters. There is no doubt but what Southern California is the best place in the world for picture production. The industry with its elaborate accessory business and its complete quota of talent is firmly established in Los Angeles and Hollywood, with the result that picture-making can be carried on more economically and efficiently here than anywhere else."

Both the Fairbanks and Pickford organizations will commence at once to "pick up their props and walk."

Even though they plan to operate at the same studio, each star will maintain a separate organization. Miss Pickford will start work immediately on her own administration building and private bungalow dressing room.

No production will be undertaken by either company until Miss Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks return from New York City where they will go within the next few days on legal and business matters.

Probably the first picture to be filmed on the new lot will be Jack Pickford's version of "The Tailor-Made Man," which his sister will supervise.

Fairbanks' first vehicle will be called temporarily "The Spirit of Chivalry," which title will be changed when the picture is released.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd is scheduled to begin production on his forthcoming comedy the second week in February.

Harry "Snub" Pollard has commenced work on a real estate comedy. Charles Parrott, author of the script, is directing.

"Paul" Parrott signed this week a long term contract with Hal E. Roach for the continuance of one reel comedies, "shooting" to commence Feb. 15th. Mr. Parrott, whose company is the most recently added unit, has completed thirteen comedies, several of which have already been released.

"Our Gang," the "kiddies" comedy which Fred Newmeyer directed, was completed this week and one reel has been assembled by T. J. Crizer, film editor. The comedy, which was written by Sam Taylor and Charles Parrott, is a two reeler, the leading roles being acted by "Sunshine Sammy," Anna May Bilson, John Hatton and Jackie and William Condon.

AT UNITED STUDIOS

Fifteen additional seamstresses have been added to the Norma Talmadge wardrobe department, for Miss Talmadge's production of "The Duchess de Langeais."

Constance Talmadge and her aides are reading stories and will shortly select a vehicle for her next starring production.

Cliff Bowes, Jack Lloyd and Otto Friese are supporting Lige Conley in the newest Jack White comedy under production at United Studios.

FIELDING TO PRODUCE IN ST. LOUIS

Romaine Fielding, production director for the National Film Publicity Company in St. Louis, intends producing six comedies and feature films in St. Louis presently.

The studio site has been selected and construction will start immediately.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

Marshall Neilan has left for San Francisco where he will film several sequences of Hugh MacNair Kahler's Saturday Evening Post story, "Fools First," for which Marion Fairfax has just finished the continuity. Mr. Neilan was accompanied to the Bay City by Claire Windsor, Richard Dix and Claude Gillingwater, who will play the principal roles in the production. Frank O'Connor, who directed "Penrod" and three cameramen, David Kesson, Karl Struss and Ray June, also were in the Neilan party. Scenes will be filmed in San Quentin prison and in the Hotel St. Francis.

Joseph F. Poland is now writing the continuity for Thomas H. Ince's recently acquired photodrama, "The Sunshine Trail," which will be released by First National.

Maurice Tourneur's production, "Lorna Doone," is now in its fourth week at the Thomas H. Ince studio. Filming will end in about two weeks when the picture will be turned over to the editing staff.

Following a few days' rest, Ben Turpin and Phyllis Haver started work again in "The Robin's Nest" at the Mack Sennett studios.

"On Patrol," is the forthcoming Mack Sennett-Billy Bevan, two-reel comedy now in preparation which Roy Del Ruth is directing.

Three comedy specials were shipped by local independent producers this week to the New York offices of First National. The first to leave was Buster Keaton's "Cops;" the second, "The Duck Hunter," a Mack Sennett comedy featuring Billy Bevan and Mildred June; and "Bright Eyes" with Ben Turpin and Phyllis Haver.

Charles Ray announces that the cast of "Smudge," his most recently completed production for First National release, consists of Ora Carewe, Charles K. French, Florence Oberle, J. P. Lockney, Blanche Rose, Lloyd Bacon and Ralph McCullough. "Smudge" was made in Los Angeles, Boston and New York, the eastern sequences being taken on Mr. Ray's recent tour of the metropolis.

AT UNIVERSAL

Idlewild is being used as the locale for "The Storm," a forthcoming Reginald Barker production, in which House Peters is starring. Virginia Valli heads the supporting cast.

Frank Mayo has completed "The Way Back," a John Fleming Wilson story, directed by Stuart Paton. The star has the support of Sylvia Breamer, Marie Crisp, Howard Crampton, Francis MacDonald and Joseph Girard.

The entire cast has been chosen for Marie Prevost's new story, "Kissed," which started production recently.

William Worthington is preparing a feature picture which is scheduled to start production in the near future.

WALSH PREVIEW IN NEW YORK

R. A. Walsh's "Kindred of the Dust" was given a preview at the Ritz-Carlton, New York City, recently.

S. M. Unander is in New York with a print of "The Lagoon of Desire," which was made last fall in Tahiti by W. F. Alder.

Current Reviews

"TOL'ABLE DAVID"

Kinema

The month's big dramatic picture is "Tol'able David," the Inspiration Pictures' production which marks Richard Barthelmess' starring debut for First National. Taken from Joseph Hergesheimer's Cumberland-laid novel of the same name, it has been admirably adapted by Edmund Goulding and Director Henry King and artistically set in the approximate locale of the original. This last is truly an invaluable element since it not only dresses the filmplay harmoniously and convinces beyond the shadow of a question with its accuracy, but also renders the picture a rare chronicle of life in the West Virginia valleys. We do not recollect having previously witnessed a technically correct cinema of this district. This one is right in every detail.

King proves himself with this work one of the screen's most accomplished directors. Just as his clever farces have been laughed at the world over, "Tol'able David" will occasion universal tears. His gripping melodramatic suspense in this picture not only rivals but exceeds that effected by Griffith in "Way Down East;" his climax is sensationally strenuous without ever becoming either morbid or ridiculous; and his guidance of the trouping cast is superb.

Henry Cronjager's photography blends the whole splendidly.

As for the star, he offers his first "straight" classic in the title role. Playing the wistful, sensitive lad, "not a man yet but tol'able, just tol'able," he is one of the celluloid's most artistically young characters. His situation in and interpretation of the determined, sincere mountain boy is perfect from his sympathetically humorous introduction right through to the heartbreaking battle which kills him. A few performances like David will see Richard Barthelmess at the top of the ladder.

Gladys Hulette is also beautifully situated in Esther Hatburn, David's rustic sweetheart whose code is based upon the loyalty of the mountain woman. Her work deserves the highest praise since she attends every point allotted her completely and attractively.

Marion Abbott, in David's practical but adoring mother, gives a carefully shaded portrayal that approaches the two or three famous mother roles which we have set apart as screen achievements. Like the entire cast, Miss Abbott was faultlessly chosen.

Edmund Gurney, Warner Richmond and Patterson Dial provide some striking characterization as David's ill-fated father, brother and sister-in-law, while Ernest Torrence is the season's most hideous heavy in Luke Hatburn, a mountain outlaw. Never has a villain been more repulsive than this one or more fearsome supported as he is by a diabolical father and brother who are in the respective hands of Walter Lewis and Ralph Yearsley.

Forrest Robinson, Laurence Eddinger and Harry Hallam commendably dispatch the remaining roles in the cast.

"Tol'able David's" superlatively high production standard is detracted from only by the picture's inclusion of too many unnecessarily descriptive subtitles. However, this is an almost inconsiderable item under the circumstances, for here will be a foremost celluloid triumph of 1922. The box office will tell the tale.

"PEACOCK ALLEY"

Loew's State

Robert Z. Leonard has given "Peacock Alley," Metro's current presentation starring Mae Murray, a brilliant production with the result that this cinemaplay is quite the most lavish and exotic now being shown in the city. Every foot of the picture scintillates with unique costumes, gorgeous settings, super-artistic photography or startling, Prizma colored art titles, while silhouetted against these beautifully executed details is a thoroughly entertaining, if utterly inconsistent love story of a Parisian dancer by Ouida Bergere. The plot offers no particularly new twists and sets forth several overdrawn situations but Edmund Goulding has translated it all for the screen very convincingly so that taken by and large "Peacock Alley" is the sort of pastime in which the public revels. It should draw excellently.

Cleo of Paris, the beguiling little heroine of this photoplay, is rendered an enchanting bit of animation by the always fascinating and clever Miss Murray. There is a rhythm about this artiste not confined alone to her attractive dancing which, as usual, is an invaluable feature of her performance. Primarily, however, this spirited little Parisienne, vitally alive and deliciously affected, is entirely human which saves her from a merely beautiful effect, the fate of so many, of our most constant performers.

Perhaps it is because Elmer Harmon, Cleo's lover and husband, is fundamentally misunderstanding and therefore a little unsympathetic that Monte Blue lacks much of his customary appeal in the character. Nevertheless, we would have imagined a much different result.

Edmund Lowe is a good touch as Garrison a "Broadway graduate," while Anders Randolf, W. J. Ferguson, William Tooker, Howard Lang, William Frederic and M. Durant are suitable types for the remaining roles which they amply fill without exception.

"THREE LIVE GHOSTS"

Grauman's

Frederic Isham's post war play, "Three Live Ghosts," somewhat changed as to matter, but probably beneficially so, has arrived from the British Paramount studios, where it was produced by George Fitzmaurice from a scenario by Ouida Bergere. Containing much hilarious comedy, the necessary amount of reason and an almost entirely clever cast, this picture will not go wanting for popularity, but it cannot be said to reach the famous Fitzmaurice standard in all respects. Nevertheless the last decision is up to the audience which was apparently absorbed and delighted at the opening performance. The story deals with the exploits of three British soldiers long reported dead (a cockney, an American and an Earl), providing many rich situations.

Norman Kerry, who plays Foster, the juvenile, presents possibly the least interesting and colorful portrayal in the cast. There is nothing particularly wrong with the hero, but he just doesn't grip.

Both Cyril Chadwick and Edmund Goulding, however, are gold mines of mirth in Spoofy, the "balmy" Earl, and Jimmy Gubbins, his cockney pal, while Clare Greet adds the finishing touch as the drunken, spirit communing Mrs. Gubbins.

Anna Q. Nilsson enacts satisfactorily the feminine lead while the list of players further includes John Miltern, Annette Benson, Dorothy Fane and Windham Guise.

From a production standpoint "Three Live Ghosts" lacks a little of the richness that we have been educated to expect.

"SATURDAY NIGHT"

Grauman's Rialto

Jeanie MacPherson's latest concoction for Cecil de Mille's Paramount production, "Saturday Night," answers the question, 'Is any happiness to be gained by marrying out of one's sphere?" in the negative and illustrates its point with parallel love stories in which a laundress weds a millionaire and a chauffeur an heiress. The story contains several exceedingly human situations but ends a bit unsatisfactorily and never cinches the audience's sympathy for any one character. The cast executes the parts convincingly without accomplishing anything out of the ordinary.

The photography is very superior, while the production details are as amply looked after as they usually are in de Mille presentations, although there is not the superlavish note present that has so often been noticeable, even obtrusive, in this producer's work.

Leatrice Joy gives, perhaps, the picture's most vivid performance as the romance-driven daughter of luxury who marries her chauffeur. Her subsequent humilitation is exceptionally well handled.

Conrad Nagle also makes an attractive role of the young millionaire who falls under the charms of his sister's laundress, while Jack Mower and Edith Roberts in the other two principal positions give characteristically good accountings of themselves.

Theodore Roberts, Edythe Chapman, Sylvia Ashton and Julia Faye complete the cast.

"Saturday Night" has opened an indefinite run in this city.

CLASS OPENING POSTPONED

The Hoover Art Studios makes the following announcement:

Mr. Frank Geritz, whose exhibition of woodcuts and linoleum cuts at the Hoover Art Studios has occasioned great interest, has been engaged to make sketches and woodblock portraits of the members of the San Carlo Grand Opera Company and the Pavlowa Ballet. As these commissions will take Mr. Geritz's entire time for some weeks to come, the opening of the woodblock and linoleum cut class at the Hoover Studios, scheduled to start this week, will be postponed until March first.

Beginning February first, limited subscriptions for tuition can still be entered at the Studios.

TOURISTS SEE "MAKING THE MOVIES"

Clarke Irvine is staging "Making the Movies" at the Hollywood Legion stadium every Tuesday afternoon and recently a big crowd enjoyed watching Neal Burns and Josephine Hill do some bits of comedy before a Christie camera under the direction of Scott Sidney.

Film strips of the stars appearing, with autographed photographs are given away as souvenirs.

SOUTH CAROLINA FEARS CENSORS

It is predicted that South Carolina will be harassed with legalized censorship as the result of a bill just introduced in the General Assembly by Representative Edgar A. Brown.

South Carolina has no regularly organized exhibitors' body and there is no exchange center in the state, hence opposition to the bill has been only lukewarm, and it is believed it will become a law.

Cecil B. de Mille is expected back presently from his European vacation.

Jack Blystone is directing Lupino Lane in his first picture for Fox.

Teddy, the dog, seen so often in Mack Sennett comedies, was seriously injured recently while taking part in a scene.

The new athletic novelty "pogo" has already found its way into pictures. Katherine McDonald has made it a part of her current production to represent a society fad.

The motor-schooner that Allen Holubar will use in his production of "The Soul Seeker," starring Dorothy Phillips, has arrived here from San Francisco.

George C. MacCormick, electrical engineer associated with the Charles Ray Productions, Inc., has been elected president of the Electrical Illuminating Engineers Society in Los Angeles.

Maurice Costello, the screen's first idol, is in vaudeville. So is Maude George, a prominent figure in Eric von Stroheim's million-dollar cinema saturnalia.

"Boomerang Bill," a Paramount picture, is coming to Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre Monday, Jan. 30th. The picture was created by Cosmopolitan and features Lionel Barrymore.

FAMOUS PLAYERS TENTH ANNIVERSARY

The tenth anniversary of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will occur in February, and preparations are being made to observe the event in many theatres throughout the country.

Paul Willis recently returned to Los Angeles from an Orpheum tour and is now busy rehearsing a new act. Mr. Willis was the hero with Mary Carr in Fox's feature, "Thunderclap," now showing.

Clarke Irvine insists that here's a senseless sentence, and we can't help agreeing: "I Accuse Foolish Wives for being Just Around the Corner in Peacock Alley picking the Passion Flower from the Secret Place in The Garden of Allah. For Shame!"

PATHE SALESMEN WIN PRIZES

B. H. Cohen, Pathe salesman working out of Minneapolis, and W. W. Kofeldt, Pathe ranch manager in San Francisco, are winners in the Jesse D. Hampton Sales and Collection Contest, which ended on December 24th. Announcement to this effect was made by Pathe this week, following the competition period, which began on October 31st, and closed December 25th at midnight. All contracts recorded up to that time were counted in the result, which accounts for the delay in the naming of the winners. The victors can take either a trans-continental trip at Mr. Hampton's expense, or $500 cash, its equivalent.

The Hampton contest was open to Pathe and Associated Exhibitors salesmen, inasmuch as each sell the Hampton product.

PHOTOPLAY EDITION OF "PENROD"

A "Freckles" Barry photoplay edition of Booth Tarkington's "Penrod" book has just come off the press and Grossett & Dunlap, publishers, are preparing a national advertising campaign for the publication in which the Marshall Neilan picture will be given prominent display publicity.

SCREEN COMMENT INVITED

Why doesn't Vox Populi step forward with a little comment on motion pictures? It is generally admitted that the magic rectangle is not exercising the fascination it should. Is it the stars or the stories? Too much variety in programs or too high admissions? The screen, more than press or government, is the servant of the people. It is responsive to the public's wish—when that wish is expressed. Your advice will be read at "headquarters" if sent to William D. Taylor, president Motion Picture Directors' Association, or Frank D. Woods, president Screen Writers' Guild.

RAWLINSON RESTING

Herbert Rawlinson, who recently completed 'Peterman," from the prison typewriter of Louis Victor Eytinge, "Lifer" in the Arizona State institution at Florence, is taking a four weeks' vacation.

Milton Ross and George Periolat will be seen in roles of consequence in Doris May's current R-C photoplay which William A. Seiter is directing.

The Man on The Cover---An Impression

By Ted LeBerthon

"The sun set, but set not his hope;
Stars rose, his faith was earlier up."

For something like two years, John Griffith Wray has awaited the great opportunity. Coming to the Thomas H. Ince forces from the ranks of stage directors, he learned the technique of screen direction from the Culver City master craftsman; but he brought to the screen a poet's concept of beauty, a feel for emotional heights and depths, and a sound knowledge of dramaturgy.

After meeting Wray and later reviewing "Hail the Woman," I am convinced that he has not yet encountered the great opportunity, has yet to film a story worthy of his high talents and intellectual scope. "Hail the Woman proves that Wray is the logical successor to the late George Loane Tucker, for both transformed medicore stories into magnificent cinemas. Wray is worthy of directing a screen version of Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac" or Hauptmann's "Sunken Bell" or Phillip Moeller's "Moilers;" but where is the producer with vision or courage enough to allow him to—or perhaps, where is the audience for poetic, profound photodrama? One cannot but frown darkly upon popular taste—and the censors, when it is realized that here at last is a screen director capable of interpreting Theodore Dreiser's "The Girl in the Coffin" or the dramas of Wedekind.

For several moons have been buried in the abysses of the night since so poignantly moving a drama as "Hail the Woman" has flickered across the argent square, and I am convinced that indubitably the beauty, power and pathos is intrinsic in the direction. Why, what divine wand touched Florence Vidor? What sublime elixir did she imbibe to reveal depths in her histrionism never before glimpsed? Do not mistake me. Mrs. Vidor has always possessed character and sheer fineness and a presence that signified mental and spiritual scope, but never before discovered to us the dramatic surge that in "Hail the Woman" seemed like a sea held in leash—that at any moment might assail the skies.

I believe that many embers of histrionism were stirred and blown to flames by the life-breath of the Wray genius, in the case of several of the players in "Hail the Woman." There can be little doubt but that the success of this photodrama will cause some lusty exhibitor bidding for future screen plays featuring Florence Vidor, and that in a lesser way Madge Bellamy and Lloyd Hughes will win approbation.

John Griffith Wray has the head of the thinker of Grecian antiquity; a high forehead surmounted by a shock of undulent brown hair, somehow leoine in character. His eyes are frank and searching, but not in a disquieting way; humor lurks in them, and he smiles easily and often, in the manner of a sunny, unconcerned stream.

What strikes one soon after meeting him is the facile, unimpeded flow of ideas which emanate from him. A man with an unusually wide and expressive vocabulary, his meanings are precise, his thoughts unequivocal. Thus articulate, he is never at a loss in spoken description, never labored or obscure. You know exactly what he's driving at. Furthermore, he is easy to meet—and makes one feel easy afterward.

He has no illusions respecting the motion picture art, and believes that its greatest future lies in popular paths. But he does believe that the motion picture will be a great factor in mass development, and will be universal in its appeal in exact ratio to its cleaving to expositions of fundamental emotions—steering clear of those subtleties which flower in the regions of the intellect.

Having observed the works of other producing organizations, he maintains that Thomas H. Ince is still the Titan of producers, destined to play the most enduring melodies on the public heart-strings. To use Wray's own words, "Mr. Ince's superiority in the motion picture field is due to his at-one-ment with his public; he seldom deceives himself. He knows what Jimmie and Lizzie and Agnes want, and knows what things they hold most lovely and dear. But best of all, he sticks to the fundamental principles of dramaturgy. He will not coquette with the narrative form nor flirt with allegory—neither will he beckon to sad, haunting realism. He stands solidly by sound, cumulative drama—and romance."

Wray is at present preparing to direct a Bradley King story in which Tyrone Power will have the leading role, again under the supervision of Mr. Ince.

Where will John Griffith Wray be five years from now? One might as well put the question to the sun, the moon or the stars. But I look to his breathing a rarer than Olympian atmosphere—if he is ever allowed to spread his pinions wide. Because the motion picture is essentially a popular form of entertainment, he will have to infuse his poetry into stories which touch the common heart, but unlike many conspicuous directors, it will not be because he cannot soar higher. Where they have ascended, he will have descended; their zeniths will be his nadir. He will be the making of many a cinema star.

Do not think for a moment that Wray is a tall-browed bookster or engages in any subliminal pursuits—although he was once a school-master. He dresses plainly, eats lunch with anyone (he doesn't even discriminate in the case of press agents or safe crackers) and never, never, never employs the grand gesture. In fact, I'm sure he doesn't believe in himself in any way approaching the degree in which his associates believe in him.

Contemporary Criticisms

"TURN TO THE RIGHT"

"Rex Ingram has turned to that successful crook play of a few seasons ago, "Turn to the Right," for his latest screen expression. * * * June Mathis and Mary O'Hara have made an adaption which carries the fidelity of the spoken version, and Mr. Ingram has embroidered it with deft touches, providing happy balances, well-rounded characters sketches, and a subtle vein of humor * * * —Motion Picture News.

"It is the exquisite combination of human interest and comedy, the blending, in fact, of all the tried-and-proven elements essential to the success of drama that gives Rex Ingram's "Turn to the Right" the flattering distinction of being the photographic parallel to the great stage success. * * *

"In the fine art of judging screen material, of discerning what deserves featuring and what should be kept subordinate, Mr. Ingram is an adept. * * *

"The sympathy and harmony that mark the performance of the entire cast reflects credit again upon the director.—Moving Picture World.

"Turn to the Right" is Rex Ingram in a far different mood from 'The Four Horsemen' or 'The Conquering Power.' He turns from spectacle in the one case, and deep tragedy in the other, to crook melodrama and comedy, with distinction, ease and great success.

"In the handling of the material, which made 'Turn to the Right' a big stage success, Mr. Ingram has demonstrated very great skill and understanding. * * *

The cast is excellent. Its work shows the director's restraint and remarkable grasp of dramatic values."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"CAMERON OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED"

(Ernest Shipman-Hodkinson)

"One of the things that has not been overdone in picture making is realism. The screen version of Ralph Connor's famous book, 'Corporal Cameron,' deviates in this respect. It is realistic in the extreme. . . Therefore, the actual scenes described in the original story, the long winding trails, dangerous declines, steep water falls, etc., have been used with splendid results. . .

"Here is a picture that will gratify the men. It is a man's picture."—Motion Picture News.

"Cameron of the Royal Mounted" is genuine Northwest drama, packed full of diversified and thrilling action. * * *

"It abounds in exciting situations, wild rides and several combats which are realistic even to the hurting point. It is an absorbing tale faithful in detail against a background of scenes of the wonderful and beautiful Canadian Northwest."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"It is the spirit and background of 'Cameron of the Royal Mounted' rather than the story that furnishes the thrills, and there are many of these. * * * As a result, the theatrical effect that so often weakens pictures of this class, has been eliminated and the exciting rides and pursuits accomplished by experienced riders amid the magnificent natural settings of the Northwest are highly convincing.—Moving Picture World.

"THE SIN FLOOD"

(Goldwyn)

"Reversing the mechanics of dramatic composition, Director Lloyd has built a new idea in this picture. * * * The action moves speedily. Those who have been waiting to see what sort of a picture would follow 'The Old Nest' and 'Dangerous Curves Ahead' will not be disappointed in this new idea picture.—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Concerning the theme of a picture, rarely does a hardened reviewer find himself moved to an enthusiasm that demands superlatives for its expression. * * *

"Goldwyn has done so fine a thing in presenting this theme, which is powerful to an extreme, although it makes the usual, accepted idea of romance subservient to the main issue, that it is impossible to be moderate in its apprisal. * * *

"The director, Frank Lloyd, has gathered a group of actors that seems to be perfectly suited to the individual roles."—Moving Picture World.

"Goldwyn's picturization of the stage play, 'The Deluge' 'Synafloden,' Henning Bergsen's wonderful drama, makes as dramatic and as human a piece of celluloid as has been seen in some time. * * *

"Not a flaw can be found in the development of the story. The logic is absolutely convincing. Every one of the all-star cast gives a most intelligent interpretaion. * * * —Motion Picture News.

"THE LANE THAT HAD NO TURNING"

(Paramount)

"It is a question whether this story would have been screened if Sir Gilbert Parker's name had not adorned it. 'The Lane That Had No Turning' carries a fragrant title suggestive of romance and summertime, but it stops there, and what is revealed is a morbid depressive story. * * *

"Agnes Ayres makes her first appearance as a star, and while she fails to reach emotional heights succeeds in registering her charming personality.—Motion Picture News.

"Agnes Ayres starts upon her career as a full fledged Paramount star in a picturization of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel of the same name. Her first appearance as such is in a worthy introductory vehicle, having an appealing story, is well directed by Victor Fleming, who, with the scenarist, has capitalized upon the many opportunities the story offers, and is interpreted by a strong supporting cast."—Moving Picture World.

"The Lane That Had No Turning," the Paramount picture from the story by Sir Gilbert Parker, has two points of special interest—first, it is the premier starring vehicle of Agnes Ayres, and second, that it presents Theodore Kosloff in his first leading role, one which gives the young Russian pantomimist and screen actor an opportunity for almost unsuspected dramatic powers."—Exhibitors Herald.

Through Jess Smith, Charles Giblyn has signed the following for "A Woman's Woman." Mary Alden, Holmes E. Herbert, Rod La Roque, Donald Hall, William H. Tooker, Louise Lee, Albert Hackett and Dorothy MacKail. A. B. V. Flower has been engaged as technical director. Don O'Brien is in charge of production.

Why Studios "Close Down"

It is both notable and significant that most of the studios which have NOT "closed down" during the last year have been regular clients of the Photoplay Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Four years ago we expressed the opinion that producers who consistently select their plays because of their intrinsic screenability, rather than because of their "literary" value, were destined to achieve and maintain financial success.

And now, four years later, we hold tenaciously and justifiably to the same opinion.

Nor have the producers who have regularly come to Story Headquarters for their stories had occasion to differ from that opinion. They have been too busy making good pictures for a market that is starving for good pictures to entertain the thought of "closing down."

It is not the policy of the Palmer Sales Department to urge the purchase of one story at a high price (just to make a sale), but rather to endeavor to select material that will make for continuous successful production.

Editorial

blame the lack of growth of the moving-picture industry in this country to the stars themselves. They "lack genuine youth" you say. "Youth and romance are one and the same thing" and "audiences demand the real thing" and again "the populace must be convinced as well as apparently catered to and are not dumb enough to appreciate T. M. in the principal role." In the first place, does the populace—common people—know what youth is? Youth is any age from seventeen to forty at least provided suppleness and a clear mind are evident. Romance can claim no age limit, but as a woman or man lives longer on this earth, a romantic situation can be handled with greater finesse and a body doesn't make quite such a fool of himself that he does without experience and poise. Then again, if genuine youth could be found at the present day, which I doubt, it would not keep so any longer than it has previously. This would make the calling for new recruits always necessary. If audiences cannot appreciate the romance depicted by Wallace Reid, Tom Meighen, Roudolph Valentino, Milton Sills, Richard Barthelmess, Harrison Ford, and Charles Ray, and others, they are not dumb, would that they were, but they are blind and feeble-minded. Who cares to see callow youth "kids" rather, depict a love scene in their silly little feeble way? That may be alright for a children's theatre, but not for grown up. thinking men and women. When one goes to see a picture, one does so usually to save time from reading the same thing in book form. Does a grown-up person care to spend time reading a child's book? No, give a grown-up person a grown-up book with grown-up characters. Do these people who are calling for the "real thing" know what it is they want? I doubt it. The moving-picture industry has a big future before it, but why let the common-people decide its future? Why cater so religiously to the populace? Does an ignorant man know what art is? The moving-picture takes the place of education for the common people; therefore, it stands responsible for what it puts before its audience. The common people should not be permitted to choose their method of education. They do not know what is best for them, but, if there were nothing else, they would soon be perfectly satisfied with a picture which shows knowledge of and experience in handling worldly situations. These pictures can be depicted best by men and women of twenty-five years at least. The great trouble with moving-pictures is that the actors and actresses are too young rather than old enough to do more than a stereotyped part. They have no life other than what the director puts into them. When here and there one appears who acts like a human creature, it is noticeable.

"The difficulty probably lies in the fact that moving-picture concerns do not want to pay decent actors enough to keep them. Children will probably be satisfied with small salaries. Put moving-picture industry on the basis of art, cut out combines and furthermore keep the industry in our own country. Don't merely sit and criticise. Start in and do something, but don't give us grown-ups children to take the place of our favorite actors and actresses. And make of the moving-picture industry an art and a means of education.

"MRS. GRACE B. BROWNEL."

Now and again a bit of cordial, sensible appreciation is received with thanks.

Editor Camera!

I am taking the liberty of writing you to express my appreciation of your editorial, under the heading "A Few Observations" on the so-called film men who take advantage of the success of a big production to peddle off an inferior re-issue and in this connection, I am enclosing herewith copies of the few advertisements issued in connection with an old version of "Ten Nights in a Bar-room."

As you are no doubt aware this company has just released a production made from L. Case Russel's screen version of this famous drama and I may add that this production has been a tremendous success here in the east where it has been shown in a few cities notably Providence, R. I.; Lawrence, Mass.; Reading, Pa.; Woonsocket, R. I.; Pawtaucket, R. I. This success, of course, prompted the re-issue.

In view of your courageous stand for the producer who invests a small fortune in making new and worth while pictures, it occurred to the writer that this might prove of interest to you.

Again thanking you for your editorial and with best wishes for your continued success, I am

Yours very truly,

Mr. Ford Classifies Us

Many of us are familiar with the fact that Henry Ford, noted manufacturer of a fairly famous little motor car, is president of The Dearborn Independent, a Michigan-published paper, given over to the furtherance of Mr. Ford's interests through the spreading of Mr. Ford's various but always strenuous propaganda. In this publication is featured a department headlined "Mr. Ford's Page," in which the "president's" favorite sentiments are ordinarily set forth with dignity. In a recent issue he winds up a discourse upon the present general tendency of politicians to retire into private enterprise with the following observation upon the advent of former Postmaster General Will H. Hays into the motion picture industry.

"No doubt the movies need all the respectability that the name of Will Hays can bring to them, and no doubt Will Hays will need all of his respectability to keep what he has in the business he has undertaken. But if he can pull the movies out of the mud, if he can make them American, if he can drive out the men who are probably paying his salary and bring in men of character and cleanliness, he will have performed a big job, as big as the reformation of the postal service. Mr. Hays may have seen a great opportunity. It is there. But the perils are many. Let us hope that Mr. Hays pulls the movies out of the slime instead of letting them pull him in."

Of course this attack is merely consistent with Ford's recent stand against the Jewish race which is largely represented in our line of endeavor, as in every other. It is entirely unfair, however, that he should permit his business prejudice to extend over so much territory and although we have no desire to enter any such futile controversy, we do wish, in passing, to state that our quota of the Semitic people includes many artistic as well as commercial geniuses and not a few human beings whose acquaintance is a privilege and an elevation. Moreover, we doubt that there lives the man who can gracefully denounce any race or any class even if he be a philanthropic financier; nor has Mr. Ford, much as we admire certain of his purposes, yet justified a public expression upon anything artistic.

Whatever motives may have actuated Mr. Hays in his entrance into picturedom are naturally unknown to us. The results of his affiliation with the third industry will only prove them to be worthy or otherwise; but we are familiar enough with the former Postmaster General's reputation to realize that his "respectability," so unwarrantedly discussed and questioned here, would never lead him to follow Mr. Ford's surprising advice to cut his employers' throats with treason. Neither do we doubt the sincerity behind Hays' published statement of his belief in the art and honor of the average picture producer.

No one knows better than Mr. Ford that it would be difficult for any class to surround itself with a more repulsive "slime" than that in which our commercial brothers abide in comfort, growing decidedly fat with material reward; while any open minded individual must recognize the unapproachable amount of light which we have given, largely in true unselfishness, to a not overly well treated world.

Mr. Ford, you have accomplished unusual things, but you have not achieved sufficiently to undertake the ordering of the universe or any very extensive portion of it. Both your obvious raps and more subtle innuendos in this paragraph pass unappreciated in an agreeable sense. We consider them a hostile and untimely aggression.

—F. R.

The Picture World Loses a Friend

As this paper goes to press, there comes word of the shocking tragedy, which has today robbed the film industry of one of its best-loved pioneers, an unquestionable artist and a leader in all progressive picture movements, William D. Taylor. That a hideous crime was responsible for his death makes the startling intelligence even sadder and provides an element of bitterness in the hearts of those to whom he was dear, for they have known him to be a character deserving of life's greatest happiness and death's most-gracious form and they realize that, as a profession, they have need of his kindly, steadily forceful spirit.

We call to mind the fact that, something over a year ago, William Taylor offered the feature address at the Memorial held for Robert Harron, Olive Thomas, and other picture dead, whose untimely demises had given us such a series of spiritual jogs. Capable, compelling and in the prime of life, his sympathy in that address was a thing of rare beauty. In it, with the utmost of delicacy, he touched the tragic notes in the violent passings of the two youths who had had all life and accomplishment before them, while from his stock of supreme tenderness he pointed his moral revealing with the philosophy of a thoughtful and clear-visioned soul, the light in all things as he saw it.

This afternoon that unusual man lies materially dead, murdered while his back was turned by an unknown hand whose wicked blow was guided by a distorted outlook. Spiritually our friend and leader can only progress and in a sense he will be forever by our sides in the endeavor to which his life was given. This we know to be true although for a while, of course, his presence in a more understandable form will be poignantly missed.

After that, William Desmond Taylor will find his truest place in our hearts as an inexpressibly sweet impression, a gift which will, in days to come, lend us the unprejudiced, uncompromising courage that was his.

Film Capital Production Notes

RAY JOINS UNITED ARTISTS

The alliance of Charles Ray with United Artists has been recently announced, and United Artists now includes Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin, Alla Nazimova, Charles Ray and George Arliss. Perhaps the most interesting feature of his new step is the fact that, in the coming year, Mr. Ray will make only two pictures. He has one more production to complete for First National.

TWO VISUAL SYMPHONIES COMPLETED

Dudley Murphy has completed two of his single reel Visual Symphonies and is preparing to make "The Flying Dutchman," which will be timed to run with Wagner's music. Dans Macabre," with Adolf Bolm in the leading role, is the first of the series.

CHRISTIE MAKING COMEDY IN SNOW

Al Christie is in the deep snows of Truckee, California, making a Northwest Mounted Police comedy, entitled "Cold Feet," with Viora Daniel in the featured role.

CHANGE TITLE

The working title of Carey Wilson's South Sea Island romance, which Goldwyn is to produce, has been changed from "Under the Skin" to "Captain Blackbird." This change was made to avoid confusion with "Brothers Under the Skin," a Peter B. Kyne story, now in production at the Goldywn Studios.

AT UNIVERSAL

"Peterman" has been completed with Herbert Rawlinson as the star of the story, directed by Tod Browning. Barbara Bedford, George Hernandez, William Courtwright, Gerald Pring, Willis Marks, Ed Tilton, George Webb, Helen Stone and Betty Eliason support the star.

The new Craig Hutchinson comedy is to be called "The Bottle Baby."

Three new stories are ready for production. "Top O' the Mornin'," Gladys Walton's next starring vehicle; Louis Joseph Vance's "The Black Bag," Herbert Rawlinson's next story, and "Out of the Silent North," by Drago, which has been selected as Frank Mayo's next starring picture.

AT UNITED STUDIOS

Norma Talmadge's production of the "Duchess de Langeais," will be completed in about ten days.

John M. Stahl's "One Clear Call," and Anita Stewart's "Rose O' the Sea," will both be finished at about the same time at the Louis B. Mayer Studio.

Hope Hampton's recently completed photoplay, "The Light in the Dark," is now being edited in New York. Her next production will be "The Isle of Dead Ships."

Roy Del Ruth has just finished filming "On Patrol," the Mack Sennett-Billy Bevan two-reel comedy. Mildren June plays the leading feminine role with Bevan, and Kewpie Morgan is the police captain.

AT VITAGRAPH

Director David Smith started production this week on "The Shaughraun," an Irish story from the play by Dion Boucicault and originally produced at the Drury Lane Theatre, London.

Robert Ensminger is directing Earle Williams in "Parkington's Widow," from a Richard Harding Davis story.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd, who returned to Los Angeles recently from New York, resumed work Wednesday morning and has been busy this week taking shots at Santa Monica for his comedy tentatively titled "He Who Hesitates."

Harry "Snub" Pollard has commenced production of a court house picture. Marie Mosquini heads the support. Charles Parrott is directing.

Two more comedies are ready for shipment, "Full of Pep," with Harry "Snub" Pollard, and "Our Gang," the kiddie comedy, directed by Fred Newmeyer, both of which were shown this week in preview. "Call the Witness," a travesty on easy divorce methods starring "Snub" Pollard has been released.

The flying field at the Roach Studio is now completed and the first try out took place this week when Harold Lloyd and "Snub" Pollard with Hal Roach as pilot, took a plunge into the blue. Charles Parrott is engaged in writing a flying comedy for "Snub" Pollard, which will be produced in the near future. E. V. Morris, head of the electrical department, installed the apparatus, which will be used by the comedy companies.

The latest Harold Lloyd re-issued release is entitled "That's Him."

Charles Chaplin's comedies, "A Dog's Life," "Sunnyside," "Shoulder Arms" and "A Day's Pleasure," are to be reissued and released monthly in succession, beginning with February.

Current Reviews

"BOOMERANG BILL"

Grauman's

Cosmopolitan Productions has been doing rather weird things to Cosmopolitan magazine stories of late and the registry of a complaint is in order. The public doesn't relish hash any more and that we can't force it to was proven during last year's famine when a lack of meritorious productions decreased cinema attendance to an alarming degree. "Boomerang Bill," Doty Hobart's screen version of a crook character sketch silhouetted by Jack Boyle against unfortunate circumstances, was criticized during our recent review of it as being material beneath Lionel Barrymore's dignity. We readily realized that the chance remark covered the situation as not only the role to which the star is assigned, and the production given the plot, but also the general type of theme set forth in it do not justify Barrymore's appearance here. The story told in so few paragraphs by Boyle has been elongated into a feature subject by padding, the cutters have made long and unwarranted gaps in the action, and the titles are more heavy than otherwise. Director Tom Terriss permitted his cast's general tempo to lag and the photography is so exceedingly inferior in places that some of the star's close-ups are entirely burned out.

The title role, a gunman who learns that one cannot mix good and evil, is naturally portrayed by Barrymore, who nevertheless fails to create a real character due to the fact that he has to "stall" through two-thirds of his footage or between the few pieces of real action in his part.

Marguerite Marsh is seen to advantage in Annie, a hold-up man's inspiration and ruin.

A cunning Chinese baby plays Bill's little champion at two years and a picturesque little Oriental does the child at fifteen. Why Miriam Battista, round-eyed and anything but chinky, was cast "in between" the two mentioned is one of the unfathomable errors to which we are doomed continually.

Margaret Seddon, Frank Shannon, Matthew Betts and Charlie Fong play other roles well in this Paramount picture.

"THE GLORIOUS FOOL"

California

A couple of Mary Roberts Rinehart stories, a Goldwyn scenario writer (J. G. Hawks in this instance), much elaboration upon very little and we have "The Glorious Fool," a more entertaining than "meaty" dramatic comedy with no particular suspense or noticeable climax, although the inevitable final ensemble is much in evidence at the finish. The direction by E. Mason Hopper has seen to an otherwise satisfactory production and the title writer has reclaimed a lacking situation or so, while the cast passes creditably; therefore things might be much worse. John Mescall's photography is standard. Although there is little way of judging the identity of the title role, we'll venture a random shot that it is filled and very capably by Richard Dix, whose Billy Grant, an invalid millionaire, is quite attractive despite his swathing bathrobes. Comedy, however, is not necessarily Dix's forte.

Helene Chadwick is too typical if anything in Jane Brown, Billy's little nurse, but she rounds out the romance, a worthy undertaking and a popular one.

George Cooper provides one of the photoplay's high lights in a really minor role, Al, a delinquent father. His sheepish reform is a work of art.

Vera Lewis, Kate Lester, Otto Hoffman and John Lince are excellent hospital types; and Theodore Von Eltz, Frederic Vroom, Lillian Langdon and Patricia Palmer complete the cast.

LAURA ANSON

"The Glorious Fool" will get safely "by"; it is not, at that, an unusual picture from any standpoint.

"NANCY FROM NOWHERE"

Clune's

Realart's current Daniels starring vehicle, "Nancy from Nowhere," has more of pep than of novelty in its makeup and less of the former than has been characteristic of this ingenue's efforts. Its melodrama will probably appeal to the more easily satisfied and the plot is lucid if hackneyed in all respects.

Chester Franklin's direction is fairly consistent and Douglas Doty's scenario from the original by Grace Drey and Katherene Pinkerton is done carefully enough.

Bebe Daniels does not always succeed in carrying a picture and she misses to a degree in this one. Playing Nancy, an orphan slavey who runs away to meet Romance only to turn naively back to horror when she is told that her love will only hurt her sweetheart, she is not entirely convincing, largely because she isn't fundamentally the unsophisticated type. Anyway Miss Daniels is a comedienne. The roles and gowns of Lillian Gish do not hang smoothly upon her differently attractive person.

Edward Sutherland plays the juvenile opposite the star.

Vera Lewis and James Gordon put over some invaluable "hokum" melodrama as the repulsive Kellys.

Myrtle Steadman, Edward Martindel and Alberta Lee are capital in Miss Holliday, her father and housekeeper.

Helen Holly is also included in the list of players.

"STARDUST."

Kinema.

If Fannie Hurst entertained the idea that Hope Hampton Productions intended to film her widely read novel, "Stardust," when that organization purchased the screen rights to the title which it has seen fit to tack on to a mediocre, done-to-death plot of Anthony Paul Kelly's concoction, then we congratulate her upon resorting to law to repair the damage to her reputation which will follow the release of this picture. It is granted that many intensely interesting novels must undergo radical changes in their screen adaptations, but when the revamping includes not only the situations and backgrounds, but also the characters, plot and theme, somebody is handing both the reading public and the author an unacceptable insult. Even the now-so-popular panhandle, "suggested by," fails to save the "remains." All of Miss Hurst's character motives, as well as her action, have been snowed under in the picturization of her story without any particularly meritorious result. In fact, the photoplay has little but its title to attract.

Careless cutting in places has injured what may have been a very fair piece of direction by Hobart Henley. The photography is uneven.

Hope Hampton naturally plays Lily Becker, whom she makes into an average screen heroine with few noticeable errors.

Thomas Clemens, the leading male role, an entire stranger to Miss Hurst, by the way, is done with apparent thought by James Rennie, while Albert Penny, Lily's husband, has been degenerated into a caricature by Noel Tearle.

Thomas Maguire, Mary Foy, Charles Mussett, Vivian Ogden, Edna Ross, George Humbert, Ashley Buck, Gladys Wilson and Charles Wellsley, fill other bona fide and imaginary positions.

First National distributes "Stardust."

DRESSER WITH FREDERICK

Louise Dresser, who was recently engaged to appear with Pauline Frederick in the latter's R-C production, "The Glory of Clementina," directed by Emile Chautard, is having her first experience under the pitiless glare of studio lights. She declares she is enjoying the work very much. For years Miss Dresser has been a favorite on the vaudeville and musical comedy stage, but this is her debut in films. With her husband and vaudeville partner, Jack Gardner, Miss Dresser has been spending the winter in Southern California.

CLIFTON AND SMITH TO MAKE SEA STORY

Leigh Smith leaves the west coast presently to join Elmer Clifton, who is in the East making arrangements for the filming of a whaling vessel story. It is expected that four months will be expended in the making of the photoplay, scenes for which will be shot in the Carribean Sea and at New Bedford, Mass., where an old whaling vessel with its captain has been chartered. Mr. Smith is at present casting.

INDEPENDENT ELIMINATES "MIDDLEMAN"

"The independent producers who used to make pictures for state-right distribution, were eternally chasing the rainbow's end," says Mr. E. B. Hanscom, secretary of the recently founded Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate.

"Heretofore independent producers could never be sure of any method whereby they could dispose of their product profitably; in fact in most cases the producer did not know what to do with his picture when he had it successfully completed, and therefore he usually turned it over to some distributing organization on the straight percentage basis, and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, he did not get back more than a mighty small percentage of his production cost, although the distributor perhaps realized a small fortune on his picture. Consequently it is a common belief that picture producing is a hazardous occupation and it is getting harder every day to secure capital for further productions, although motion picture producing is growing to be one of the largest industries in the country. The million dollar motion picture theaters that are being built in great numbers throughout the world are paying the greatest part of their earnings for film rental—and those earnings must be immense.

"Where is that money going?

"The theaters are crying that the film rentals are too high; exchanges are going out of business daily, crushed by the high prices they have to pay for royalties on state-rights; and the independent producers are going out of business daily because they are receiving no returns on their negatives.

"Where is the money going?"

Mr. Hanscom, in a statement addressed to all independent producers and all state-right buyers, announced that the distributing syndicate formed to market independent productions, with its headquarters in Los Angeles, has solved this problem by eliminating the middleman and getting the producers and state-right buyers in direct touch with each other, thus enabling the exchanges to buy their pictures for a lower price than they were forced to pay heretofore, yet allowing the producer greater returns.

The safety of this new "direct from producer to buyer" plan is also pointed as enabling the producer to make his contract direct with the exchanges and collect the money direct; while the Syndicate, acting as distributors for independent producers, is merely doing the actual work and advancing the actual expenses necessary for successful distribution.

This organization is said to be complete enough that the producer has nothing further to do but make his picture and collect the money—having always direct control over his negative and all contracts—while the officers of the distributing syndicate are sending their salesmen on the road, getting out posters, slides, lobby photos, press books and prints on each picture; advancing the money for all these, for a small percentage of the gross receipts instead of the old fifty-fifty basis.

"The Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate is indeed the rainbow's end which we were chasing for many years," have said Mr. Caldwell of the Commonwealth Productions; Mr. Hirons, formerly of the Bob Horner Productions; Mr. Fish, Mr. De Gray, Mr. Meyers and other independent producers who have familarized themselves with this new plan.

Mr. Lloyd B. King, sales manager of the Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate, announced that he is going on a three months' sales tour, leaving February 15th. He will visit all exchanges and sell all pictures accepted by his company on or before the 10th of February.

GUNNING GETS ANOTHER SERIES

THERESA DRAY

SCHENCK REMARKS ON SEX PICTURES

Producer Joseph M. Schenck, who is now starring Norma Talmadge in "The Duchess of Langeais," and who recently finished supervising the filming of Constance Talmadge's "The Divorcee," for future First National release, has a few pertinent remarks to make regarding the so-called "sex picture."

"Very much has been said on the subject of 'sex' in pictures," remarks Mr. Schenck. "But there exists a confusion in the minds of many regarding the definition of sex. A great many think that the word sex is synonymous with salaciousness. This is not true.

"The sex picture will continue to lead in presentation on the screen. But the salacious picture will not be tolerated.

"There is an appeal of sex in everything. The cleanest and most wholesome love story is based—on the attraction between opposite sexes—'the love of a man for a maid.' The very world itself and everything that goes on upon it has sex as a foundation. But it is not necessary to treat the appeal of sex in a vulgar or obsence way."

The third Ben Wilson-Neva Gerber production, "Impulse," is shortly to be released.

Lura Anson, leading lady for Monroe Salisbury, recently arrived in town, having made the trip from San Francisco on the initial trip of the new Fageol Bus Line.

AT THE INCE STUDIO

Ince's "The Brotherhood of Hate" company, directed by Lambert Hillyer, returned this week from nearly a month on location at Sonoma, in Northern California. Heavy snow interferred with their work during the final few days. The principals accompanying the party were Lloyd Hughes and Marguerite de la Motte.

Thomas H. Ince's next picture featuring Douglas MacLean will be an original, as yet untitled, by Bradley King. It will enter production within the coming two or three weeks.

Horace Williams is busy assembling an all-star cast for "Finding Home," which will soon be filmed under the direction of John Griffith Wray.

Del Andrews is cutting Thomas H. Ince's comedy special, "The Hottentot," which was recently completed with Douglas MacLean, Madge Bellamy and Raymond Hatton in leading roles. It will be released by Associated First National.

Leah Baird's second independent production, "When the Devil Drives," was completed this week under the direction of Paul Scardon.

DE GRASSE ON THE "YOUNG ART"

Consider the actor in pictures and his side of the story. In the "young art" the director often has been an all-powerful being, bending story and action to meet his personal approval. But in the changing order of things the individuality of the actor has more sway. This is the belief of San de Grasse who enacts the role of the priest in Oliver Morosco's picturization of "Slippy McGee," which will be released presently.

"In the enlargement of motion picture making it is getting to be less of a one-man job," says deGrasse. "In the first days of 'movies'—and that's what they were then—the director often was the author, art director and general czar. Frequently there was no detailed script, the director carrying story and 'business' in his head to be doled out as each scene demanded.

"The result of this concentrated power was a picture lacking contrasts in its human elements. The natural differences in character and action that would be found in a group of men and women were lost by directorial molding to one-man sameness. I actually saw a picture held up for an hour one day while the director was instructing an inveterate smoker how to hold his cigar! It was thus all through the action—the director sent us through each episode as he would act it. The result was that all character shadings and contrasts were lost. We were unnatural and colorless.

"In more modern methods directors encourage actors to go through scenes first with their own interpretations. We are urged to be at ease and natural. The director closely observes these rehearsals and makes suggestions. We are instructed in the effects wanted and treated as beings with some helpful intelligence rather than so many automatons answering the directorial strings. The actor who has to be coached through each bit of action is rapidly disappearing from pictures. Picture making is now a business of experts and departments. The better films are the product of many minds. Intelligent conferences are taking the place of the megaphone."

Andrew Arbuckle has been cast in Victor Schertzinger's first two pictures to be made at Santa Barbara, beginning about February 14th.

Films With a Mission

By Ted LeBerthon

Out on Santa Monica Boulevard, at a point where that thoroughfare emerges from clinging populous side streets and bisects the vast expanse of level land between the sea and the foothills, a group of men are making a new kind of motion picture. For several years, each of these men has envisioned an ideal; in some inscrutable manner, they were brought together not so long ago—and founded the Mission Film Corporation upon their common beliefs and aspirations.

In practically every other motion picture enterprise ever inaugurated, the primary and final consideration has been the achievement of a commercial success. The Mission Film Corporation, according to its founders, purposes to likewise achieve a commercial success—but this is not its sole nor by any means its primary motive or raison d'etre.

The aims of this new and distinctly unique motion picture concern are most clearly outlined and defined by Clarence Geldert, the president, a man prominently identified for the last half dozen years with the Famous Players-Lasky organization. In his own words, "the Mission Film Corporation will make photoplays that are entertainment plus, and it is in what this plus quality implies that its purpose so radically differs from the general run of producing organizations.

"We intend," he explains, "to fill two long recognized needs: One by making film plays especially for children—in which we will engage none but child players; the other by making photodramas which touch upon the most vital problems affecting the present and next generations of humankind.

"There are certain fundamental problems which are encountered by all men and women. Life is sometimes grim, inflexible, harsh—and many of us are beaten down, mainly because we lack some helping hand, some guiding philosophy. Unless Mission Films can awaken the rarer qualities in humans, and unless each and every one of our cinemas sends a major portion of its audiences home with something to think about—something that helps make life a little sweeter and easier to live—we shall feel that we have failed in our purpose.

"But such failure is well nigh impossible. My associates and I have tried hard to look deeply into the heart of life, to glimpse those things which touch the lives of humanity in the mass.

"We are not going to preach; we have no sect or cult or dogma to espouse or expound. But we are disgusted with the unnaturalness and triviality of the majority of photoplays—as not being true to the facts of life as most people see life, and as having little character, artistry, social significance or other excuse for their celluloid existence.

"We believe that Mankind is essentially religious and while we will espouse no particular sect, we will refrain from the sort of irreverence or satire that makes religion a farce, the institution of marriage a mockery, and common decency a dead issue.

"We further hold that the doings of professional crooks and various underworld characters are of too slender interest to recognize, much less emphasize. The major portion of humanity, from cradle to grave, has no contact with this unfortunate and pathetic element. We will take our stand and address our photodramas on the common ground of every day existence, with its struggles, trials, hopes, fears, loves, envies, prejudices. Here is the chief battleground of the world.

"Our photodramas will be based on the romances of the boys and girls who will be the guardians of Tomorrow's homes. We will observe the highest aesthetic and artistic traditions and the soundest principles of dramaturgy.

"Humor, the kind that has our national flavor, and the pathos intrinsic to our native land and life, will be strung like varicolored beads upon the golden strings of drama, and retouched with the brushes of purpose and meaning."

Mr. Geldert believes that the type of motion picture the Mission organization will evolve will be universal in its appeal and may be shown to non-theatrical audiences as well as in cinema theaters—in schools, colleges, clubs, churches and anywhere where people gather. A standard is purposed which will guarantee that Mission Films may be shown to grown-ups and children alike in all localities without there being the slightest violation of accepted ethics or good taste. Also, it is intended to produce pictures of so high a character and significance that they will live for several years—as against the ephemeral career of the average program feature.

The pictures for children will be based on myths, legends and fairy tales of a type that clothe high ideals of conduct, thereby laying a foundation for future concepts and values. The first will be based on one of the tales of Hans Christian Andersen, and production will be commenced soon.

The officers and founders of the Mission Film Corporation besides Mr. Geldert are Ernest Traxler, for two years production manager at Universal City and four years with Famous Players-Lasky—whose position with the Mission is that of general manager; Leon Rice, a singer of international renown, who was also quite a figure in the business end of the entertainment world, and Richard Wayne, erstwhile leading man in many important cinema productions, his engagements being with Goldwyn, Ince, Metro, Fox, and Lasky.

They have about finished production upon their first feature photodrama, "Carry On the Race." An all-star cast includes such excellent players as Margaret Loomis, Winter Hall, Lillian Leighton, Richard Wayne and Catherine Murphy. Clarence Geldert is directing. Mr. Geldert will be remembered as the co-director of Thomas Dixon's "The Fall o f a Nation." He assisted D. W. Griffith in the production of "Intolerance" and was especially engaged by Cecil B. DeMille to assist in the direction of "Joan the Woman."

The Mission organization has an untraveled road before it; it is consecrated to an ideal, to one of those high and rare dreams which but few ever glimpse—and which fewer follow.

Introducing Florence and Francis

By Ted LeBerthon

A polite, yet magnetic and oh ever so charming a little duo are within our sunny borders in the persons of one Florence Mills, age seven and one Francis Erdman, age ten.

Iet it be known to all before we proceed further that they are ardent followers of Terpsichore; that Florence has pretty, pale, and playful blue eyes, short ringleted curls the color of wild honey, a complexion like unto the blush of a peach, and the freshness of a rose after rain. She altogether inclines towards a certain plumpness, and makes a gaily picturesque little figure with a saucily turned red tam o' shanter, a square cut red broadcloth coat and an abbreviated skirt of velvet the color of night. Little patent leather pumps and golf hose set off the finely moulded limbs and complete a picture that is at the same time a poem.

As for Francis, ah!—that's the rub, for he essays a camel's hair coat and a swagger stick and a swankish gait and tweed knickerbockers—to say nothing of an olive and old rose complexion and a manner of speech that caused me to recall a certain equivocal little page in a novel written by one Theophile Gautier that has delighted merry, naughty folk for many, yes ever so many foolish moons. His retrousse nose and straight chestnut locks give him the piquancy of a gamin and an aspect of Huckleberry Finn audacity. And yet—and yet—and yet—

They hail from smart Manhattan, and are in no wise related, and travel about as is befitting artists, dancers and pantaloons, in company with a manager, a most charming Miss Emily Moore, and a tutor and two fox-terriors who at the tender age of six weeks consume prodigious quantities of apple sauce and pursue monstrously fierce and mature felines.

Now it is quite a fact that Florence and Francis have but recently acquitted themselves most gracefully and poetically in the Frivolities of 1921, that Florence in the dance of Kismet held huge audiences of lovely women and surpassingly interested men in transports of aesthetic delight, and that she and Francis moved many to multitudinous clapping as they swayed tenderly through a gorgeous ball-room lit by an artificial moon.

For Florence and Francis are dramatic dancers, who learned wisely the poetry of movement from one Mona Lamar, herself an adept of the great classes of Alexis Kosloff and Taurosoff the Terpsichorean.

And all through the east they have created dramatic and fantastic and impressionistic prologues for the managers of select cinema temples; they were nuttiness itself as they introduced Doug Fairbanks in "The Nut," at Philadelphia's marvelous Stanley, shrine of the cinema, and they too felt the sweetness of life as they interpreted the soul of Dubarry in a prologue to Pola Negri's "Passion"; and they were gilded lilies for a Mae Murray movie and were moon-struck mannikins who faded away at the appearance of "Midsummer Madness." And they symbolized the Heart of Maryland, and were little angels who threw custard pies smack in the faces of winking starlets—preluding with skyey jest some Mack Sennett mimes.

They both sing, lightly and liltingly, Florence as a flute melodiously translating a gay ache, Francis with the resonance of muted strings. And Florence can draw a bow with surprising results across the astonished face of a violin.

They are here to woo the movies, even though the favors of the movie muse part them in the hours when folks are all awake. They are potential stars, full of feeling and fire and wonder which awaits the wand of a director of discretion and dreams. They are as chatty and genial as two paraqueets, as artistic as Pierrot and Pierette, and as gallant and fearless as their fox-terriers. As sure as the sun rises and sets, they will be heard from promptly—and magnificently.

WOULD HAVE BERNHARDT AS GUEST OF HONOR

Contemporary Criticisms

"THE MAN FROM LOST RIVER"

"The Man From Lost River" should give intense satisfaction to all admirers of pictures dealing with virile life in the open. It abounds in beautiful forest scenes and lumber camp atmosphere which is the very acme of realism. . . . It is a clean, wholesome production, well suited to family patronage and should prove a very desirable box office asset."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"That irreconcilable minority which snarls and sneers at motion pictures, scoffing when they are classified as an art, should be forced to see Frank Lloyd's production of "The Man From Lost River," from the story by Katharine Newlin Burt. It would not silence their raucous voices, for theirs is a hopeless malady, but it would test their facility for finding excuses upon which to base their destructive criticisms. . . . This Goldwyn picture is very skilfully constructed. Denied greatness by the limited scope of its pilot, it nevertheless ranks in the vanguard of really worthwhile pictures. . . "—Moving Picture World.

This is a lumberjack story framed in a background entirely consistent with the characters and plot. It does not present anything unusual in theme, the idea being a sort of triangle with the sting taken out. In fact it is a quiet story and the lack of rushing action so characteristic of its type may disappoint those who are expecting smashing scenes and climaxes. Katherine Newlin Burt, the author of 'The Branding Iron,' has written a plausible tale which relies almost entirely on sentimental appeal for its interest. She has drawn an interesting figure in the hero—a man who is able to conquer men, but who is afraid of himself in the presence of women."—Motion Picture News.

"Some splendid shots of a lumber camp in action, delightful views of the tall trees, and attractive scenery in general offer the main bits of appeal in Frank Lloyd's production of Katharine Newlin Burt's 'The Man From Lost River,' a story that bears poor comparison with her 'The Branding Iron' and 'Snowblind.' . . .

"At best 'The Man From Lost River' is a wishy-washy entertainment unless its scenic attractiveness and background values will be sufficient to compensate for the other shortcomings. Improbabilities are more or less numerous—"Wid's.

"THE LAW AND THE WOMAN"

"Any play which the late Clyde Fitch wrote had plot and dramatic climaxes and 'The Woman in the Case,' or as it is called in photoplay form, 'The Law and the Woman,' is no exception. However, more words than a really big picture should contain are required to unfold the plot and caption the climaxes and in consequence opinions of the feature may vary. Some will find it an absorbing and well constructed drama. Others may complain that it is a long time getting to the real action. . . . It presents an exceedingly strong dramatic climax in the last reel, one that carries suspense and action, even though it is all rather theatrical and melodramatic. . ."—Motion Picture News.

"Clyde Fitch's stage play, 'The Woman in the Case,' has been made into a vehicle for Betty Compson, and a good one at that Penrhyn Stanlaws again directs the destiny of Miss Compson in the Fitch play, this time with less artistic display and more concentration upon dramatic effects. And there are some absorbing tense, moments in 'The Law and the Woman,' even though they may tug a trifle too hard upon the spectator's heart strings." . . .—Wid's.

"Clyde Fitch's old stage play, which made such a great hit a generation ago in the 'legitimate,' has been made into a very interesting picture under the title of 'The Law and the Woman," which bids fair to win widespread popularity. It is excellent screen material and brings to the front again Betty Compson, who made such a decisive hit as an underworld character in 'The Miracle Man.' As Margaret Rolfe, the performance of Miss Compson leaves nothing to be desired, and the 'other woman in the case,' Clara Foster, is finely played by Cleo Ridgley, who makes a triumphal return to the screen in this feature."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"The story is an adaptation of Clyde Fitch's popular play of some years ago, 'The Woman in the Case.' But with the aid of an expert scenario written by Albert S. LeVino, Stanlaws supplies a melodrama that has gripping suspense, and although the outcome is perfectly clear from the very beginning, owing to long familiarity with the plot, the spectators' interest is keyed up and never is allowed to drop."—Moving Picture World.

"AT THE SIGN OF THE JACK O'LANTERN."

"Lloyd Ingraham, in directing 'At the Sign of the Jack o'Lantern,' has given the screen an entertaining production. Right from the first the story catches the interest by showing the arrival of two travelers at their destination during a furious rain and electrical storm—such a scene which when photographed as graphically as this one is—immediately grips the imagination."—Moving Picture World.

" 'At the Sign of the Jack O'Lantern' is a pleasing little comedy production based upon a very human theme. Most of the fun is derived from the situations and while the characters are a bit overdrawn, they are nevertheless convincing and quite true to type. The offering makes no bid for drama or plot, but merely presents a possible situation and carries it through in an amusing manner."—Wid's.

" 'At the Sign of the Jack O'Lantern' is an interesting and amusing concoction of incident, half mystery and half farce comedy, relating the experience of a bride and groom who fall heirs to a house and lot and six hundred dollars in cash and incidentally become hosts to a house full of the deceased uncle's wife's relatives.

"The whole thing is ingenious and a welcome change from the cut and dried formula stuff. Possibly some may wonder whether it is to be taken seriously and question the advisability of making a picture that is neither farce comedy nor drama in its construction, but most people are going to call

It is both notable and significant that most of the studios which have NOT "closed down" during the last year have been regular clients of the Photoplay Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Four years ago we expressed the opinion that producers who consistently select their plays because of their intrinsic screenability, rather than because of their "literary" value, were destined to achieve and maintain financial success.

And now, four years later, we hold tenaciously and justifiably to the same opinion.

Nor have the producers who have regularly come to Story Headquarters for their stories had occasion to differ from that opinion. They have been too busy making good pictures for a market that is starving for good pictures to entertain the thought of "closing down."

It is not the policy of the Palmer Sales Department to urge the purchase of one story at a high price (just to make a sale), but rather to endeavor to select material that will make for continuous successful production.

it a first-class evening's entertainment."—Motion Picture News.

"THE CALL OF HOME"

"Many times the not unusual feat of giving a new appearance to an over familiar theme has been accomplished by fresh treatment. In the case of 'The Call of Home,' this refreshment does not come until way along in the fifth of the six reels. It is a group of flood scenes that are as fine as anything of the sort that has been done on the screen before. . . . ."

"Gasnier, the director, has done all it deserves with a hopeless story that does not offer opportunities to spread himself but once."—Moving Picture World.

" 'The Call of Home' is the usual, conventional, eternal triangle story with a fair amount of heart interest that helps, in a way, to make up for the hackneyed situations that otherwise compose the story. The development is by means of coincident mainly, much of it very improbable. . . . ." —Wid's.

"L. J. Gasnier has produced a well-balanced drama in 'The Call of Home.' His theme starts with the eternal triangle situation in a conventional manner, but his story has good incident and holds the suspense up to the final moment. For a climax there are flood scenes which will compare favorably with anything that has reached the screen. If there are any miniature shots, they are exceptionally well done. The entire impression is vivid and thrilling. The waters creep forward to the camera, carrying everything movable with them. And long shots, cleverly cut in, complete the impression."—Moving Picture News.

WESTERN PICTURE NOTES

Irving Cummings recently completed at Keen's Camp the last scene of "The Man From Hell's River," the James Oliver Curwood story he has been making. The cast includes Eva Novak, Wallace Berry, Robert Klein, Lillian West and Frank Whitson.

After five unsuccessful starts, each one of which had the weather to blame, Dick Hatton of Prairie Productions left for Temecula this week with his company to begin work on "Four Hearts."

Albert Rogell, of the Cactus Features, has been working at Burbank all week on scenes for "Fingers of Fate," co-starring Maryon Aye and "Bob" Reeves. The cast includes Lew Meehan, George Lasley, and W. G. Whitehorse. Victor Hugo Halperin wrote the story.

Louis Burston, producer of the David Butler pictures, is arranging to send a cameraman, and possibly several players to New York to take slum scenes to be used in the next David Butler picture, wherein Mr. Butler enacts the role of a two-fisted young clergyman engaged in settlement work.

"The Law and the Woman," directed by Penrhyn Stanlaws, opens at the Grauman Million Dollar Theatre, Monday, February 6th. Supporting Miss Compson are William T. Carleton, Cleo Ridgely, Casson Ferguson, Henry Barrows, Helen Dunbar, Clarence Burton and J. S. Stembridge.

The Western Classic Film Company has ceased production.

The Guardian of Our Comfort

We are fairly well agreed that Hollywood, a garden spot of the world, and one that our profession has spared nothing in time or money to cultivate, is "the country's most ideal dwelling place," as the enthusiastic real estate agents claim for it. Nevertheless we constantly have the knowledge forced upon us that there is a stupendous lack of intelligence and effectiveness in the government of any community or district which will permit its residents to suffer physically from the carelessness of its public service corporations, a condition which Los Angeles has lately endured with amazing grace.

Southern California is blessed with a semi-tropical climate that tolerates only two or three chilly months out of the twelve, and yet the United Studio has found it necessay to install a tremendous blizzard country heating system to protect, during that short space, its producing staffs from the criminal inefficiency of the local gas company, which with the safety and comfort of hundreds of thousands in its keeping, shiftlessly provides only air-filled gas, valueless as fuel, through mains that do not begin to supply the demand which it, as a service corporation, has contracted to fill.

The capital of this vicinity talks about Los Angeles as the unchallenged film center of all times, due to its incomparable weather conditions, etc., etc., and so forth. Thereupon it sits down in utter disregard of the picture world's needs, shortsightedly imagining that an expression of its good wishes will balance any abuse which may later be levelled at our meek and unoffending heads. Why are we meek and inoffensive? Certainly we have had enough advantage taken of that affliction to cure us indefinitely. A few suggestions to our honorable political representatives might be of slight avail. Thereafter a series of damage suits against Los Angeles' insolent public corporations could be tried. We entertain an idea that there are ways of forcing all issues. —F. R.

William D. Taylor

By Richard Willis

When Kipling wrote his "If," the English master
Addressed his words to those who play the game;
"If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster
And treat those two imposters just the same—
"If you can make one heap of all your winnings
And risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss,
And lose and start again at your beginnings
And never breathe a word about your loss:"

And then the later lines, "and keep your virtue,
Or walk with Kings—nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,
If all men count with you, but none too much:"

Sure, Kipling must have visioned William Taylor
And penned his poem having him in mind;
A man who'd not admit that he could fail and
To others' faults was more than little blind.

* * * *

So long, dear Billy Taylor, just so long and not good-bye,
I'm smiling as you'd wish it though my heart has had its cry.
Your friends were legion, Billy, though your intimates were few,
But to those your memory's sacred and their thoughts are there with you.
Young boys and girls will miss you, for your heart went out to youth,
And you gave them good examples of courtesy and truth;
When war came, Billy Taylor, you scouted thought of self,
Position, money, prospects, you threw upon the shelf;
You went a common private, a captain you returned.
Though scarce a word of what you did your friends have ever learned;
You kept your troubles to yourself, you made short shift of woe;
So long, dear Billy Taylor—though we hate to see you go,
We'll feel we're pretty close to you as life's short space we span,
We're richer for your friendship, for dear God! you were a MAN!

The New Art in Pictures

Is it within the scope of one man, no matter how great a dramatic artist, to depict life in all its phases? If so, is it within the power of any actor to so lose his personality, his identity, that he can combine all elements requisite to the drama by interpreting every character included in a play or a cinemaplay, presenting unaided an effort not only equal but superior from the standpoint of characterization to any yet accomplished work in that line? In short, does there live a man who can convincingly and consistently play an entire cast in, for instance, a modern photoplay? The Hollywood film colony holds that this unusual achievement is possible at least to one screen actor; for it has recently previewed Protean Arts' initial production, "The Mind of Man," a dramatic novelty presenting Cecil Holland, the master makeup artist and well-known character performer, in each of the picture's various characters. That this remarkable thing has been actually accomplished largely by means of the more mechanical aids of Mr. Holland's exceptional makeup genius and some startling photography is not pointed as so significant a thing as the fact that his versatility has

Other additions will be the "prop" warehouse, 80x110, where the props will be stored, while a building 25x60 of fire-proof construction will be erected for the electrical work shop.

Harry "Snub" Pollard finished production this week of a comedy and will make four more before beginning on two-reelers. "Kill the Nerve" is now titled and ready for preview.

Jean Havez is back again in his office at the studios and is collaborating with Hal Roach and Sam Taylor on the closing episodes in the Harold Lloyd comedy under production. Themes are now being considered for the next comedy, for Mr. Lloyd is planning no interval between pictures.

Hal Roach is making up the personnel of the "Paul" Parrott company which will begin work on one-reel comedies in another week or so. Scripts will be written by the staff with Charles Parrott in charge.

Current Reviews

"THE LAW AND THE WOMAN"

Grauman's

Penrhyn Stanlaws' newest cinemaplay for Lasky, starring Betty Compson, is an adaptation of the Clyde Fitch stage drama, "The Woman in the Case," which has been retitled "The Law and the Woman." It is chiefly notable for the clever feminine portrayals in the cast and some well developed suspense. Perhaps, at that, Albert Shelby Le Vino should be called to account for allowing his scenario an unwarranted amount of footage to get the story really under way and for expending too much time upon unnecessary details later, but generally, his arrangement holds the interest and, save for one or two weak instances of the kind pointed, it should prove quite gripping to the average audience.

Stanlaws' direction, while not carrying out his early promise of certainty and vividness, makes no blatant blunders with its material and the result is sure to please all lovers of the murder mystery not to mention those of the soft-eyed Miss Compson.

Certainly the photography and sets were in competent hands and in fact there is little left to be desired for the entire list of technical effects.

The well remembered heroine of the original, Margaret Rolfe, is naturally the position which enlists the star who does excellently some contrasting characterization as the courageous woman who employs desperate methods to attain the freedom of her condemned but innocent husband. That which is lost to these mystery parts in humanness is made up for to the public in action and situation twists.

William Carleton was admirably chosen for the well poised, kindly Julian Rolfe, a man of the world who has retained an honorable heart and a clear head. There is much dignity in the part which Carleton has convincingly constructed.

A most remarkable interpretation is given to the heavy in this production by Cleo Ridgely, a screen favorite of some half dozen years ago. She invests Clara Foster, the adventuress, with all that is loathesome and vulgar in the female making her just a repulsive creature unhappily endowed with a degree of intelligence. Miss Ridgely is to be greatly congratulated upon this startling return which she has made to the films. She very nearly "takes" the story.

Casson Ferguson plays Phil Long, the doomed lover of the commoner, with characteristic sincerity and Henry Barrows acquits himself commendably as Judge Thompson.

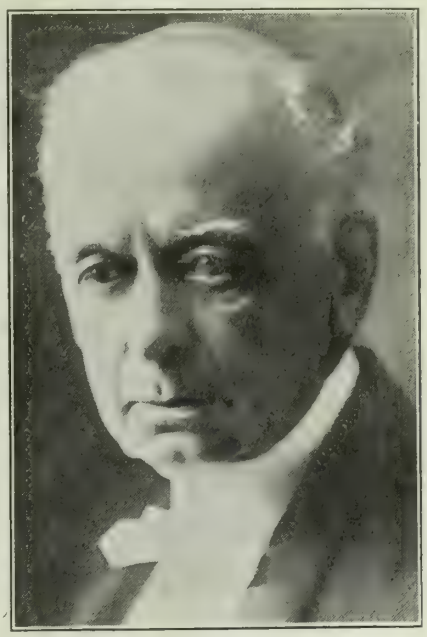
Helen Dunbar, Clarence Burton, and J. S. Stembridge complete the cast of this Paramount picture.

"WHAT NO MAN KNOWS"

Loew's State

Clara Kimball Young seems forever destined to expend her energies upon somewhat commonplace problem preachments prescribed by Sada Cowan, but "What No Man Knows" or the story of the "other woman's" heart, while not particularly compelling, is an interesting improvement over several subjects in which we have witnessed her recently, and as such is to be highly commended.

Harry Garson has provided it with one of his dependably consistent and attractive productions, while Sam Landers has tried out some odd photographic effects upon it. Whether or not these last will please is probably a case for individual decision. By concentrating lights upon the principals in the foreground he sends his crowded sets into a flat unrealistic background undoubtedly intended to detract attention from the atmosphere. Peculiarly enough the strangeness of the experiment worked exactly the opposite effect upon us.



BERT WOODRUFF

"What No Man Knows" does not boast a big climax, but it is saved from going on and on and from there on by a snappy little twist which reverses the whole opposing procession. Its conventional ending is at least healthy and happy.

Miss Young is very much Miss Young in Norma Harvey, a newspaper woman and social worker whose misfortune it is to love a married man. That she is just so will insure success for her picture in some quarters where the older stars are tenaciously preferred to the newer generation.

Lowell Sherman gives a careful performance in Craig Dunlap, the chief masculine situation which is well received although he excels in the unsympathetic.

Dorothy Wallace, an exceptionally attractive heavy, accounts for herself admirably as Bertha, Dunlap's wife, a woman whose wealth fails to eradicate her shoplifting instincts. Miss Wallace is a clever performer.

Ruth Handforth does Miss Quimby, a regulation old maid, more spiritedly and amusingly than this type of thing is usually done, and Dulcie Cooper really characterizes the shop girl whom she plays.

Little Jean Carpenter is very appealing as the blind orphan, Maizie, and William Carleton, Edward Kimball, Helen Hunt and Milla Davenport enact other parts adequately.

Equity Pictures distributes "What No Man Knows."

"WHEN ROMANCE RIDES"

California

A somewhat meagre photodramatization of Zane Grey's "Wild Fire" was recently made by E. Richard Schayer and John Russell for production by Benjamin B. Hampton. The result, which incorporated the directorial efforts of Eliot Howe, Jean Hersholt and Charles Rush in conjunction with the producer, a more inoffensive than sensational melodrama of the race track, is released this week by Hodkinson under the title, "When Romance Rides." All of the "hokum" of the old western serial has been employed by the scenarists, occasioning several near thrills backgrounded against some realistic mountain locations. These, strung upon an ever so slender thread of romantic interest, form the picture's entirety. Whether or not it will satisfy the higher class audience of 1922 is to be conjectured. Surely it could have been comfortably presented in two reels had it been planned as a Main Street blood and thunder attraction. But then, quite evidently, such was not the idea.

The photography by Gus Peterson, Frank Sullivan and William Edmunds is about standard.

Caire Adams is again featured by Hampton in a customarily stereotyped role. She plays Lucy Bostil, an independent westener, whose sympathetic appeal is only gained through her triumphant jockeying and her abuse by a half wit.

Carl Gantvoort in the male lead, Lin Slone, justifies his existence as such by rescuing the damsel in distress, which about lets him out as to action.

Jean Hersholt really does a very good piece of exaggerated work in Joel, the venomous idiot who is apparently encouraged in his derelictions by the neighborhood at large.

John Beck, Frank Hayes and the fat girl who plays Sally, form an amusing hick-comedy trio, but they are entirely misplaced in the story.

Harry Van Meter, Charles Arling, Tod Sloane, Mary Jane Irving and Walter Perkins fill the remaining roles competently.

This type of photoplay is not increasing the screen's popularity nor advancing our industry from any conceivable standpoint.

"WOMAN'S PLACE"

Kinema

A John Emerson-Anita Loos comedy when interpreted by the vivacious Constance Talmadge is invariably diverting, and "Woman's Place" is no exception, although it cannot be said to rival in entertainment value, "Mamma's Affair," and several other of her past year's vehicles. Being the story of a flapper who enters politics, running against a weak-minded fiance for Mayor and winning the boss of the ward for a sweetheart, this picture provides an ample setting for the younger Talmadge mannerisms, gowns and charms, which is an important consideration with her fans. The subtitles could contain more wit, but they do nicely without it. Director Fleming's management of the whole is excellent.

Connie is just herself, no more, no less, as Kay Gerson, a self-confident, long legged and infinitely delightful ingenue. That fact is quite sufficient and will sell easily as the profession has learned to its great interest.

Pickups By The Staff

NEW MIRROR TO SOLVE MAKE-UP PROBLEMS

Gordon Pollock, cameraman for the Mission Film Corporation, now photographing "Carry On the Race," has invented a new mirror which is calculated to solve the make-up problems of the film colony. The glass is apparently like that of any ordinary mirror, but has been tempered by a monotone filter, which causes it to register make-up as a picture in monotone, rather than the different shades of the make-up. It gives the direct screen value of any color, and permits the actor to experiment in colored make-ups without the aid of a second party, or a camera. Patents have been secured, and the new mirror will be on the market in the near future.

UNIVERSAL FOREIGN MANAGER WANTS NEW MEN

James V. Bryson, foreign manager of the Universal Film Manufacturing Co., is on the lookout for bright young men who know the film business and also have a command of foreign languages. At the present time there are openings for several positions in the organizations of the company in Mexico, Norway, Sweden, Spain and many of the countries of South America. "The only requirements," said Mr. Bryson, "are that the men be honest, energetic, experienced in the moving picture business, preferably sales department, and that they be proficient in the Spanish, French or Scandinavian langauges. We have always relied on our own organization for promotions and we have sent many men abroad who are doing very well. Most of them are at the top now and we need more men to serve under them and to break open new territory, and to develop countries in which we have heretofore been represented only by agents. The great drawback is that while many men would go, they do not know the languages and would not be useful for a great many months. We don't want to handicap our men, and are therefore willing to consider men outside the Universal organization if they have the qualifications we require."

"The Island of Terror," eighth episode of the new Pathe serial "White Eagle," starring Ruth Roland.

Pathe Playlet, "Hunting the Hawk," starring William Courtney and Marguerite Snow.

"Fair Lady" is the title definitely chosen for the second Rex Beach production for United Artists.

AT THE INCE STUDIOS

Henry Sharp will photograph "Finding Home," to be directed by John Griffith Wray. An all-star cast will be featured.

"The Brotherhood of Hate," company, directed by Lambert Hillyer, has been filming exterior scenes on location in the mountains above San Fernando.

Casting has commenced on Thomas H. Ince's forthcoming production, an original comedy by Bradley King, which will feature Douglas McLean.

"Jim," in which Milton Sills, Marguerite de la Motte and John Bowers play the leads, is being edited by Ralph Dixon, and will be released presently by Associated First National.

The first prints of "Skin Deep" were shipped to New York this week. Milton Sills and Florence Vidor head the all-star cast.

AT THE FOX STUDIOS

William Fox is re-filming "A Fool There Was" with Emmet J. Flynn at the megaphone. Lewis Stone will play the male lead. The final selection for the vampire role is as yet unannounced.

John Gilbert has the stellar role in "The Land of Beginning Again," which commenced this week with Barbara Bedford in the feminine lead. Jerome Storm is directing, with Jas. J. Dunn assisting.

Rowland V. Lee, formerly of the Goldwyn forces, holds the megaphone on the production, "Lucky Garrity," which started recently with William Russell in the stellar role. Sylvia Breamer plays opposite the star. Dan Keefe is the assistant director.

SCREEN RUMORS

It is reported that "Marjolaine," the musical version of "Pomander Walk," playing at the Broadhurst in New York City, will be done in pictures, with Mary Hay featured. It will be remembered that Miss Hay is the wife of Richard Barthelemess.

Andred J. Callaghan has returned from New York and expects to start production here. He will announce his plans in a few days.

Norma Talmadge is said to be preparing to make a trip to Algiers and the Sahara Desert to make an elaborate re-filming of "The Garden of Allah." Selig once made a production of Hichen's story in this country.

Edna Purviance, long familiar to fans as Charlie Chaplin's leading woman, is, according to report, to be starred under his supervision in a number of photoplays.

The Raoul Walshes are considering a proposition to go abroad and film their next Associated First National production on French ground. Although nothing definite has been planned, both Mr. Walsh and his wife, Miriam Cooper Walsh, are eager to film a story abroad.

HARDING IN NEW YORK

Lyn Harding is in New York from London. Mr. Harding has been engaged to appear in "When Knighthood Was in Flower," which will star Marion Davies.

NEW COMPANY LAUNCHED

A new company to be known as Di Lorenzo, Inc., is being incorporated with Joseph di Lorenzo as president; J. P. Burrows, vice-president; H. J. Jantzer, treasurer, and A. P. Savarese, secretary.

The producing unit is headed by W. Hughes Curran and "Big Boy" Williams will be starred in the first six.

Contemporary Criticisms

"WHY MEN FORGET"

R-C

"If the Robertson-Cole Company felt that it just had to release another bad picture it might be said that it could have found one or two in this country without going abroad for one. However, this enterprise in finding poor pictures seems lately to have become a habit with the firm, so it evidently wished to point out that it would not play favorites in nationalities. 'Why Men Forget' is an English importation that had nothing to redeem it, nor anything that would justify more than the slightest consideration * * *" —Moving Picture World.

"'Why Men Forget' is below the average of the offerings turned out by R-C Pictures, and even though they don't say so either on the screen or in their press sheet, the picture indicates that it was produced abroad, undoubtedly in England. The atmosphere and general production values resemble other English productions that have come over here and the players, the leads especially, are all distinctly British in appearance. It is an amateurish affair at best * * *

"A number of players, wholly unknown to folks here, portray the various characters in an aimless way and never appear to make any particular effort to register sincerity * * *"—Wid's.

"The labor note in this picture may interest those patrons who belong to factory communities, but owing to a lack of punch and action of any romantic or dramatic nature, even the spectators may not find it a means of entertainment. It is a British-made feature with players unknown to audiences on this side of the water. Hence it has its drawbacks as far as carrying some personality appeal * * *

"The story contains but a single character of any dramatic value, the others providing the background. Since there is no novelty of situation, it is easy to guess the outcome. The photography is rather uneven and the acting is uninspired. However, there is a lesson in the story which will be grasped by many. It shows that money is a curse when it destroys ideals * * *"—Motion Picture News.

"THE RULING PASSION"

(United Artists)

"Any lingering impression that the genius of George Arliss is limited to character roles is completely dispelled after seeing his fine handling of a conventional part in 'The Ruling Pssion.' This is a picture with an exceptional appeal—that afforded by splendid acting and directing of a very human story * * *"—Moving Picture World.

"It isn't at all unlikely that the end of the year will find 'The Ruling Passion' mentioned as one of the best pictures, and if it isn't it will be only because it came so early in the new year that it may slip the memory. Because George Arliss' latest offering not only firmly establishes him as one of the best screen actors of the day, but even goes a step further. It really puts Arliss in a class by himself. 'The Devil" and 'Disraeli' were excellent pictures and offered remarkable performances by Arliss, but 'The Ruling Passion' not only contains another excellent portrayal but is a delightful, human and humorous entertainment that can't fail to please. It's the kind of a picture that sends you out of the theatre wholly satisfied and pleased with everything * * *"—Wid's.

"Here is a picture which didn't cost a million dollars, but it ought to gross a million which is a lot more important to everybody. Nothing quite so delightfully human, truly humorous, likable and entertaining has come through this season. There isn't much drama to 'The Ruling Passion' and no heroics or thrills. It is just a simple little story * * *

"Mr. Arliss as a comedian is a revelation. His pantomine is expressive and subtle; his characterization is sharply defined and always pleasing * * *"—Motion Picture News.

"FRENCH HEELS"

(Hodkinson)

"Irene Castle, whose grace and lightness of foot raised her to dizzy heights of popularity with the American public from the time she first danced professionally, does not make an auspicious return to the screen after a lapse of two years. 'French Heels' allows her to dance before the camera, and in thi srespect it is to be commended. But as a well-rounded screen story—the kind that holds a spectator by suspense of strength of plot—it is not so successful * * *"—Motion Picture News.

"Irene Castle returns to the screen after an absence of about two years, in Clarence Buddington Kelland's story, 'Knots and Windshakes,' renamed 'French Heels,' a much more suitable title for the picture. The story consists of rather commonplace situations, in the main, but nevertheless serves as a good vehicle for Irene Castle. Being a dancer, they will expect that her role will be that of a dancer, or perhaps they will at least hope so. In this respect, they are quite certain to be satisfied. She is not only a dancer, but is given the right atmosphere and opportunities to display her art * * *"—Wid's.

"HEADIN' WEST"

(Universal)

"The story selected for Hoot Gibson's latest has hardly enough material for a full length feature, but it contains enough action and sure fire stuff to please and satisfy the majority of western fans. What the story lacks in plot and situation it makes up in comedy details and fights. Some good riding and a little 'broncho busting' add flavoring to the offering * * *"—Wid's.

"The chief characteristic of this picture is its wealth of physical action. After a rather slow start, 'Headin' West' picks up momentum and crashes through to the tune of speed and incident. One has become reconciled to Hoot Gibson displaying a worthy sample of action. He believes in it to the extent of unbounded generosity * * *" —Wid's.

"Whether he is a skillful actor or not is beside the point. It is the object to supply the punch. And he measures it out with a big whoop of enthusiasm * * *"—Motion Ficture News.

"A VIRGINIA COURTSHIP"

(Realart)

"One who has followed the starring cereer of May McAvoy cannot help but believe that this charming little actress has a particularly bright future ahead of her. She has been seen in three pictures: "Sentimental Tommy," "Morals" and the present one, "A Virginia Courtship," which comes near to being as good as "Morals." Certainly it has an appealing, though not highly dramatic story, an excellent supporting cast and beautiful settings.—Moving Picture World.

"'A Virginia Courtship' is slight material for the expression of May McAvoy's talent. Which is to be regretted after her memomable work in 'Sentimental Tommy.' * * *

"Since it is easy to penetrate, the value of suspense is missing. But in its favor are some charming backgrounds and a good suggestion of atmosphere. Furthermore, whatever Miss McAvoy does on the screen is compelling. * * *

"There are some mild scenes which will please those who are not searching for stimulating drama. Inudeed, the atmosphere is so well suggested that one cannot take offense at the story. Even though the plot is slight the backgrounds are highly pleasing. The picture is wholesome—an ideal offering for the young romancers and especially for children."—Motion Picture News.

"Pretty May McAvoy deserves better material than that afforded by Eugene Presbrey's old stage play that is far from suited to her personality, and doesn't provide her with any real opportunities to appear to her best advantage. The opening sequence, especially which calls for her to portray a little girl, is out of her reach. That is not to say Miss McAvoy doesn't know how to act like a little girl, but she can't look like one even with curls and short dresses. Director O'Connor has given her but one close-up so her beauty is not given much prominence. She can stand close-ups, too * * *"—Wid's.

"THE STRENGTH OF THE PINES"

(Fox)

"'The Strength of the Pine's' is far more favorable to William Russell than have been some of his recent features. In this, he is cast as the usual red-blooded hero, but with somehow more of a purposeful and pointed characterization than is customarily his. The frequent mistake of over-emphasizing the romantic and sentimental value of his performance has been almost entirely omitted, and the harder qualities which are far more characteristic in his case have been brought out * * *

"Some of the situations of danger are too forced * * *"—Moving Picture World.

"This picture may prove disappointing to those who see something of value in the title and in the fact that William Russell is the star. For a story it carries an average theme * * * The plot is complicated and there is a profusion of captions * * *

"The director has not bothered much in collecting picturesque atmosphere. There are no colorful long shots. And the pathos, the loneliness of the central figures is never suggested. However, the hero conquers his enemies and the romance comes into its own * * *"—Motion Picture News.

NEW FILM MARKET

Mr. Lloyd B. King, Sales Manager of Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate, who is now collecting state-right productions for his organization which he will sell on his three month's sales tour, leaving Los Angeles on the 15th day of February, announced today that state-right buyers from all exchange centers are sending in their endorsements and assurance of their eagerness to co-operate with the distributing syndicate to establish Los Angeles as the film market and establish the "direct from producer to buyers" method in the state-right field.

Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate, as it will be remembered from an article which appeared in our February 4th edition, is an organization with headquarters in the Loew's State Building in Los Angeles, and was formed solely to eliminate the middle man and enable state-right producers to sell their pictures direct to exchanges through this organization.

The Syndicate sends salesmen on the road to sell the state-rights and prepare elaborate press books and other press matter necessary for successful distribution; also pays for photos, posters, the re-editing of pictures, et cetera, charging a small percentage of the gross receipts for this outlay of expense and work—and all contracts are always made between producers and buyers direct and all monies are paid direct to the producers, not as heretofore, when negatives were shipped to New York and the producers went out of business before they ever heard any more of their own picture and very seldom that any of them ever received their production cost back.

Mr. Sam Honig, the Treasurer of the company, stated that there are still some producers who fanatically believe that new York is the logical film market and many of them still think that they must take their pictures to New York to make a successful sale.

It is indeed pitiful that the independent producer will never learn by his fellowmen's misfortune, for although there are hundreds of sad examples to depict the result of distributing their product through the New York market, there are still some producers who are willing to take another desperate chance. New York is not and never was the film market, states Mr. Honig, but distributors established themselves there, New York having been the producing center at one time. Since, however, Los Angeles became the world's producing center, in the last few years, it was inevitable that the film market had to be moved to wherever the pictures are made.

The state-right buyer does not know nor care where the salesmen come from, when he calls on him to sell any pictures, whether he comes from Los Angeles or New York. That is immaterial to the exchanges, as they care nothing as to where the prints are shipped from, all they care is to get good pictures for reasonable prices, which they can obtain to a greater degree of satisfaction, buying their pictures direct from the exchanges through an organization like this, than if the profit has to be divided three ways, because the exchange and the producer both had to pay the distributor's rake-off, which is now eliminated since the Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate entered the field.

Jack Dempsey has privately settled the two suits for $100,000 brought against him by Frank P. Spellman, it is said. The amount of the settlement is not known. Spellman claimed a share of "Daredevil Jack's" proceeds, alleging that his efforts made possible the star's appearance in the serial. A jury disagreement tied the affair up last fall.

ELECTRICAL SOCIETY HEARS WIRELESS CONCERT

The Electrical Illuminating Engineer Society was entertained by a wireless concert recently arranged by Harry D. Brown, chief electrician at Universal.

Among the illuminators of the various studios who were present were Bert Wayne of Fairbanks, Joe Reynolds, Fox, R. F. Draggy, Universal, and others.

At the business meeting which followed, G. E. MacCormack, president of the society, offered an interesting talk.

M. P. DIRECTORS ASSN. HOLDS ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the Motion Picture Directors' Assn. was held recently at the Hollywood Women's Clubhouse. Officers elected were: Director, David Hartford; Ass't Director, Fred Sullivan; Technical Director, Wally Zan; Treasurer. Norval McGregor, re-elected; Secretary, Fred Thomson; Inner Guard, Charles Parrott; Outer Guard, Duke Warren; Two Trustees, Maj. Maurice Campbell and M. J. MacQuarrie.

made it possible to characterize each role, retaining its tempo through to the end without ever a suspicion by the audience as to the personnel of the cast. It is claimed that here is an idea which is bound to revolutionize the standards previously accepted for the judgment of picture performing. Perhaps herein lies a key to the new art in motion pictures concerning which the critics are wont to do so much arguing of late.

Mr. Bollman has secured the American rights to an eight-reel foreign scientific picture which has just arrived in this country, and is occupied with its editing and titling.

Why Studios "Close Down"

It is both notable and significant that most of the studios which have NOT "closed down" during the last year have been regular clients of the Photoplay Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Four years ago we expressed the opinion that producers who consistently select their plays because of their intrinsic screenability, rather than because of their "literary" value, were destined to achieve and maintain financial success.

And now, four years later, we hold tenaciously and justifiably to the same opinion.

Nor have the producers who have regularly come to Story Headquarters for their stories had occasion to differ from that opinion. They have been too busy making good pictures for a market that is starving for good pictures to entertain the thought of "closing down."

It is not the policy of the Palmer Sales Department to urge the purchase of one story at a high price (just to make a sale), but rather to endeavor to select material that will make for continuous successful production.

Contemporary Criticisms

"THE GRIM COMEDIAN"

(Goldwyn)

"This is the second consecutive poor story, unfortunately, which has appeared under the name of Frank Lloyd productions. In all probability it isn't the fault of the director, but just a false selection on somebody's part, for certainly Rita Weiman's 'The Grim Comedian' is not the best kind of screen material available. In the first place it deals with a phase of theatrical life that is more or less known about, but which is not a pleasant background against which to cast a mother love theme * * *"—Wid's.

"Starting with the philosophical overture that life is a grim comedian, this Frank Lloyd production for Goldwyn of Rita Weiman's story bends its dramatic narrative toword proving the cynical premise * * *

"Lloyd has seen to it that all the possible elements of drama and some of melodrama are used. Therefore, while the plot action differs from that of the usual run of films, after all the picture is only one more of those dealing with the horror of a mother at finding her old beau making love to the daughter * * *

"The film is unquestionably dramatic. An interest in the characters is established at the first and steadily increases as the plot is developed and the suspense becomes acute * * *"—Moving Picture World.

"Since the author knows her subject matter as it pertains to theatrical life it is safe to say that she has not erred in saturating the story with proper atmosphere. It is a rather bold theme which is exposed here and doubtless in its original shape contained some vital strokes which have since been expurgated * * *

"The situations arising from the mother's duty toward her daughter do not appear convincing even though she is guided by a powerful love * * *"—Motion Picture News.

Degrees of Justice

Our district attorney's alleged theory to the effect that the motion picture industry reveals itself as lacking the proper anxiety for justice in the Taylor murder case by its reluctance to assist the prosecution with unrestrained conversation upon all phases of the subject, has been this week overthrown by the intelligence that around $5,000 reward is now offered for the apprehension of the criminal who so recently deprived our profession of a "best" influence, by representative film firms and associations.

Not only do the picture people want justice, but for once in their lives they are intending to get it! The fact that they have failed to respond, in some instances, to the questionable methods employed to elicit information from them concerning the private affairs of their various friends and business associates whom the prosecution has chosen to implicate insinuatingly and the city press to persecute, is merely a further indication of that fact. Indeed, it proves that they are extending their loyalty, their sense of fair play over their entire, much-maligned circle. The film colony will spare no money nor effort to uncover the murderer, but knowing as it is forced to do, even through its grief over the death of its great-heatred, big brother, that nothing would please certain of this city's elements so much as to be able to fasten the hideous crime within its own environs, it will proceed cautiously, as one does when he moves among enemies.

And indeed, this process is not only necessary for the eventual correct solution of the mystery, but for the protection of all things which we hold dear. The rapacity of America's sleek, scandal promoting press is indescribable and unapproachable, but for once its blinding battery of viciousness may not confuse us into either terror or submission. Thousands of our minds, clean creative minds, have been organized against this latest filthy onslaught to be directed at our work, our lives, our spiritualities. It is man's inalienable right to protect himself individually, and it is with the care of its existence and progress as a profession in view that the Screen Writers' Guild has placed its vast resources between just such dangers to its art, emanating from narrow gauge and malicious consciousnesses, as the Taylor tragedy has brought to light. The Guild is to be congratulated upon its high purpose, that of spreading the truth about pictures and picture makers, as broadcast as the slander, much of it absolutely ungrounded, that has been far flung by venomous sensationalists. The ablest group of organized writers in the world has set itself a tremendous task, but of the worthiest nature, establishing itself as a real moral factor.

Justice! Yes, we will have our justice, but served in large portions all the way around! To that end we will not only work and fight, but we will keep a mental balance amid all the hysterics. Billy Taylor never liked hysterics. He would appreciate them over himself least of all. He would be ashamed of the weakness in us which could make us the victims of any treacherous agency, legal or social, to the extent of causing us to drag our confidents into the mire unnecessarily.

Let us leave no stone unturned to bring to his punishment the man who snuffed out the life of our big-spirited leader, but let us pray that our zeal shall not lead us to hurt him further, wherever he is, with a demonstration of unworthiness. Stringent investigations must sometimes be suffered in such cases as this, but trickery has again been practiced upon the screen people. We are more vitally interested in the avenging of William D. Taylor's death than Mr. Woolwine will ever be, but we will not sacrifice the innocent living for the innocent dead, if that is what he has in mind.

F. R.

The Reporter

The following comment is an editorial reply from the Chicago Daily Journal to the yellow-minded newspaper people who have spread such scurrilous reports over the country of the Taylor murder case. It is adequate and gratifying.

"As a partial offset to its thousand benefits, the Chicago world's fair made this part of the country more or less familiar with a form of dancing long known in the orient. This was called the 'wriggle dance,' and several still less complimentary terms, but its commonest name was the 'hoochee coochee.' The object of the dancers was to be as nearly obscene in their wiggles and postures as possible, on the theory that such squirms were 'exciting' to the male observer. When that observer was of mature years and sober mind, the 'excitement' took the form of a large, weary disgust.

"The object of most 'special writers' covering the Taylor case in Hollywood seems to be to dance the hoochee coochee in words. The aspirant for such 'honors' first collects all the scandalous suggestions he can, about everybody who has the remotest connection with the case. He does not put these scandalous rumors in the form of direct statements, which he might be called on to prove. He turns them to what Samuel Butler called 'Insinuendoes,' a word which carries its own definition; and sets them to wriggle and squirm and flop their way across once clean paper, for column after column.

Film Capital Production Notes

PURVIANCE PRODUCTION TO START IMMEDIATELY

It is officially announced by the Chaplin Studios, Inc., that Miss Edna Purviance will immediately be starred in her own right in feature productions, thereby being graduated from the position of leading woman with the comedy genius, after having occupied that prominent place in the Chaplin organization for a period of more than six years.

The rise of Miss Purviance to stardom does not come as a surprise, for it has long been hinted that she would enter the production field on a large scale and that her initial venture would be with the inauguration of the Edna Purviance Company.

The case of Miss Purviance is the only one in the history of the film industry where a leading player has remained in support of the same star for the entire duration of her screen career. Announcement as to her story, director and supporting company will be forthcoming shortly.

Other production units will go into operation at the Chaplin studios soon after the starting of the Purviance company.

EARLE GAINS VICTORY IN OMAR FILM SUIT

Amicably concluding two months of litigation that followed the alleged kidnapping of several reels of film, Ferdinand Earle, author and producer of a motion picture edition of the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, has signed a new contract with Theodore Ahrens, president of the Rubaiyat, Inc. The new agreement calls for abandonment of Earle's suit to Superior Court begging an injunction against exhibition or release of the film in incomplete form. Earle is given complete supervision over final cutting and editing. The picture will be released as a Ferdinand Earle production under a new title, "Omar."

"Mr. Ahrens is a man of the highest integrity and wisdom, and seems quite content with the turn of events," declared Mr. Earle, following a brief conference in the office of Frank H. Tichenor, president of the Eastern Film Company, which led to a "friendly agreement, satisfactory and fair to all concerned."

"A new contract has been drawn up and signed by which the film is in my possession for completion," continued the producer. "By mutual consent Mr. Tichenor has been appointed to represent the Rubaiyat, Inc., in handling the picture."

"ENTER MADAME" IN ITS SECOND WEEK

"Enter Madame," the comedy in which Miss Neely Dickson, director of the Hollywood Community Theater, is presenting Henrietta Crossman in the title role of "Madame," is playing its second week at the Egan Theatre. With a well balanced cast "Enter Madame" has proved a most finished and artistic success. The supporting cast includes Ramsey Wallace, Helen Raymond, James Woods Morrison, Belle Mitchell, Ramon Samaniegos, Hazel McConnell, Ben Hewlett, Helenita Lieberg, and Frank Tokunaga.

"Enter Madame" is greeted as the finest thing yet accomplished by the Hollywood Community Theatre in its several seasons of unusual productions.

"CARDIGAN" TO BE WARREN RELEASE

"Cardigan," the Messmore Kendall production, will be distributed by the American Releasing Company, Fred Warren's new organization, and is mentioned as its first production. Much editing, cutting and titling has been done to the picture, which is based on a story of the American Revolution by Robert Chambers. Betty Carpenter has the leading role in the film version.

LOCATIONING AT PALM SPRINGS

C. S. Elfelt and his company engaged in the filming of "Self Defense" for Metropolitan Productions left for Palm Springs recently where they will remain for two weeks shooting location scenes.

Corinne Griffith has the star role in "Island Wives."

UNITED STUDIOS CENTRALIZING ITS MECHANICAL UNITS

As a means of further reducing the operating expenses of its producer tenants, the United Studios are consolidating under one roof the various shops and mechanical units of the different producing units. This centralization will include the electrical, plumbing, blacksmith and paint shops; the sculptural, architectural and designing units and the storeroom, toolroom, etc. The producers and their aides will save the time that is ordinarily consumed in journeying about the grounds to the various departments, and the consolidation will insure more efficient control of labor, which will substantially reduce the overhead costs to the producer.

AT THE INCE STUDIOS

Tyrone Power has arrived at the studios to begin work in "Finding Home," an Ince feature, soon to enter production. John Griffith Wray will direct. Marguerite de la Motte and Lloyd Hughes are included in an all-star cast for this production.

"A Man of Action," an original story by Bradley King, is the temporary title of the next comedy special in which Douglas MacLean and an all-star cast will be featured.

"The Brotherhood of Hate," being directed by Lambert Hillyer, is nearing completion.

Sol Cohen, Philharmonic violinist, is arranging a special music score for "Skin Deep," an early release.

"When She Marries" will be the release title of a forthcoming Ince all-star special by Bradley King of the Ince scenario staff.

John Fleming Wilson, writer of sea stories and a member of the writing staff, has returned to the studios following an illness of many weeks, and has resumed work on a sea picture for early production.

AT VITAGRAPH

Under direction of Edward Jose, Alice Calhoun this week started work upon her third west coast production. The picture will be made from the play of Raleigh Davis and is enttiled "Locked Out."

Announcement was made this week that Vitagraph will distribute the French picture, "The Sheik's Wife," in this country.

Larry Semon and company have been spending the week at San Pedro, where location shots for his new comedy were filmed.

Earle Williams, directed by Robert Ensminger, has started upon a new picture from a story by Richard Harding Davis.

President A. E. Smith is expected to return very shortly from New York.

Bradley Smollen has started upon the continuity of William Duncan's next story.

MISSION FILM NOTES

The Mission Film Corporation engaged in making its initial production, "Carry on the Race," has moved its activities to the old Fairbanks Studio on Melrose avenue.

Work has commenced on the continuity of the first Kathran Cuddy fairy story to be porduced in San Francisco by the new corporation. The story was suggested by Hans Christian Anderson's "Shepherdess and the Chimney Sweep," and Ernest Traxler, general manager, is assisting Mrs. Cuddy in the preparation of her continuity.

Current Reviews

"THE SONG OF LIFE

Kinema

"The Song of Life," Louis B. Mayer's latest special presentation through Associated First National, is another example of a great theme gone a little wrong despite a thoroughly competent cast and a careful production because of several "misses" in the direction. With the possibility of a big story upon the subject "discontented wives" before him, John M. Stahl has allowed his picture, abounding in effective situations, to evolve into a treatise upon "Woman and the Dirty Dishes Question," making housework her sordid "song of life." His only pointed moral is that a poor man's wife should wash her dishes and like the idea or forever after be held in great contempt by her man child; and he decidedly loses sympathy for the married woman who would exercise her natural talents to assist herself out of her allotted rags. The old-fashioned conclusion arrived at is, that being independent, indiscretions, even immorality, must follow for the average female.

Nevertheless, if one takes "The Song of Life" as a song of three lives and judges it merely as an interesting chapter chosen at random from the book of humanity without attempting a general application of its teachings, this screen story by Florence Irene Reels finds a valuable place upon the list of the month's releases.

As was before suggested it is rich in situations, several of which are subtly managed. Bess Meredith's scenario is more than satisfactory, providing some good suspense near the climax. The camera work by Ernest Palmer varies a little, but is generally up to standard.

The portrayals of the cast are this photodrama's greatest assets, but it is to be noticed that no member of it is allowed the full swing of his individuality. The picture profession has only developed one director thus far who successfully saturates his players with his own personality and they are invariably of the less vivid types. Such artists as appear here should be left largely to themselves. They are troupers.

Gaston Glass in David Tilden, the sensitive juvenile who leads the cast, has his first real opportunity since his arrival upon the West Coast to carry out his promise in "Humoresque," but this performance exceeds in appeal and conviction anything that he has yet done. The young French actor is now in line for some heavy dramatic roles. There isn't a doubt but that he can carry them without obvious effort.

Grace Darmond is wisely situated in David's restless young wife whose instincts all run to "pretty things." Miss Darmond has not often had a humaner role at her disposal. She disappoints in no respect.

One of the strongest positions in the story, Mary Tilden, David's unknown mother, is artistically interpreted by Georgia Woodthorpe. Here is a character actress of wide experience who has made a success of pictures with one unusual stroke, her first effort.

Richard Henderson, "man about town," is suavely typical enough for anyone without ever once suffering exaggeration in the care of Wedgwood Nowell, whose recent heavy work has been notable.

Richard Headrick, Arthur Stuart Hull, Edward Peil, Fred Kelsey and Claude Payton are otherwise established.

"The Song of Life" has, in great measure, the heart interest that is today so highly rated.

"MORAN OF THE LADY LETTY"

Grauman's Rialto

A George Melford Production, "Moran of the Lady Letty," opens an indefinite run, locally, this week and if virility and thrills are now desired by the public this engagement will undoubtedly be a long one, for the Frank Norris story is packed full of suspense, climaxes and counter climaxes laid against a compelling background of sea and sail. Perhaps too much sameness of situation and repetition of action has been employed by Monte Katterjohn in his seven-reel scenario which should have been done in five, but the direction has handled them conscientiously always. Certainly the tang of salt air is realistically retained throughout the piece. William Marshall's photography is very pleasing.

COREAN KIRKHAM

The cast, on the whole exceptionally well chosen, is headed by Dorothy Dalton, who draws a picturesque if rather unanimated character portrait of the statuesque Scandinavian, Moran Sternerson. Her bobbed hair, betrousered efficiency aboard the Lady Letty is at least a distinct novelty.

The masculine lead is in Rudolph Valentino's popular hands and while this performer is only at his best in pronouncedly Latin or costumed roles, he dispatches his footage capably.

A characteristic Walter Long heavy provides the opposition in this picture. Captain Kitchell, the villainous pirate, is child's play for Long and enjoyable for the audience.

Cecil Holland, the master make-up artist of the screen, plays excellently two contrasting roles. They are Bill Trim, a wharf rat, and Kitchell's Mexican partner.

George Kuwa offers more real heart appeal than any other member of the cast in the faithful "Chopstick" Charlie, while Maude Wayne, Emil Jorgenson and Charles Brindley in carefully played parts fill out the list of players in this Lasky-Paramount photodrama.

"ONE GLORIOUS DAY"

Grauman's

Now and then a superlatively foolish story can, with clever technical effects, titles, etc., be made into a highly amusing picture. Such is the case of "One Glorious Day," the Walter Woods and A. B. Baringer original which James Cruze has produced for Paramount from the former's sprightly scenario.

The comedy, dealing with the theft of a man's body by an impish, formless soul who occupies it while the spirit of the other is enjoying an unhampered sojourn on etherial planes, incorporates many unusual twists, some exceptional "timing" and admirable double exposure by Karl Brown.

Will Rogers gives one of his most attractive performances in Professor Ezra Botts, the unfortunate individual who thoughtlessly allows his body and soul to separate, thereby altering the course of his entire life and his position in the community. Both the famous Roger comedy and pathos are present in well balanced contrast, which is sure to please. We think that the "handsome young star" does well under Lasky management.

Lila Lee is her best in the pleasant little heroine Molly McIntyre, and Alan Hale in Ben Wadely is just such a conceited "boob" heavy as "graces" all wealthy social circles.

John Fox is a riotous touch as Ek, the cause of it all, and the cast is completed by George Nichols and Emily Rait.

The success of a picture on this order lies almost entirely with the direction and photography.

"One Glorious Day" is extraordinarily well done.

"A DOLL'S HOUSE"

California

Nazimova in the vital drama of Ibsen; a combination that embodies all that we have come to recognize as celluloid art! Thereto add the interest resultant of the knowledge that "A Doll's House" is the great Russian actress' first independent production, and we have before us an inevitable box office attraction. As for the photoplay itself, in it there is nothing left to desire. Technically, it is a gem; Charles Bryant's direction, and Charles Van Enger's photography being worthy of the star's most exquisite art, which gives us the vibrant, beautiful Nora of that great matrimonial drama. Never has the famous wife been given a lovelier, more alive interpretation than this one, and we remember well several worthy charactrizations of her (among which is listed one by Elsie Ferguson, screened a few years back); however, there is no avoiding the wonderful fact that Nazimova is really the heroine of this entirely human story. To attempt an analysis of the whimsical, childlike creature who, nevertheless, holds in her heart the extensive learning of all women in love and not a little surplus wisdom, is merely to retell the tale of Nazimova's charm, to repeat our former admiration of her great accomplishment. Anyway, it is more important that in Nora she gives us not only her own unapproachable drama, but Ibsen's vital lesson as well. There can be no question as to the artist's heart interest in her latest portrayal.

Alan Hale has not been more carefully

Pickups By The Staff

TO FIGHT FILM FAKES

Because inexperienced investors are said to have lost fifty millions during 1921 in film swindles, Director Alfred E. Green, formerly Mary Pickford's director, and now with Lasky, has started a movement in Hollywood to prevent the sale of fake stock to the American public.

It is the idea of Mr. Green to ally the various film organizations of New York and Los Angeles, including the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, the M. P. Directors' Association, M. P. Advertisers and like bodies.

The plan is not to exclude new capital and legitimate companies with the intention of actually producing, but rather "to discover and warn of out-and-out fake companies," declares Mr. Green, "give them pitiless publicity, thus warning the public so that no money will be subscribed. Our main object is merely to prevent the defrauding of the public, whose confidence we are striving to keep."

"Today there are a hundred thousand persons in this country who have invested in wild-cat outfits from whom they never could get one penny's return on their money," avers the director, "which is incentive enough to cause the industry to start a move to stamp out the practice."

CHAUDET CONFERING WITH ILLUMINATOR

Louis W. Chaudet, who is preparing to produce his own pictures, the first to be "The Pillagers" by W. C. Tuttle and Chaudet, is a believer in well lighted pictures, and is receiving information from E. V. Morris, illuminating engineer of Hal E. Roach Studios and a member of the Electrical Illuminating Engineers Society.

Masonic bodies of Northern California gave a ball recently in honor of Betty Compson and Tom Moore at Truckee, California, where these stars and their supporting company have been spending a month filming scenes for "Over the Border," based on a story by Sir Gilbert Parker.

George Melford's Paramount production, "Moran of the Lady Letty," presented by Jesse L. Lasky and co-starring Rudolph Valentino and Dorothy Dalton, opens the second week of its world premier engagement at Grauman's Rialto on Sunday, Feb. 19th.

While Victor Herbert was being escorted through United Studios by Sol Lesser, he found some of his favorite personal compositions in the impromptu music libraries of musicians who were playing on the sets. He was keenly interested in the application of music as a director's aide in controlling the emotions of the players. Mr. Herbert autographed his compositions for the musicians who were using them.

RUTH RENICK

COLE ON CENSORSHIP

"If censorship is necessary, it should be a Federal regulation and not a State censorship." This opinion was voiced by Rufus S. Cole at a recent discussion at the National Republican Club with Harry W. Taft, presiding. "Great loss and difficulty," said Mr. Cole, "are caused by the difference in regulations of different states, and the fact that no two censorship boards think alike.

"What is satisfactory in the State of New York," declared Mr. Cole, "does not meet the approval of the censorship board of the State of Pennsylvania; likewise what is approved in Pennsylvania may not be approved in New York. In my belief, the public is the best censor, for the public can be depended upon in the long run to reward with its patronage the clean picture plays.

"If censorship is to be continued, there should be a definite code of regulations so that the producers may know where they stand. If we must have censorship, it would be far better if we were under Federal regulation."

POST FIGHTS HIMSELF

One of the scenes in the story of "The Masquerader," the Richard Walton Tully production starring Guy Bates Post, will be a battle between Chilcote and Loder, both of these roles being played by Post.

AT THE UNITED STUDIOS

Marion Fairfax has completed the script of Edison Marshall's "Snow Shoe Trail," which is to be Jane Novak's next starring vehicle under the auspices of Chester Bennett Productions at United Studios. Camera work will commence about February 27th, and the company will proceed at once to a snow location, probably in Canada.

Mrs. James Whipple, wife of the assistant to Director James Young, who is making the final scenes of "The Masquerader," starring Guy Bates Post, makes her bow on the screen with a bit in "The Masquerader," as does her very young daughter, who made her debut as the infant in "Without Benefit of Clergy."

Hunt Strombury is busily engaged in the formation of the organization which will assist him in the production of the two-reel comedies in which Bull Montana is to star.

Allen Holubar has practically completed the cast which will appear in support of Dorothy Phillips in "The Soul Seeker," which Mr. Holubar is producing for presentation by First National. But one role remains uncast, that of principal female support to Miss Phillips. The company is now shooting interiors at United and will return to the schooner, "Apollo," at San Pedro late this week.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Three more "Snub" Pollard comedies were previewed this week and have since been shipped to New York: "Days of Old," an oriental extravaganza suggested by the Arabian Nights tales; "Light Showers," a real estate comedy, and "Do Your Duty," a pawn shop story.

Tom McNamara has arrived at the studios and is lining up his work with the new children's comedy company for which he will write the scripts.

The current Harold Lloyd comedy is nearing completion and four and a half reels are assembled. The picture is expected to run to five reels.

Hal E. Roach has signed Al Santell and Gilbert Pratt, who will alternate as directors for "Paul" Parrott in his one-reel comedies, production of which begins presently. Mr. Roach has now under consideration a leading lady for Mr. Parrott and will make his announcement shortly. Other support will be recruited from the stock actors on the lot. Frank Young will be cameraman in the newly organized company.

The children's comedy company will commence production next week of its second picture, Bob McGowan, directing. Added scenes for the first picture, "Our Gang," were taken this week.

Hal E. Roach is interviewing cameramen to secure a second cameraman for the Harry "Snub" Pollard two-reel comedies, for which two films will be shot, one for domestic and the other for foreign trade.

CALDWELL PREPARING NEXT

Fred Caldwell, director of the Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers, is busily engaged in writing the continuity for his next picture, "The Release," written by Mrs. A. B. Maescher, and starring Josephine Hill.

TERRISS STARTS ON FIRST

Tom Terriss has started work on the first of a series of Terriss Productions. Dolores Cassinelli will appear in this picture, which is under way in Fort Lee, N. J.

POSSIBLE CENSORSHIP FOR VIRGINIA

A bill creating a board of motion picture censors and vesting the board with broad powers has been introduced in the Senate of Virginia and a kindred measure will be offered in the House of Delegates. The board, like the New York Censor Commission, is to be appointed by the Governor.

VITAGRAPH MAKES ANOTHER PURCHASE

"Gypsy Passion," a French production, has been recently purchased by Albert Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, from a French producing company. He has obtained the rights in Canada and the United States to this picture, founded on "Miarka, the Child of the Bear," by Jean Richepin. It will be released in March.

EDWARD PIEL

PATHE HAS STARTED SUIT

Pathe has started suit in the New York Supreme Court against George Cobb, Helen Hosmer and Joseph Levensen, members of the State Motion Picture Commission, to determine the rights of Pathe News in publishing on the screen certain news features that were eliminated by the censor board. The scenes in question were of bathing girls which the censors refused to approve for the screen, although the photographs were published in daily newspapers. Whether or not the power of this censor board extends beyond eliminating immoral and improper scenes from a film play, whether or not it has the right to snip footage from a film newspaper that does not seem to them to be good material for the public—that is the question.

The fight will be to a finish, and since it is a precedent most persons are hoping some definite ruling will be made, so the world can know just how much power the Governor's board has as State censors.

"Darlin'" has been chosen as the release title for the new Rupert Hughes-Goldwyn picture.

Ralph Obenchain has completed his first motion picture, "The Main in a Million," produced by Charles R. Seeling, and negotiations are under way for a Los Angeles theatre to give the picture a California premier.

AT UNIVERSAL

Roy Atwell, well known for his interpretation of comedy roles, is being starred in a short reel comedy. Craig Hutchinson is directing. Atwell played with Marie Prevost in "Don't Get Personal."

Marie Prevost is on her way to Oakland, 'Frisco and the North on a personal appearance tour. She recently completed "Kissed," and will return in time to start work on "The Night of Nights," tentative title of her forthcoming production.

Willie Wyler, who has done foreign publicity in the company's executive offices in New York, has arrived at the West Coast studios. He is attached to the casting department, of which Fred Datig is the director.

Reginald Barker and his entire company recently returned from Belden, California, in Feather Canyon, where they were on location for two weeks.

Extensive remodelling of the "conning tower" is being hurried before the arrival of Carl Laemmle from the East. The president will occupy the big office on the tower overlooking the studio.

Irving G. Thalberg, director-general, and his staff have recently moved into remodelled offices on the main floor of the administration building.

Two completed pictures are now in the cutting room soon to be released: "Kissed," Marie Prevost's most recent vehicle, and "The Way Back," starring Frank Mayo.

Priscilla Dean has finished "That Lass o' Lowrie," under the direction of Hobart Henley. Robert Ellis plays the principal roles in Miss Dean's support, and other members of the cast include Beatrice Burnham, Kathryn McGuire, little Frankie Lee, Grace DeGarro, R. O. Pennell, Dorothy Hagan and Evelyn McCoy. Miss Dean is vacationing in San Francisco, but will return presently to begin production on "Under Two Flags," the novel by Ouida in which she will interpret the exotic role of "Cigarette." A director has not yet been assigned.

"SALOME" NEARING COMPLETION

Work on the Nazimova production of "Salome" is nearing completion under Charles Bryant's direction at the United Studios.

In her development of the scenic elements of the story, Mme. Nazimova has followed the pictorial lines and color of the artist, Audrey Beardsley.

HORNER ACQUIRES LUDDY FILM

Bob Horner, general manager of the Western Classic Sales Company, has acquired for distribution, Edward I. Luddy's western special, "The Man Who Waited," featuring Frank Braidwood and Inez MacDonald.

CHAPLIN IN FEATURE LENGTH COMEDIES

"Pay Day" has been chosen by Charlie Chaplin as the name of his new comedy, which is in two reels. After he makes one more short picture for First National, Chaplin proposes to devote himself to feature length comedies for United Artists.

PHILIPPINES TO HAVE CENSORSHIP

According to the Manila Bulletin, the mayor of Manila has been requested by Governor-General Leonard Wood to appoint a committee of three to censor motion pictures there.

AT LASKY'S

Scenes in a newspaper office and a Woman's Club in a small town occupied the attention this week of the company making "Our Leading Citizen," by George Ade, with Thomas Meighan as star. Alfred Green is directing this production and Lois Wilson has the feminine lead. Theodore Roberts and others appear in the cast.

Word received from Truckee, Cal., is to the effect that Penrhyn Stanlaws will bring his troupe, headed by Betty Compson and Tom Moore, back to the studio in a very short time.

The southern extremity of the state is the present locale of scenes for "The Dictator" in which Wallace Reid will star. James Cruze took a large company southward this week for South American episodes in this play by Richard Harding Davis. Theodore Kosloff plays a character role, with the villain interpreted by Alan Hale.

Under the direction of Rollin Sturgeon, Jack Holt and Bebe Daniels, co-stars in "Val of Paradise," are now engaged in exterior scenes somewhere in Arizona and will probably be gone for ten days longer.

The 27th of February has been designated as the starting date for "The Gilded Cage," in which Gloria Swanson will star. David Powell will arrive shortly to play the leading male role and it will be a Sam Wood production.

The latter part of February will in all probability witness the initial productional work on "Blood and Sand," in which Rudolph Valentino will make his stellar debut.

GUILD TO CELEBRATE INDEPENDENCE WEEK

The Independent Screen Artists' Guild, composed of forty prominent producers and stars in the film world, makes the following appeal to the public of Southern California:

"We appeal to the public to continue their patronage of the new art of the cinema, that it may progress and not retrogress. We appeal that the worthy may survive, that the photoplay of moral theme and artistic merit may reach greater heights. And in return we pledge that our purpose shall be an undying effort to please the public and to justify the confidence which has been reposed in us."

The Guild, standing steadfastly against monopolistic control, has invited the independent theatre owners throughout America to join them in their first national exhibition to celebrate their independence during the week of February 18th.

VIRGINIA BROWN FAIRE

The part the stars will play in this nation-wide exposition will be a display of their best pictures.

The theatres in Los Angeles which have joined in the demonstration and will present these features are, The Kinema, Loew's State, Miller's, Clune's Broadway and The Alhambra.

Included among the signatories of the Guild are Charles Chaplin, Norma Talmadge, Constance Talmadge, Marshall Neilan, Thomas H. Ince, Richard Barthelmess, Anita Stewart, Joseph M. Schenck, Louis B. Mayer, Katherine MacDonald, Mack Sennett, Maurice Tourneur, R. A. Walsh, Miriam Cooper, Dorothy Phillips, Colleen Moore, Allen Holubar, Buster Keaton, Mabel Normand, J. Parker Read Jr., John M. Stahl, Richard Walton Tully, Charles Christie, B. P. Schulberg, H. O. Davis, J. L. Frothingham, Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven, Freckles Barry, Hope Hampton, King and Florence Vidor, and in person, not proxy, little Jackie Coogan.

Mack Sennett has planned a big comedy campaign and has arranged to exhibit twelve comedies in Southern California and Arizona theatres. A few of the comedies are "By Heck," "Be Reasonable," "Hard Knocks and Love Taps," "Call a Cop," "She Sighed by the Seaside," "Made in the Kitchen," "A Small Town Idol," "Home Talent," "Love, Honor and Behave" and "Married Life." Mabel Normand will be seen in a dozen these as in the ving role of "Molly-O."

Ben Turpin plans to celebrate by making some personal appearances at theatres in Southern California and Arizona where his latest Mack Sennett comedies are being exhibited. Ben will appear on the screen in the local theatres in "Bright Eyes," his very latest, "Love and Doughnuts" and "Love's Outcast."

J. L. Frothingham's photoplays, "The Ten Dollar Raise," and "Pilgrims of the Night," will be exhibited.

Eight Charles Ray productions will be used, these being "Two Minutes to Go," "A Midnight Bell," "Scrap Iron," "The Old Swimmin' Hole," "19 and Phyllis," "Peaceful Valley" and "45 Minutes From Broadway." Charlie's latest, "R. S. V. P.," will be given its first western presentation at the West End Theatre, Santa Ana, on Washington's birthday.

First National Specials, "Alf's Button," "All for a Woman," "Cabiria" and "The Sentimental Bloke" will be exhibited in many theatres.

Nearly a score of Schenck productions will be shown. Norma Talmadge's "Love Redemption" will be the attraction at the Kinema. "Connie" Talmadge will be represented by "Polly of the Follies," "Woman's Place," "Wedding Bells," "Lessons in Love," "Mamma's Affair" and a half dozen other productions.

Buster Keaton will celebrate by showing his latest comedies, "The Blacksmith," "The Paleface," "The Boat," and "The Playhouse" in the Los Angeles district.

EARLE COMPANY BACK IN NEW YORK

The William P. S. Earle company has returned to New York from its trip to the subtropical Bahamas and Miami. Its members are now installed in the Biograph studios, where interiors are being filmed. Added to the company, in which Ward Crane and Virginia Lee have the principal parts, are Mario Mageroni, George Fawcett and Pauline Dempsey. The picture will be called "Destiny's Isles."

SCREEN RUMORS

The Associated Press reports from London that Sarah Bernhardt has accepted an offer of American film interests to act for a series of films.

It is understood that Burton George, the director, is in Vienna making some scenes for an American company.

It is rumored that Fred Quimby and Jack Woody have pooled their resources and are about to buy an interest in one of the large producing and distributing companies.

Mr. Woody was formerly manager of Realart, a position he held until that company was absorbed by Famous Players-Lasky. Mr. Quimby, since his resignation as general manager of Pathe, has had various film interests, among them an interest in the Dempsey-Carpentier pictures.

When Ferdinand Pinney Earle begins casting for his production of "Faust," probably one of the first actors he will interview will be Howard Davies, who has played the title role, both here and abroad.

It is said that Harry Garson is arranging a new release for the Clara Kimball Young productions. The report is that he has finished with Equity, made arrangements with Selznick, and is about to sign a new contract for Miss Young.

Hal Wilson and W. E. "Babe" Lawrence are suppotring Gareth Hughes in a special production which Louis Burston is filming.

Clarence Burton and Edward Sutherland are enacting prominent roles in "The Ordeal," in which Agnes Ayres will star for Paramount.

"MAN TO MAN"

(Universal)

"Opening on one of the islands of the South Seas, the action of 'Man to Man,' a Universal-Jewel, starring Harry Carey, soon shifts to a Western ranch. Not only is this one of the most entertaining of this star's pictures, but it also gives him opportunities for some of the best acting of his career. The story is interesting * * *

"A striking feature of this production is the excellent photography, there are some fine lighting effects, many good shots of large herds of cattle and good views of a cattle stampede which is checked by a brush fire."—Moving Picture World.

"Here's one of the best Westerns of the season. It is almost up ot Harry Carey's 'The Fox.' Coupled with a most interesting story are some wonderful exterior shots of the cattle country that are well worth seeing. And at the start the tropical storm among the palm-covered islands of the South Seas is a thrilling bit of technical execution * * * There is no padding and there is action every minute."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"A simple melodrama based upon the conflict between a persecuted hero who comes into his inheritance and a vicious villain determined to harass him at every opportunity is 'Man to Man,' Harry Carey's latest release * * *

"It is a type of picture which could get along very well without any romance. Whenever it does intrude you feel as if it was lugged in for the sake of balance. What is important is the wealth of physical action * * * The big punch which carries out the force of the title finds Carey and Le Moyne fighting hand-to-hand in the caves and crevices of a rocky cliff. Here the director has brought forth some good shadow photography as well as some effective lighting. It all suggests good suspense."—Motion Picture News.

"KINDRED OF THE DUST"

(First National)

"Mr. Walsh's latest Coast-made production gives certain proof, if any was needed, that he not only knows direction and the necessary touches for audience appeal, but that he understands and appreciates the value of originality of treatment. It is this fact that makes 'Kindred of the Dust' a rare piece of entertainment.

"It shows Miriam Cooper at her sentimental best; it contains splendid photography, including a novel 'focus-out' instead of a 'fade-out.' * * * There is sentiment, humor, rugged exteriors, a fine thrill, tense suspense and a fight realistic enough to startle anyone * * *"—Motion Picture News.

"Through the medium of a story that has unquestionable general appeal, R. A. Walsh has provided First National with a release that will without doubt prove to be an unusually strong 'audience picture.'

"In injecting what might be called little, artistic touches with well placed frequency, the introduction of several well staged 'punches' and with the aid of a highly expert cameraman, Walsh has greatly relieved what might be the only objection raised against the picture, that of familiarity of the theme, of which it should be stated again, constant use has not denuded it of its popularity."—Moving Picture World.

"THE PRODIGAL JUDGE"

(Vitagraph)

"This Vitagraph super feature is, as announced on the screen, a free adaptation of Vaughan Kester's widely-known novel. It is, to one who has read the book, a bit jumpy, but no mean task was set the adapters, since the novel had several stories running through it, presenting a difficult bit of craftsmanship * * *

"The story has been changed quite a bit, the original story having the Judge the boy's grandfather, but the change seems for the best, as the plot is involved enough as it is.

"Some excellent night scenes, particularly on the water, help the atmosphere."—Exhibitors Herald.

"Maclyn Arbuckle's characterization of the title role in 'The Prodigal Judge,' that beloved composite of vagabondage and geniality, is a feat that places this production among those destined to be remembered * * Mr. Arbuckle has put heart, soul and character not only into his part, but into the whole production.

"The opportunities for drama are many and the last part of the picture, especially, excels in the way the big scenec are handled."—Moving Picture World.

"It has been a long time since we have seen so pleasing a picture as 'The Prodigal Judge.' It is fast in action, splendid in settings and photography and other technical details, possesses a real story and is acted in excellent fashion.

"More than all these things, however, it contains one of the most lovable characters ever given to the screen—Judge Price, as played by Maclyn Arbuckle."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"'The Prodigal Judge' will be remembered as a picture for its clearly defined characterization and its rich and quaint atmosphere. Certainly no feature reaching the screen this past season has contained more bibrant personalities * * *

"'The Prodigal Judge,' however, is dominated by a single character in spite of the other sketches. And here is where Maclyn Arbuckle comes into his own with one of the richest studies ever flashed on the screen. He has seemingly stepped from Kester's book, his personality harmonizing perfectly with the figure of the imagination."—Moving Picture News.

"THE NIGHT ROSE"

(Goldwyn)

"The picture is vividly interesting and tells a gripping story in the best moving picture manner, from all angles * * * It is a fine entertainment, with a distinct sociological angle. It is the kind of picture every-

Resources Forty Million Dollars

A New Type of Leading Man

By Ted LeBerthon

The morigerous press-agentry has so often scribbled superlatively of gaudy fellows and giddy ladies and with such pronounced flatulence, that one is prone to slyly chuckle at much that one reads concerning this or that cinema player. Many truly specious boys and gals of the genus dumbbell have received colored and perfumed compliments on silver salvers from magazine interviewers—so that those of us who are a bit droll and disillusioned regard film fame as a quite venal affair.

Yet in this most illusory of worlds, with all its grotesque and preposterous values, we scribblers sometimes see clearly—and on rare occasions may write what seems true to us.

Gaston Glass is a handsome young Frenchman, of quiet, determined mien who emanates culture, sapience and vitality; he looks as though he might be usually quite outwardly composed and restrained, while sonnets and madrigals were decocting within him. He is related on his father's side to Victor Hugo, and his presence bespeaks the inherent culture of old lines. To sum this up, he seems to be a poetic fellow and—a gentleman.

He reads first rate literature and has a deep reverence for certain rare and singularly beautiful verse. Although he is an actor first, he is also a playwright, having composed many one-act plays for the Grand Guigol at Paris and a four-act comedy, "Who Said Love?" which may be performed this season in New York.

He was born in Paris and toured America for the first time a very few years ago with Mme. Sarah Bernhardt. He was with the divine Sarah a year and a half. He is thoroughly familiar with sound dramatic literature and has given commendable performances in such plays as Rostand's "Chanticleer" and "Cyrano de Bergerac." At the Paris Conservatory of Arts and Music, where he completed his academic education, he was awarded a much coveted prize upon writing a highly amusing and subtle comedy. Although in his early twenties, he distinguished himself in dramatic acting to the extent of attracting the attention, recognition and esteem of the leading Continental critics.

In America, he was attracted by the cinema, with which he had not even flirted in the old world. His first engagement was as leading man with Marguerite Clark in "Let's Elope." Since then he has appeared opposite Shirley Mason and Viola Dana, and won a high place in the cinema sun through his creditable performance in "The World and His Wife" and "Humoresque." This week he may be seen to considerable advantage at the Kinema in "The Song of Life."

He has just started work on a new photodrama under the direction of Edwin Carewe, and is in a happy and sunny mood, as this marks his first professional activity since his automobile was hit by a street car—he was confined to a sick-bed for six weeks, recovering from injuries.

There is considerable fine stuff in this good-looking Frenchman. I asked him to give me some idea as to what he would consider an ideal role in pictures, and he replied that he did not care to be so presumptious, as if he mentioned some ideal role in some ideal play it would be patent that he believed he could satisfactorily enact the role.

I touched upon music. His reply was: "I love so much in music, painting and sculpture but deeply regret that I have no talent for these arts."

He was rather reticent about expressing opinions on the trend of motion pictures, the ideal motion picture—or his own future.

Once or twice I used the word "art" in speaking of the motion pictures, and he looked at me oddly and rather sadly; and as to his future, he was most delightfully unconcerned.

Gaston Glass is of too high an order of intelligence to have crystallized opinions. He has undoubtedly seen and known much of life, and has seen too many theories and conclusions exploded, to think of joining the interminable procession of "art" uplifters.

His is a sound and solid presence, despite the poetical aura; he seems to me markedly reflective and unhysterical—a spectator on a hill-top watching the whimsical, pathetic parade go by, with its cheap gauds and trumperies.

Unless I am roundly mistaken, he will never become a Rotary Club or Chautauqua

Editorial

"Such tales are supposed to be 'exciting,' and they are—much as were their predecessors on the Midway. They excite a strong desire to take an antiseptic bath and wash out one's mouth and nostrils with listerine.

"One may pass the usual moral objections to such rot. Its very disgustingness makes it less harmful to the reader than might be supposed. One may even ignore—though it is unlikely that the victims will do so—the wickedness of trying to blacken the reputations of men and women against whom no formal, definite accusation has been made. Even with these considerations out of the way, the vile taste of the stuff coming out of Hollywood is enough to condemn it; and it is a wretched perversion of one of the oldest and noblest arts on earth.

"When Theophile Gautier was asked by some patronizing person of accidental prominence what his occupation was, he answered: 'Madame, I am a reporter.' Though one of the foremost men of letters of his day, that title was good enough for him, and he was right in holding it so. To learn and tell some new thing, and tell it truly, that is the reporter's craft. When men who know such a craft are set to doing harem dances in print—ah, what a fall is there!"

TWO KINDS OF WOMEN"

(Robertson-Cole)

" 'The kind of a woman who can,' contrasted to the kind who can't, is rather sternly characterized by Pauline Frederick in this picture of California ranch life which shows woman in a comparatively new office, that of ranch owner and manager * * *

"There is one shot, that for scenic and lighting splendor is one of the most strikingly beautiful ever seen on the screen."—Moving Picture World.

"It may seem strange to picturegoers to discover Pauline Frederick in a Western. That she is able to give color and personality to the character of a breezy ranch owner goes without question * * *

"There is some good incident established when this Eastern girl arrives on the ranch and determines to manage it in her own way * * * Intersperced with the intimate scenes are a group of marvelously beautiful long shots—one in particular showing a lake silhouetted against the distant mountains.

"The picture is a colorful Western even though it goes over a beaten track in its development."—Motion Picture News.

"Pauline Frederick surely can ride and play the daughter of the West. In addition to offering an interesting and entertaining photoplay, R-C presents Miss Frederick in a new guise and the part fits her as though made for her. It has enough action and thrilling situations for a serial, and, crowded into six reels, it is a real thriller * * *

"There are no objectionable sex situations nor anything not fit for the young mind * * * "—Exhibitors Trade Review.

It is reported that D. W. Griffith has practically completed a deal with William Fox for the foreign rights to "Two Orphans." Until negotiations are closed the picture's producer cannot sell any foreign territory on "Orphans of the Storm" because those rights are controlled by the Fox organization.

Griffith was recently in Chicago in connection with the film's premiere there.

favorite, will never palaver around feebleminded clubwomen, or become interested in "the higher life."

He looks as though he enjoys life with the ardour of a bon vivant, a student, and a connoiseur. The American screen needs more such intelligent actors—and less horn-rimmed ex-lodge joiners and putteed ex-haberdashers.

Whether Gaston Glass, with his handsome, classic features and sensitive, poetic personality, will become a popular favorite—is to me problematical. He may be a bit "over the heads" of the gals in the hinterland, who at present writing seem to prefer pomaded fox-trotters, ukelele players and saxaphonists.

But you never can tell. Allow Monsieur Glass a few romantic roles, and the gals' styles in leading men may change.

PALMER PLAY CORP. PHOTOPLAY

Why Studios "Close Down"

It is both notable and significant that most of the studios which have NOT "closed down" during the last year have been regular clients of the Photoplay Sales Department of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Four years ago we expressed the opinion that producers who consistently select their plays because of their intrinsic screenability, rather than because of their "literary" value, were destined to achieve and maintain financial success.

And now, four years later, we hold tenaciously and justifiably to the same opinion.

Nor have the producers who have regularly come to Story Headquarters for their stories had occasion to differ from that opinion. They have been too busy making good pictures for a market that is starving for good pictures to entertain the thought of "closing down."

It is not the policy of the Palmer Sales Department to urge the purchase of one story at a high price (just to make a sale), but rather to endeavor to select material that will make for continuous successful production.

Brackett's view, who points out that motion picture machines already are being used in many schools in the United States, the city og Chicago having installed machines in more than 100 schools to supplement text books."

"ENGLISH WRITER'S COLOSSAL IGNORANCE"

An article in oh so familiar a line appears in the latest Australian "Everyone's Variety" at hand.

The sarcasm of the press toward its partners-in-crime is proverbial—and amusing.

"Mr. George F. Todd, of Australsian Films, Ltd., asks whether we receive a copy of the 'Hepworth Magazine,' a publication emanating from one British producer, and for which a charge of fourpence is made—a goodly sum to pay for a house organ dealing with Hepworth films. 'Maybe the contributed articles,' says Mr. Todd, 'enable it to sell freely at fourpence, as they are, in parts, of curious interest, as witness the following under the heading of 'World Market for British Films':

Australia, too, is beginning to realize the joy of the kinema. The field has scarcely been touched in this country. More kinemas are needed, and when the new railway has opened up the country and the millions of new settlers are working, they will want something in the way of pictures, even if it is nothing more than the travelling kind that did such excellent work in the war.

Add to this our smaller possessions—New Zealand, Newfoundland and Tasmania—all actual or potential markets for our British films.

If we are driven to apply ad valorem tax in self defense, to keep out foreign films, pressure must be brought to bear on the Commonwealth to apply it also; but our film magnates, makers, renters, buyers and exporters have all got to "think big."

"Undoubtedly Miss Christabel Lowndes-Yates, the writer of the article is 'thinking big' when she deals with the Antipodes.

"Turning to page 24, one finds a page devoted to letters to the editor, under the caption 'Unsolicited,' and it is more than amusing to note the attention the editor (Cecil Palmer) gives to this page, when we read that 'From Over Yonder' the editor has received some copies of the Union Photoplayer, an Australian weekly devoted to the kinema,' and from which he prints several extracts which show that the Hepworth post-war productions are being introduced to Australian audiences via Union Theatres."

A Re-Suggestion

There are few departments of the motion picture industry that have not suffered keenly from the two most recent film tragedies, largely as a direct result of the deplorable angles taken by the press upon the situations. Besides being subjected as a class to the indignities crowded uopn us by hundreds of highly imaginative, scandal-scattering, sob writers and the inevitable detrimental effect upon public opinion, which always follows in the wake of such attacks, several producing companies have had to endure huge financial losses when exhibitors, through various censor board regulations, have found it necessary to cancel the runs of elaborate productions presenting individuals concerned in the cases, or sometimes merely suspected of being concerned. It is, therefore, easy to perceive that being much in the public eye, we are not only doomed to sustain the unhappy consequences of our professional brother's indiscretions but of their alleged missteps as well. That is, we are doomed to such a fate if we tolerate it. Let it be hoped that the third industry will display sufficient resourcefulness to combat any such threatening condition.

As an invaluable solution to this problem we refer to the Character Bond, a suggestion made months ago by this publication, which, had it been adopted at that time by the Producers Association, would have eliminated seventy-five per cent of the moral and monetary difficulties which have fairly seethed about us since the first newspaper report upon the Arbuckle affair. Not only would a demand upon the part of the producing company for a character bond from each and every artist in its employ diminish the chances taken by that organization upon irresponsible people and protect it against any financial loss from the acts of its employees, but it would also render impossible the condemnation of a studio, not to mention an entire industry, for the mistakes of an individual.

When we consult statistics we realize that for every picture person who goes wrong there are half a dozen bank clerks and commercially engaged citizens in the same boat. But when has the banking business been ostracized from decent society because of the errors of its various attaches? No syndicate of newspapers assumes to question its whole structure on that account. And it is because bank employees are individually under heavy bonds and stringent moral obligations that the many are protected from the effect of the few misguided outlooks among them.

We believe that the average actor or director with nothing to lose and everything to gain would be greatly gratified to supply such a guarantee of his life and intentions, knowing that a step of this kind would secure his own position as well as the confidence of those for whom he might work.

The film industry will have to come to this idea as a part of its business routine or be unnecessarily injured further by the injustice of an hysterical populace.

"Foolish Wives"

Mission

Universal's much heralded spectacle, "Foolish Wives," has, after nearly two years of preparation, been released to the extreme gratification of the profession and the increased curiosity of the public.

Erich Von Stroheim, author-director-actor, who conceived and executed this most startling pageant of life in Monte Carlo, has outdone all late attempts toward the lavish in picture production with this offering to such an extent as to render its description nearly impossible in a necessarily curtailed review.

However, his Monte Carlo, an exact replica of the original, so we are told by those who know, is a fairyland more enticing, more extravagant than any that has yet come to the celluloid. The gay crowds indulging in typically Monte Carlo sports, the ever changing ocean by day and the thousands of merry lights, motors and gaming tables of the Casino at night lend educatinal value as well as brilliance to the production. There, however, perhaps unfortunately, its beneficial influence terminates—abruptly.

The Von Stroheim story which strings this delightful exhibition together may be written around human representatives of Europe's great degenerate class and, if such is the case, perhaps its screening is justified this time; but once is enough—for America.

The satiated Continent, which is said to feast in keenest joy upon all that is filthy in entertainment, may reimburse Universal for this picture, a tribute which our country will never pay, due to the fact that, as a whole, it will mightily disapprove the salacious subjects harped upon in the presentation of this not overly weighty theme. The fact that the arch villain, whose five unworthy conquests form the plot's basis, is finally condemned, killed and thrust down to a significant level, scarcely saves the dignity of the thought behind the lesson, and, indeed, it is doubtful if the moral will be noted anyway, least of all by our cinema reformers. Nor will the artistic interpretations of the cast excuse that which is repulsive and disgusting in the story to those without the profession.

From a technical consideration the report upon "Foolish Wives" varies. Its gorgeous sets and effects have been mentioned in superlatives. Its photography is exquisite; its detail has been convincingly looked after,

Film Capital Production Notes

"A LADIES' MAN," FIRST MONTANA COMEDY

Hunt Stromberg, who has withdrawn from the active production of the Doris May pictures, to make his own independent productions, announces "A Ladies' Man," as his first comedy to launch Bull Montana as a star. Negotiations and a long-term contract with Montana were closed last week, with Douglas Fairbanks representing Montana's business interests.

Stromberg's entrance into the ranks of the independent producers is in line with plans and policies which provide for the acquisition of other feature units to be announced in the near future. Mr. Stromberg still retains his financial interests in the Doris May productions, which he founded and organized last June, and which are to be continued for production and distribution by Robertson-Cole.

"A Ladies' Man," was written by Stromberg, and production is now under way at the United Studios.

The personnel of the production staff will be announced shortly.

GERSON CORPORATION MAKING RURAL COMEDIES

The Paul Gerson Pictures Corporation of San Francisco will start production February 20th on twelve two-reel, rural comedies, under the direction of Robert Eddy, who directed the original Toonerville Trolley Comedies. Mr. Eddy has brought the original cast from New York, headed by Dan Mason, who created the part of the skipper, and Wilma Webster, who played Katrinka. The new comedies will be of similar nature.

"PETERMAN" HAS PRISON PREMIERE

A national premiere of a film probably without parallel took place the other day at the Arizona State Prison when the first showing was made of "Peterman," recently produced at Universal, and starring Herbert Rawlinson.

The author of the story is Louis Victor Eytinge, a life-termer in the prison who has served more than fourteen years of his sentence. He is doubtless the best known convict in America because of his proven talents. The picture was first shown at the prison as a compliment to him.

RENEW CONTRACT

R-C Pictures and Jury's Imperial Pictures of Great Britain recently renewed a distribution contract which gives the latter the R-C output in England, for two more years.

DAWN IN YOSEMITE

Norman Dawn with his company is in Yosemite National Park, where he expects to remain for two weeks, filming exteriors for his forthcoming R-C production, a Jack London story entitled, "The Son of the Wolf."

Frank Lloyd is progressing with the cutting of "The Duchesse de Langeais," which Norma Talmadge recently completed at United Studios.

NEW DEVELOPING MACHINE

A developing machine invented by L. J. Simmons is being demonstrated at the American Machine and Foundry Co., in Brooklyn, N. Y. The machine is said to be able to develop and dry film at the rate of 8,000 feet an hour under control of one operator. The company holding the invention is controlled by Pittsburgh capitalists.

ABRAMSON BUSY WITH COOGAN TITLES

Max Abramson, scenario and title writer, has been engaged by the Jackie Coogan productions to assist in making titles for "Trouble," Jackie's latest cinemaplay.

Mr. Abramson acted in a like capacity with Jackie's "My Boy" feature. The "Trouble" film will be ready for exhibition within several weeks and in the meantime, work is being rushed on a new story for Jackie, actual filming of which will commence in two weeks at United Studios.

COMMONWEALTH NOTES

The title of the third picture, produced by Fred Caldwell for the Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers, has been changed from "The Dominating Eyes," to "Caught."

Mr. Caldwell is now casting for the fourth picture of the series of twelve, being released through the Affiliated Picture Enterprises.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd took the last scenes this week of his current comedy which will probably be released as "Grandma's Boy." The comedy, which will be previewed as a five reeler, will have its first public showing presently, followed by two others in addition to several studio runs. Following the picture's final editing, Mr. Lloyd will take a three days' rest and then commence his first comedy under his new contract with Pathe, for which sets will cover the entire dark stage.

Harry "Snub" Pollard finished this week an office picture, and is now working on two comedies to be completed next week when Mr. Pollard will commence his two reelers, William Beaudine, directing. Eight Pollard comedies have been shipped East since Jan. 1st.

Tom McNamara, cartoonist of the comic strips, "Us Boys," has his first script ready for the children's comedy company, "shooting," to commence this week. "Sunshine Sammy," and three other youngsters, will be in the cast and the animals to be featured include "Cork," the Pony, "Dinah," the mule, "Bill," the bull dog and several domestic fowls. Bob McGowan will direct.

"Paul" Parrott begins next week the making of his one-reel comedies, the first to have the working title of "The Joiner." Gilbert Pratt directs his first picture; Al Santell, the second; the two to alternate in Parrott's direction. Hal Roach will shortly announce Mr. Parrott's leading lady.

AT THE INCE STUDIOS

Completion of Thomas H. Ince's, "The Brotherhood of Hate," which Lambert Hillyer is directing, has been delayed by bad weather. Most of the scenes remaining to be taken are exteriors.

Casting has started for "Someone to Love," a new C. Gardner Sullivan story, soon to start production under the direction of John Griffith Wray.

The editing of Leah Baird's second independent feature, "When the Devil Drives," was completed this week under the supervision of Arthur F. Beck. A third Leah Baird production will commence soon.

Maurice Tourneur's feature, "Lorna Doone," will be completed within the next two weeks. Two months will probably be required in editing the production.

AT UNIVERSAL

Robert F. Hill is directing Harry Myers, Gertrude Olmstead, Noble Johnson, Josef Swickard, Gertrude Claire, Percy Pembroke and others in sea sequences of "The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," using Santa Monica and Balboa principally.

Stuart Payton and Tod Browning are preparing stories for their forthcoming production.

Current Reviews

"A BLIND BARGAIN"

California

It is probably because of the fact that Lon Chaney's best and most sensational work has been along the lines of the grotesque and unnatural that Goldwyn continues to place him in hair-raising characters and impossible stories. These latter, including "A Blind Bargain," this week's local release, have very little legitimate drama to their credit and are greatly lacking from a human angle, but—the barbarous strain, obvious in most children and varyingly present in all humanity, which still sends us forth in search of uncivilized thrills albeit second-hand ones, receives the most exaggerated melodrama with enthusiasm not to say with gloating. Even the phrase, "suspense and terror," packs them in, and because of this fact, it still has a definite place in our screen entertainment.

"A Blind Bargain," by Barry Pain, is a weird story of a mad surgeon who attempts to prove Darwin's theory of evolution by experimenting with blood transfusion between apes and human beings. The horror of his victims' fate, in itself extremely blood-curdling, is lent an even shriller tone by J. G. Hawks' arrangement of it.

Director Wallace Worsley has kept the tempo of his players consistent throughout the production which is entirely well handled, and Norbert Brodin's camera-work is brilliant in places. Some superior color work is effectively employed in one sequence.

Chaney occupies two distinct positions in this picture, devoting to each of them all the vividness which has brought him to the fore in the gruesome things. He plays Dr. Lamb, the diabolical scientist who knows only cruelty and ambition with a staccato swing that almost mystifies the audience in an instance or so. Chaney also interprets the hunchback, or Lamb's second disastrous experiment, whose man's mind has not been affected by the transfused blood, which has caused him to assume the proportions and appearance of an ape. His agile use of his powerful forearms is so realistic as to approach the masterly in imitation. That this hideous creature retains the gentle, human spirit that was originally his, makes the role a departure in its line. These characterizations are equally strong, the work of a pronounced artist.

Raymond McKee performs sympathetically as the sincere juvenile, Robert Sandell, who is willing to sacrifice all things for an invalid mother, and thus comes under the doctor's power. McKee is invariably appealing in this type of work.

Fontaine La Rue adds an invaluable touch to the story with her illusive portrayal of Mrs. Lamb, the doctor's cowed but rebellious wife.

Jacqueline Logan as Angela, Robert's sweetheart, Virginia True Boardman, Aggie Herring and Virginia Madison, complete the cast.

"A Blind Bargain" is absolutely unrelieved by comedy or any lighter element. We shall be interested to see how it draws over the country.

Arthur Jasmine is enacting a role of prominence in the Jack London story of old Alaska, "The Son of the Wolfe," which Norman Dawn is directing for R-C pictures.

"LOVE'S REDEMPTION"

Kinema

We would like to register a large complaint that one of America's most representative and capable dramatic actresses, Norma Talmadge, should be compelled, through someone's lack of foresight, to star in a series of convenional hokum that is not only a discredit to her ability but a grave injury to her reputation, almost unexcelled three years ago. Her latest vehicle, a done-to-death story of dishwatery consistency, in an Anthony Paul Kelly adaptation of a novel by Andrew Soutar, including not a single diverting situation and certainly no different one. A reel into the picture and everything is clear step by step through to the end. There is no climax worthy of the name and very little sympathy for the weak-kneed characters. Neither the scenario nor Albert Parker's direction provide any sort of suspense. The photography and scenic effects alone are pleasing in all respects. The star in Ginger Dobson of Jamaica, West Indies, is lovely to look upon and is afforded the best opportunity in the picture which is not saying anything to speak of. Miss Talmadge will always attract by the sheer force of her personality and charm, but her talents are not advantageously utilized in the "innocent ingenue" kind of thing. Ginger is much more fascinating to observe, as we have intimated, than she is admirable or even natural.

As for Harrison Ford's leading male situation, the drunken remittance man, Clifford Standish, it is anything but fortunate and is entirely uninteresting. It is impossible to care what becomes of him.

Montague Love does a minor heavy with an attention-holding swagger and the cast is further filled out by Cooper Cliffe, Ida Waterman, Michael Barnes, E. Fernandez and Fraser Coulter.

Joseph Schenck presents "Love's Redemption" through Associated First National.

"BACK PAY"

Grauman's

Fannie Hurst should feel gratified that at last, after various attempts, she has succeeded in getting one of her stories filmed, which retains the Hurst spirit right through the process. The one in question is "Back Pay," a Cosmopolitan production which, after Hope Hampton's mutilated version of "Star Dust," is a noteworthy achievement sure to be thankfully received by the admirers of its author.

The fact that Frances Marion's adaptation of it moves with pronounced deliberation has been advantageously utilized by Frank Borzage's poetic direction which has made each moment of the scenario count with the human interest touches which brought him fame in "Humoresque." The young director undertook no slight task in the production of this story of a girl whose crepe de chine soul leads her to great sin without rendering her unsympathetic. Right through the most suggestive situations his subtle management leads his players without the slightest indelicacy or offense to his audience. We are forced and glad to accept the idea that Borzage is a coming master.

The famous soft focus is almost exclusively used by Chester Lyons, who obtains some extraordinarily beautiful effects with it in his photography. Never have we witnessed better composed or more generally attractive rural locations than those he thus enhances in loveliness. This picture's only unattractive feature is its cutting which continually fails to identify the title speakers.

Seena Owen, at her very best, troups convincingly and artistically through the role of Hester Bevins, the girl who wants luxury before love. Her long journey toward destruction and final turn about for her starting place, is a story of a reform which lent interest through its reasonableness.

Matt Moore as Jerry Newcombe is satisfying in all respects although we have come to anticipate with keenest joy his comedy efforts. Here he is the sincere country lad, whose love absolves all prejudice.

J. Barney Sherry enacts his best recent role in Charles G. Wheeler of Wall street, a worldly soul, who is not bereft of all decent instincts on that account. (Modern playwrights, please note.)

The remaining positions are filled by Ethel Duray, Charles Craig and Jerry Sinclair.

It is but rarely that the decided moral lesson is put over intelligently and with any inclusion of art in the process. That accomplishment is to be greatly appreciated here.

PHOTOPLAYWRIGHTS HOLD MEETING

At the Photoplaywrights' meeting held recently in the Brack Shops, two original photoplays were read: "The Laughin' Kid," by Alex McLaren, and "A Bit of Life" by Frank Winter.

The membership decided upon the Norma Talmadge production, "Love's Redemption," as the picture to be reviewed at the February 27th meeting, on which date a set of booklets, donated by a well known author on photoplaywriting, will be given as a prize to the member who wins the club's dramatic situation contest.

"The World's Champion," a Paramount production presented by Jesse L. Lasky, with Wallace Reid as the star, and Lois Wilson as the leading woman, opens Monday, February 27th, at the Grauman Million Dollar theater.

PICTURE ADVANCE IN JAPAN

The following is re-printed from the Tokyo "Advertiser" and presents the situation in the Orient as one farsighted film man has seen it.

"Firm in the belief that motion pictures stand supreme in attracting and holding the mind of the child far beyond any of the methods now employed in teaching, particularly in the lower grades, Mr. Robert A. Brackett, who came to Japan a few weeks ago to take films for dissemination all over the world, believes that motion pictures are urgently needed as part of the vital curriculum in schools and colleges. Mr. Brackett came to Japan from the United States with Mr. Hiraoka of the Kagetsu-en at Tsurumi and in co-operation with him expects to film Japanese scenes, industries and art and also to illustrate customs and traditions.

"The showing of comprehensive motion pictures of a country illustrating its people, customs and cities will do much to foster a far more humanized idea of that country, Mr. Brackett believes, and is certain that the showing of such films in schools will go far toward dissipating false ideas held in one country regarding another. 'Motion pictures, some of these days, will be used in place of maps, none too accurate, because motion pictures will reveal the life, customs and country as they are,' Mr. Brackett said, 'and will eliminate the possibility that pupils grow to manhood and womanhood with an erroneous impression of a country gained when a child.'

CAREWE FILMING SERIES FOR FINEMAN

A further stimulus of film production in Los Angeles came this week with the announcement from B. P. Fineman that he will make twelve specials here during the coming year with all star casts to be produced under the direction of Edwin Carewe. The first, "I Am the Law," will be completed within the next ten days with snow scenes to be made at Truckee. The interiors have been filmed at the Fine Arts studio. Fineman has formed a new producing organization in association with Bonnie Ziedman and Charles R. Burr to make independent features for the state right market. As a sample of the stellar casts which Fineman is to use he selected Alice Lake, Kenneth Harlan, Gaston Glass, Noah Berry, Rosemary Theby and Wallace Berry for "I Am the Law," a story by Raymond L. Schrock, dealing with the Northwest Mounted Police. Carewe, the director, is best known for his First National successes including one Katherine MacoDnald feature, four Anita Stewarts, and Isabel starring House Peters and Jane Novak.

HOLLAND LOANED TO LASKY

Cecil Holland, star of Protean Arts' dramatic novelties, has been loaned by that organization to the Lasky studio, where he is playing a part in George Melford's production, "The Woman that Walked Alone." Immediately upon completion of his present role, Holland will again be directed by Raymond Cannon, who is preparing to produce the second picture of the new Protean Arts series, "The Mind of Man," Protean's first offering, recently played at Grauman's Million Dollar theater.

The title of the next Morante Company picture in which George Cheseboro is featured will be "Blind Circumstances," written by J. Inman-Kane and the adaptation made by Victor Gibson. Alfred Hewston, Frank Caffey, Russell Tizzard and Harry Arras will be prominent in the supporting cast of "Blind Circumstances" the next Milbury Morante picture featuring George Cheseboro.

SCREEN AUTHOR BECOMES PRODUCER

L. V. Jefferson, screen author, recently completed "The Forest King," which he filmed in the redwood forests of Northern California. The picture, which is in five reels, is being released on the independent market through the Pacific Film Co., of Culver City.

Recently Jefferson adapted for the screen such well-known books as "Desert of Wheat," "The Kentucky Colonel," "Down Home," "The Face of the World," and "Fifty Candles."

MEXICAN PLAYER VISITS GOLDWYN

Luis Ross, motion picture player of Mexico, who is now in Los Angeles making a study of American production methods, visited the Goldwyn studio recently. Mr.

PEGGY BLACKWOOD

Ross stated that Mexican productions are now distributed only in that country, but that in time they will also be marketed in South America.

LATE PATHE RELEASES

Recent Pathe releases are:

"Sylvia of the Secret Service," Pathe Playlet with Irene Castle and an all-star cast, including such players as Elliott Dexter, Eric Von Stroheim, Macy Harlan, J. H. Gilmore, T. Wigney Percival, and Suzanne Willa.

"The Gem of the Desert," Pathe color subject feature of Pathe Review No. 145.

Latest offering of the series of "Adventures of Bill and Bob," entitled "Mysterious Tracks."

"The Cave of Peril," tenth episode of the new Pathe serial, "White Eagle," starring Ruth Roland.

"Pardon Me," Hal Roach comedy, featuring "Snub" Pollard.

"The Tiger and the Donkey," animated cartoon of the series of "Aesop's Film Fables," produced by Fables Pictures, Inc.

"On the Jump," re-issued one-reel comedy, starring Harold Lloyd.

A California record for movie stars was made the other day when eight of Charles Ray's 1921-1922 productions were shown simultaneously in the theatres of Los Angeles and environs.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

The filming of "Fools First," Marshall Neilan's latest production for First National release, has just been finished at the Hollywood studios. Claire Windsor, Richard Dix and Claude Gillingwater play the principal roles.

J. D. Williams, general manager of First National, before leaving Los Angeles for New York, attended a viewing of the new Neilan production.

Katherine MacDonald has started production of "The Woman Conquers." No title has been selected as yet for the photoplay Miss MacDonald recently finished.

Charles Ray has finished the filming of his latest photoplay, the title of which is "Alice Julius Caesar." The next Ray photoplay which comes to Los Angeles is "R. S. V. P.," a comedy of Fifth avenue and Greenwich village bohemian life, in which Charlie has the role of an impecunious artist.

John M. Stahl will finish the editing of "One Clear Call" in about ten days.

The title of Buster Keaton's latest comedy is "My Wife's Relations.' '

PRIVATE VIEWINGS FOR GENERAL MANAGER

During his ten-day stay in Los Angeles, J. D. Williams, general manager of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., attended private viewings of Constance Talmadge's "The Divorcee," Norma Talmadge's "The Duchess of Langeais," Katherine MacDonald's "Domestic Relations," Buster Keaton's comedy, "My Wife's Relations," John M. Stahl's "One Clear Call," Thomas H. Ince's "Skin Deep," Anita Stewart's "The Woman He Married," Charles Chaplin's "Pay Day" and several other recently completed productions.

INDEPENDENT PRODUCERS NOTES

Gus Schumacher, pioneer producer, now general manager of O'Connor Productions, productions, producing the new series of two-reel Billy Franey Comedies, is one of the first State-right producers who joined the Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate, to sell their product direct to Exchanges and eliminate the heretofore necessary evil of indirect distribution.

Bill Mill Productions are also selling their product through this new medium of direct to exchange distribution.

The best and biggest independent producers are endorsing and praising this new distributing plan and are wondering why this could not have been instituted five or ten years ago, so it would have saved millions of dollars to the state-right producers and their financial backers, instead of establishing a reputation for independent producers that makes the whole film business appear as a reckless risk to conservative investors.

Since, however, this new direct from producers to buyers system was organized, all apparent risk in the producing business is practically eliminated and the film business may be looked upon in the future as a legitimate industry where there will be no more hazard than in any other line of endeavor.

Mr. Lichtig of the firm of Lichtig and Rothwell, Mr. Wilfred Lucas, Mr. Jack Livingston and many other well?known film players and producers are now preparing their pictures to be sold through the above organization, controlling therefore their own productions and not trusting anyone else to collect the money for them.

John de Palma, brother of Ralph de Palma, automobile racer of note, has become a member of Nazimova's production forces at United Studios.

Contemporary Criticisms

"ANY WIFE"

(Fox)

"By the use of an 'it was all only a dream' ending, Fox has saved this feature somewhat from the criticism that it is one of the oldest, most obvious, and consequently most uninteresting of the stories that repeat themselves on the screen. This anticlimax at the close which adds a comedy twist pacifies to some extent but does not justify the use of so much footage to the tiresome theme."

—Moving Picture World.

"'Any Wife' will prove disappointing to followers of Pearl White. It is not up to the standard of her former five-reel features. It is weak in story appeal and has little to recommend it either in direction, acting or sets and the camera work is of a very poor quality."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"The dream situation is employed in this conventional pattern of the eternal triangle which gives Pearl White emotional opportunities as a discontented wife. That the picture carries a lesson cannot be denied, although the story contains several crude scenes which are saved through the surprising finish. . . . .

"The picture carries a certain appeal because of its moral, but its dramatic qualities are mostly negligible."

—Motion Picture News.

"JULIUS CAESAR"

(George Kleine)

"The developments of the past seven years in film production have failed to overshadow the beauty and art of a picture that once stood and always will stand for the best that the screen can give. 'Julius Caesar' is such a picture.

"Space limitations forbid an exhaustive description of the splendor of this classic. It can only be suggested by a few references to the integrity of the production as a whole, in its relation to moments of great history, the seriousness of the acting, stupendousness of the cast and nobility of the material appointments."

—Moving Picture World.

"'Julius Caesar' is one of the largest spectacles made in Italy, but due to its construction and handling its interest will remain historic and educational. . . .

"The events follow one another in the order of time and a great deal of footage is used to show whole armies and large crowds. Due to lack of intense drama, stirring situation and love interest 'Julius Caesar' is a biographical picturization rather than a picture drama. History is not always drama.

"The large battle scenes and the marching armies are, however, well rendered."

—Wid's.

"This re-edited release does not need to be announced as Italian product. It is typical Italian in its spectacular scenes, in some of its photography, in the types that make up the cast. The life of Caesar, as history has handed it down, offers too much material to be expressed in one photoplay. This is the sole reason why this picture cannot hold the interest at a high pitch throughout. . . . On the other hand, it does offer genuine entertaining incident. . . . It makes splendid screen drama. The old Roman senate is lavishly reproduced. . . .

"The production is certainly of educational value as well as being entertainment."

—Motion Picture News.

"This portrayal of the life of the world's greatest military genius has an appeal for every group of spectators. The incidents are tensely dramatic and the very utmost has been made of every opportunity to provide genuine thrills without, however, sacrificing truth or degenerating to the melodramatic.

"Caesar's two love affairs are convincingly realistic; American exhibitors are prone to anticipate too much emotionalism in films made in Italy, but this one never once offends."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"CHASING THE MOON"

(Fox)

"A Tom Mix fantasy with more rhyme than reason is this, but with a dash and a swing that prevent one from taking it too seriously. It is as if the star had written of his own career as a screen actor, and finding all plots stale, even as the hero in the picture finds all life stale, breaks forth into a wild experience of things that could never happen."

—Moving Picture World.

"Tom Mix, who has been hitting the bull's eye in his previous efforts, especially in his last release, 'Sky High,' has missed the mark in his new offering, 'Chasing the Moon.' This story lacks a plot and the sponsors must have gauged it correctly for they have attempted to dress it with snappy titles. It is a good deal like a comic opera story, the little thread of plot intruding here and there but making no impression. The star executes several stunts, many of which are of the hair-raising order, but even these take quite a time in assembling. . . .

"Mix has burlesqued his ideas before, but usually there has been something tangible about his exploits. However, the title has its value. It indicates that nothing can be gained from following moonbeams. Perhaps the main fault is a lack of a definite outline."

—Motion Picture News.

"'Chasing the Moon' is pure comedy and not at all convincing as a story but the various Mix stunts are well done and the athletic Fox star doesn't depend upon a 'double' to put over his stuff.

"The story was written by Edward Sedgwick and the star, and it is over-burdened with facetious subtitles. It isn't a story that makes much of an appeal except in so far as you are interested in the various antics of the star, and doesn't come up to the recent Mix offerings."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"For those who like Tom Mix in the atmosphere in which they are most accustomed to see him surrounded, there will be disappointment over 'Chasing the Moon.' The title is apropos, for the story covers a wide territory, from America to Russia, and to Spain. Not only does it traverse a lot of ground, but the mission of the journey is so thoroughly out of the ordinary that it comes very easily within the category of the improbably—and that does not make for deep interest.

"The story is the combined work of Mr. Mix and his director, Edward Sedgwick. If these two think 'Chasing the Moon' is a Mix vehicle, there is one reviewer who will go on record as in disagreement with them —and the reviewer is an admirer of Tom Mix."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"BILLY JIM"

(R-C Pictures)

"The second of the series of Fred Stone pictures produced by Andrew J. Callaghan with Frank Borzage directing, is "Billy Jim," a western of average calibre as far as production is concerned, but it lacks the action and thrills usually expected in this type of picture.

"Borzage has provided a suitable production and in the latter reels has taken the company to a particularly picturesque western hotel resort where some unusually fine shots have been secured. There are several excellent long shots of land and water combination that ar especially beautiful and the photography is first rate. There is a lot of good night stuff, too."

—Wids's.

"If this feature starring Fred Stone were compressed into three reels the action would be quickened, the incident would be more spontaneous and the result would be a likely offering. . . . Fred Stone fits the title role like the proverbial glove fits the hand. He has occasion to prove his versatility by expert lariat-throwing and snappy horsemanship. But that is about all.

"The story is almost plotless, although because of ts humorous trend one cannot take offense at a lack of crisp action. Frank Borzage has collected some charming exteriors."

—Motion Picture News.

"If there is one thing that stands out above all others in this picture from R-C, it is the beautiful exterior shots of the Canadian Rockies. The combination of Frank Borzage, director, and Fred Stone as star, coupled with an interesting story, does not quite get over in this case."

—Exhiibtors Trade Review.

"THE GOLDEN GALLOWS"

(Universal)

"This picture, featuring Miss Du Pont, started off like a house afire, depicting life back stage, with the idea conveyed that slices of this interesting life would be revealed in such intimate fashion that the offering could be classified as good entertainment. But the theatrical spark burns out and what is revealed is a conventional and uninspired tale of a girl who becomes the victim of evil gossip."

—Motion Picture News.

"In the first place the application of the title selected for Miss Du Pont's latest film, SUSPICIOUS SIDELIGHTS ON "HAIL THE WOMAN

By Ted LeBerthon

After seeing "Hail the Woman," and reading the reviews of that photodrama in the local press, I herewith submit a number of specious "vest pocket" reviews, done after the manner of some of the literary figures of the day, to wit: George Ade, James Branch Cabell, H. C. Witwer, Orison Swett Marden, George Jean Nathan, and Sinclair Lewis.

George Ade

Florence Vidor as the young thing with a Fifth Avenue phizz and a stern New England up-bringing, after shedding enough tears to baptize the entire Methodist population, gets a strangle-hold on the affections of a benighted parent who possesses a full set of shin curtains, a narrow interpretation of the Good Book and the heart of a Prohibition enforcement officer. John Griffith Wray, the director of this sob festival, did some great work with the near-Thespians at his command, a fact which will probably be soon publicly advertised as being due to a hearty indulgence of Tanlac or Nuxated Iron. Hail the Woman will prove equally popular with the Woolworth trade and the gilded swine who own first mortgages and college diplomas.

James Branch Cabell

And a stout ill-made youth, scarce apt to flourish a trustworthy sword, being unbeloved of the comely Florence, stole out through the dusky night in those hours when the moon is pearly and fair hamadryads may be ensnared in forests of surpassing loveliness. And upon passing by a strange chateau in this enchanted wilderness wherein dwelt an unknown poet, he beheld but not in transport the fair Florence with the most beautiful eyes he had ever envisioned engaged in rapt converse with the silver-haired bard. And he bethought himself that mystic smoke arose from a most marvelous cigarette which she held in her veritable flowers of hands. And he informed her father, and the tale now known as Hail the Woman was made possible. For a certain director rightly named Wray exerted a golden sorcery upon the characters in this devious panorama of a father with a baby in a gorgeous, mysterious city, and of a wife who became transported to that other world which only exists between dawn and sunrise.

Orison Swett-Marden

Hail the Woman proves that you can be what you will to be, though walls of granite intervene. Florence Vidor believed in herself and the principles of honest salesmanship. She proves that Woman's day has come and that all of us can be successful in 1922 if we hold the right thought. Madge Bellamy was a victim of wrong thinking. Had some one presented her with a copy of The Magnetic Life or The Culture of Courage, she would have led a clean, wholesome life, and would today be a good one hundred per cent American. She might have become another Carnegie or Dr. Frank Crane. John Griffith Wray proves by this forceful, optimistic production that right living is the only path to power. The entire cast acquitted themselves as respectable, decent citizens should, in any work of art, mechanics, industry, finance or commerce.

H. C. Witwer

Hail the Woman is a regular picture for regular people. It's a hundred to one shot that the neighbors will lean over the tall palings and give you an earful before you're twenty-four hours older. Thin gal Florence Vidor is a darb, the rest of the girls and boys behave like sure-fire troupers, and this feller John Griffith Wray must have the kick of TNT, horse-linament, and the Republican party underneath his mussed-up hair cut. Put it down in your note-books that this gent will be heard from further, and that his directorial salary will soon be swollen to the proportions of the national debt.

George Jean Nathan

Hail the Woman is banal, ridiculous and hollow. It nurses all the prejudices of the herd, and will be eaten up in toto by Y. M. C. A. secretaries, chambermaids and prurient Methodist clergymen. I'll wager a half interest in the Smart Set that it receives the endorsement of all Rotary Clubs, Foreign Missions, the Ku Klux Klan and the American Legion. To feature a pearl of an actress like Florence Vidor in such tosh and balderdash is an outrage to one's sense of humor and aesthetics alike. But such is the "art" of the motion picture! The direction of John Griffith Wray was all that saved the picture from being released as a slap-stick comedy. What is the country coming to? Why film such drivel when one has such available material as the Decameron, Balzac's Droll Stories, and Mlle. de Maupin to select from? The story itself is so bad that it might have been written by the Honorable Warren Gamaliel Harding or the head janitor in the Woolworth Building. Without the transmuting touch of the reliable Wray, Hail the Woman would not be fit to be seen by any but United States Congressmen, bootblacks, and students of scenario writing.

Sinclair Lewis

Hail the Woman is first and last addressed to Main Street audiences. But it's a great story, beautifully acted. Florence Vidor divine. The direction of Wray superb. Ince deserves congratulation. Would like to see this combination in Zola's La Terre or Flaubert's Madame Bovary. Florence Vidor attuned to beauty and strangeness. Theodore Roberts real and grim in role. Lloyd Hughes realistic and bumpkinish. Meredith a striking fellow. Madge Bellamy and Rodney Hildebrand good, but not enough of them. Censors probaly to blame. It will probably do the producers as much good to holler as it has done the thinkers of the country to cry out against the bosses of the Republican and Democratic parties. The country is too full of Elks, Knights of Pythias, and followers of the New Thought.

"TOO MUCH MARRIED"

(Associated Photoplays)

" 'Too Much Married' lives pretty well up to the title selected for it, in fact very much so far as the heroine is concerned. She's actually married to one man while two old friends, misunderstanding matters, insist upon believing her married to another. And so the complications arise in this fairly amusing farce comedy that offers an average entertainment which might possibly have been made into an even better picture through stronger and more humorous situations and by-play."

—Wid's.

" 'Too Much Married' will make you laugh, but if you expect anything new in the line of farces you will be disappointed. And, yet, there is that touch of directorial ingenuity that makes for worth-while entertainment."

—Moving Picture World.

"THE GOLDEN GALLOWS"

"Of the late reelases starring Miss Du Pont, this one is the best one of them all. In the first place, it gives her a chance to do something besides just look pretty. . . . It is a part that would seem to have been made to order for her, and she is excellent in it. And the story is interesting. Though the theme is old, it is treated in a manner quite original and has an unusual twist to it."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

Editorial

while its descriptive titles are quite superb. Nevertheless, the cutting leaves some bad gashes in continuity, suggesting the idea that many further and even more strenuous episodes will be inserted for foreign edification. (We prefer the bad cutting at that.)

In places, Von Stroheim's direction executes his situations most cleverly; this is especially true of his rather "questionable" but undoubtable comedy. Again the subtle element is lacking. It must therefore be considered that as a director he is without the evenness that proclaims mastery.

Count Segius Karamzin, the sensual, designing brute—heavy featured in the photodrama, is more honestly than delicately portrayed by himself, who makes of the part the most vulgar, loathsome and withal fascinating character which he has ever played. Sergius will encourage many nightmares but never a worthy thought. We are acquainted with no creature in literature who approaches his depth. It was obviously his creator's desire that he stand alone. He does!

Maud George and Mae Bush as the Princesses Olga and Vera, Sergius' "loving cousins," each give intelligent and artistic performances. Fortunately, though contrasting they are equally clear cut.

Miss du Pont finds her first correct position in the senseless Helen Hughes, an American wife who becomes a victim of Sergius' flattering attentions. Needing only to be a type, she is perfectly satisfactory.

The late Rudolph Christians enacts understandingly the wholesome American husband, Mr. Hughes.

Dale Fuller manages some big situations carefully as Maruschka, the Count's ill-fated servant.

The cast is further composed of Caesare Gravina, Malvine Polo, Louis K. Webb, Mrs. Kent, C. J. Allen, Edward Reinach and Al Edmundson.

We still fear a bit for Universal's million dollar investment, because it is certain that even curiosity will not hand it back when the news that it cannot be entirely accounted for is noised about.

In any event this is the sensational work of an extremist. It will either be enthusiastically lauded or considered too unworthy for words.

Contemporary Criticisms

to the picture and story itself, is hardly discernible. Just how 'The Golden Gallows' pertains to it is hard to figure out. . . .

"The story becomes hackneyed, unconvincing and dry; the director gets careless and allows incomprehensixe bits to creep in and his players to do extraordinary things; there is no suspense and the love interest wanes slowly, but surely."

—Wid's.

"For her third starring vehicle, Universal has provided Miss DuPont with 'The Golden Gallows,' based on a magazine story. The early scenes contain some fine lighting effects and the production starts off as though it were going to be a pretty little stage romance. The interest, however, soon begins to lag, and the story never recovers its original pace.

"Faulty editing and cutting have resulted in weak screen continuity, and this, coupled with a story that does not hold you, due partly to a somewhat illogical material, result in making the production below the average."

—Moving Picture World.

Giving Truth to The Public

Four valuable editorial selections from the Exhibitors' Herald, The Photodramatist, the Moving Picture World and The Exhibitors' Trade Review, respectively, follow. They set forth the various publications' solutions to the current newspaper slander of Hollywood and the picture profession. It is interesting to note that the justification plans are all cut out on the same pattern. Indeed, it is a promising sign that such is the case for co-operation is the only thing in a circumstance of this kind. Some of us have learned the truth of this fact at our own great expense.

F. R.

"The idea advanced in this department recently, that the industry enter into a comprehensive campaign to place its story about pictures and the picture business before the public, has met with a definite and widespread response. Various communications have reached us which agree with the proposition and also reiterate the obvious necessity that something along this line be immediately undertaken.

"The unfavorable—and grossly unjust—publicity that has been deluged recently upon Hollywood adds a new reason for the industry to look to the task of creating a right public opinion with respect to motion pictures and the people engaged in making and distributing them. But the Hollywood matter is only an incident. Entirely without reference to what has and has not been said about the production center it remains a matter of paramount interest and importance that the business of motion pictures be set right before the public.

"The key to the situation is plainly one of commercial propaganda. The object to be attained is the creation of a favorable attitude in the minds of the public toward the art and business of motion pictures. And the means for the attainment of this object is an advertising campaign which will reach persons of all ages and all strata of society—bringing home to everyone the true story of the business, its people and what they are seeking to do."

"Motion pictures, motion picture people, and the motion picture art stand at the bar of public opinion. The list of their alleged crimes is formidable and includes everything from the corruption of innocence to the perversion of the public taste in Art—with a capital "A." Long-haired reformers, short-sighted authors, and political opportunists are prosecuting the case with venomous vigor—and with a total disregard of the principles of fair play. Yellow journals and pink periodicals report the progress of the case in their usual manner, instructing their paid prevaricators to play up the alleged wickedness of the accused in the most sensational fashion. Throughout the length and breadth of the land, a monstrous fiction is growing up—a belief that the defendants are not only guilty, but are proud of their sins. And because the defense has been entrusted to divided counsels, because the motion picture people have tried to laugh the case out of court, public opinion is developing signs of irritation, and, what is worse, hostility. Consequently, the so-called reformers who yammer for censorship and Blue Sundays are encouraged to persist in their campaign of denunciation, prohibition, and corruption.

"Well, the time has come to cease trying to laugh the case out of court. Getting down to facts, it isn't really a laughing matter that Centreville and Podunk regard Hollywood as a nest of iniquity peopled by an ungodly bunch of Bacchanalians who weep because there are only ten commandments to be broken. It was funny so long as it was only believed by a few long-haired gentlemen and a few short-haired ladies. But today, thanks to the zeal of the reformers, the pandering of the press and periodicals, and our own foolish indifference, the motion picture is assailed from every quarter, and the people who make them are universally condemned as Hedonists whose excesses would have shocked the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah.

"There is a big job ahead of the industry and the longer we wait the harder it will be to successfully accomplish it. The world must be convinced that the people of the motion pictures are ordinary human beings, neither better nor worse than the people who follow any other occupation. The public must be taught to distinguish between the true motion picture workers and the parasites who, with the connivance of the press, claim a connection with the 'movies' simply for the advertising they may thus receive. Hollywood, the real home of the industry, must be painted in its true colors, as a quiet, homelike city of hard-working people, absolutely devoid of that wild "night-life" which the tourist has been taught to expect and never can discover. Unless Podunk and Centreville can be convinced that the people who write, direct, and otherwise assist in the production of the motion picture are decent, law-abiding people with decent aims and ideals, the motion picture will find its way growing increasingly difficult, and the motion picture art will be stultified."

"It is a matter of proverb that even so inoffensive, so peaceful and so non-combatant a thing as a worm will turn to defend itself if it is sufficiently prodded.

Current Reviews

"PENROD"

Kinema

Booth Tarkington's "Penrod" stories scenarized into one long subject by Marion Fairfax, serves Marshall Neilan for his latest independent production. The picture's title and author-name alone will attract large houses all over the country and the fact that Wesley Barry appears in the leading role is of material added interest, for the freckled lad has a remarkable following. Nevertheless, we find him here unhappily cast in the typical American-boy role which he enacts with about the screen technique and general attitude of Wallace Reid. All of the naivete of jolly but unfortunate little Penrod is lost in a new sophistication that surprises us in Wesley. The youthful favorite also indulges in unnecessary exaggeration so that he entirely loses the Tarkington spirit, which Johnnny Jones retained so consistenly in the two-reelers made by Goldwyn from scripts by that author. Moreover, the late training of Neilan's portege has rendered him principally suitable to the eccentric or slap-stick.

At that, Barry is not so hard to swallow in his position as in Clara Horton in Penrod's difficult lady love at twelve years. She tops the children with whom she plays by several inches and overdoes her kittenish mannerisms until one's credulity resigns in despair. To interpret the child, one must either be such or a superb artist.

Baby Peggy Jean, loaned by the Century Comedies, does an exceedingly amusing piece of work in the dancing school's tiniest patron while Sunshine Sammy and Florence Morrison, Winston Radom, Gordon Griffith, Newton Hall and Kenneth Green all play clever kid characters.

Tully Marshall, Claire McDowell, Cecil Holland, Marjorie Daw, John Harron and Lena Baskette troup faultlessly through the adult principals and the list of players is further filled out by Mrs. Grace Green, Virginia True Boardman, George Dromgold, Charles Arling, Mayme Kelso, Harry Griffith and little Jackie Condon.

The overly large cast is perhaps not so unwieldly under the direction of Frank O'Connor and Mr. Neilan as it would be imagined, and the continuity is as smooth as any combination of stories could readily be. The lack of a climax worthy the name is an unsatisfactory feature and the picture's indefinite onward run seems uncalled for. Particularly good is the strenuous comedy of the juvenile element which Neilan-like reverts repeatedly to slapstick. The titles are effective and the photography by David Kesson is exceptionally clever.

"Penrod" is, of course, distributed by First National.

"THE FLOWER OF THE NORTH"

California

"The Flower of the North," a typically virile tale of the rugged section about which he writes, is James Oliver Curwood's Vitagraph-produced story, just released. The cinemaplay is chiefly notable for its presentation of Henry B. Walthall and Pauline Starke in the principal positions. Aside from the cast, it is a regulation, fast action "north woodser," which has been adapted to the screen by Bradley Smollen.

David Smith manages the direction satisfactorily even through the situations that reek with melodrama. The photography is good.

It is a little startling to see the great Walthall in this kind of thing, but he cannot be said to be wasted upon it inasmuch as he would play anything incomparably. His customary grace and the pantomine that set our present standards, is a departure in the outdoor picture and an invaluable asset here. He does Philip Whittemore, an engineer whom Curwood provides with almost insurmountable obstacles as he attempts to run a railroad line through the wilds. To see Walthall in anything is a treat.

GEORGE BERRELL

Miss Starke in Jeanne D'Arcambal, a little French resident of the far north, hasn't a strong a portrayal to occupy her effort, but she plays the girl daintily and sincerely as she might be depended upon to do.

Thorpe, the inevitable, arch-villain heavy, is realistically given us by Harry Northrup, whose "dirty" business is lent further force by Jack Curtis, Walter Rodgers and William McCall.

Joe Rickson enacts sympathetically Pierre, a half-breed and Emmett King is picturesquely placed in D'Arcambal.

Vincent Howard, in Chief Sachigo, completes the cast of this production.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Green are receiving congratulations upon the arrival of a seven-pound son, their second.

Mr. D. E. Rogell of Spokane has been in Hollywood on a visit with his son, Al Rogell, of the Rogell-Halperin Productions.

Major Maurice Campbell, who is severing his connection with Famous Players and preparing to produce pictures independently, is the husband of the actress, Henrietta Crosman.

"A VIRGINIA COURTSHIP"

Clune's

Edfrid Bingham's photoplay of Eugene Presbrey's, "A Virginia Courtship," produced recently by Realart as a May MacAvoy starring vehicle, runs true to the promise given by its title and certainly deserves recommendation as being, in all respects, perfectly harmless even to the most unsophisticated. It has parallel love stories based upon the simple, springtime romance of the old south rather than the thrills which have lately been in great demand. The sweeter element in this type of picture should be encouraged, but possibly it should be presented with variations. The material here is quite charming, but a bit trite from several considerations, mainly its age.

Frank O'Connor has given the picture a good technical production.

The petite star is charming indeed, as the bare-legged child Prudence who grows up with almost unwarranted celerity. Her immature roles are always convincing in every detail; still we cannot but desire some really big material for her.

Casson Ferguson plays a "straight" Realart juvenile with more vigor than it is usually accomplished while Richard Tucker is satisfactorily hateful in Dwight Neville.

Alec Francis and Kathlyn Williams carry the other romance beautifully with Jane Keckley, L. M. Wells, Guy Oliver and Verne Winter completing the cast.

McKEE TO STAR IN SEA STORY

Raymond McKee, who appeared at the California recently in "A Blind Bargain," has been signed by Elmer Clifton Productions to star in its initial cinemaplay, "Down to the Sea in Ships," which lately went into production at New Bedford, Mass.

FARNUM IN FILM ADAPTATION OF "SAMSON"

William Farnum is back on the job again. With Herbert Brenon directing he started on a new picture recently at the Fox New York studios. The picture will be called "Shackles of Gold."

It is an adaptation of Henri Bertstein's play, "Samson," which William Gillette did on the stage. Myrta Bonillas, a new face on the screen, will be Mr. Farnum's leading woman.

BARA IN BRABIN SERIES

It is stated that Theda Bara is about to be starred in a series of productions to be directed by her husband, Charles J. Brabin, for an independent company.

NEW COOGAN PICTURE COMPLETED

Jackie Coogan's third independent feature production will be started within two weeks. Title work has just been finished on "Trouble," Jackie's second feature, and this will be ready for exhibition purposes within 30 days. It is an original story in which Jackie is supported by Wallace Beery, Gloria Hope and others.

With the release of "Trouble," Jackie will have been seen in four big photoplays, "The Kid," "Peck's Bad Boy," "My Boy," and his latest production.

Contemporary Criticisms

"I CAN EXPLAIN"

(Metro)

"If they could find another story for Gareth Hughes as appropriate as the adaptation of 'Liliom,' which was called 'Little Eva Ascends,' he would probably be able to hold the stellar position to which he has recently been elevated, but with such material as 'I Can Explain,' it isn't likely that he will be able to gain much of a following. He needs especially good stories and not the helter skelter variety of what-not that is contained in this piece." —Wid's.

"The difficulty of appropriately casting Gareth Hughes has impeded the success of 'I Can Explain,' to some extent. Obviously, his limitations as a type must be born in mind, but unless his performance is the nucleus of interest, the object of a keen psycho-analytical study as it was in his first big success, 'Sentimental Tommy,' it is apt not only to fall flat, but weakens the entire production. This is what happens in 'I Can Explain.'

"The story is farcial in style and has some burlesque touches in playing up South American politics in a way that is not particularly new nor clever. The most pleasant feature of the production is the wealth of beautiful settings, suggestive of that country."

—Moving Picture World.

"This picture is apt to be a tough one for the spectator to define. It carries all the earmarks of broad burlesque, not only because of its lively action which releases a sample of slapstick, but because the players act in a spirit of mock-heroics. Which is to say that they exaggerate. If the purpose is to have fun with the old-time comic opera revolution then George D. Baker, the director, has succeeded admirably. If he has attempted to be serious—then one must be inclined to say that he has 'overshot.'

"The subject-matter is not entirely fitting to Gareth Hughes' personality. . . . There is not much entertainment value, but at least it will suffice as a fairly interesting release. Hughes needs quieter pieces—such as "Little Eva Ascends.'"

—Motion Picture News.

"TILLIE"

(Realart)

"A picture that is primarily story and will please or disappoint as the story meets or fails to meet with approval. Extended stage popularity of the play argues for the former. The star's role is severe and her acting rather than her beauty scores.

"Mary Miles Minter, with curls and smiles tucked away in a sob role, gives the character very satisfactory screen being. The picture is solid acting, most of which is good."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"In this adaptation of a fairly popular story and play, 'Tillie, a Mennonite Maid,' Mary Miles Minter has an opportunity to appear in character. It will surprise many of her following to see her discarding her Pollyanna personality to find expression in a story which doesn't permit her to radiate her charm.

"The picture is done extremely well as far as production is concerned. The correct atmosphere is always present—not only in the costumes of the natives but in the intimate scenes of the homes and fields."

—Motion Picture News.

"GLASS HOUSES"

(Metro)

"And again the Metro-Viola Dana combination comes forth with an enjoyable entertainment that is sure to satisfy everyone. . . . There is plenty of humorous incident and laugh provoking business that puts the picture on a line with the few really amusing farcial pictures of the day."—Wid's.

"This farce-comedy places Viola Dana in a character sketch which enables her to flash a talent heretofore undiscovered. While it is improbable and carries a few flaws if you examine it closely, still it manages to exude a deal of charm, romance and happy high jinks. . . . Money has been spent upon this feature, for there are at least fifteen lavish sets—to say nothing of a small army of extras providing atmosphere and an array of costumes which might have come from some fashionable Fifth Avenue shop.

" 'Glass Houses' is breezy and full of peppy jazz—an ideal vehicle for the star."

—Motion Picture News.

"Viola Dana has something quite to her taste, and it is likely quite to the public's taste, in 'Glass Houses.' She has an interesting chance to do a character accented with her well-known brand of buffoonery, in addition to a straight role with her equally well-known charm as an ingenue.

"The story, continuity and direction are examples of adroit workmanship. . . . But why has it been titled 'Glass Houses?'"

—Moving Picture World.

"EXTRA! EXTRA!"

(Fox)

" 'Extra! Extra!' as the title suggests, is a newspaper story. The action is based upon a clue that the city editor of the big newspaper gets and the young reporter is sent out to get the details of a deal which involves a corner in cotton. 'Get the story,' says the editor; 'and don't come back if you don't.' Determination, grit and cunning lead the reporter into adventure and romance, but these make a picture of only average entertainment value."

—Wid's.

"First-rate newspaper story with the likeable Johnny Walker and Edna Murphy in the leading roles. On a par with this team's recent offerings and should please. . . .

"There is a fairly interesting story here, well acted and some excellent settings and photography." —Exhibitors Herald.

"A STAGE ROMANCE"

(Fox)

"William Farnum, after quite an absence from the screen, returns in a costume play built around certain incidents in the life of the famous actor, Edmund Kean. It is an unusual part for Farnum, but gives him opportunity to display his talent in portraying strenuous emotion, and he scores without a doubt.

"His work throughout is the strength of the picture."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"There will doubtless be a great many among William Farnum's following who will consider 'A Stage Romance' his most artistic achievement. Certainly the Fox star has never had greater romantic opportunities than this picturization of Dumas' play based upon the life of the celebrated English tragedian, Edmund Kean.

"Farnum has presented a novelty here in 'A Stage Romance,' something entirely different from anything heretofore attempted. At this time when the screen is under fire, the character of Kean will do much to kindle a feeling of generosity."

—Motion Picture News.

"The use of exceptionally plastic and picturesque material—the life of the great stage idol, Edmund Kean, as originally dramatized by Alexandre Dumas is the first reason for commending Fox for the production of this splendid picture. An inclusive chapter from Kean's life, showing his meteoric transition from circus boy to first actor of the day, with an intimate slant on his friendships and love affairs, it should and does have that keen interest always attached to unveiling the personal life of a public favorite.

"William Farnum could scarcely have made a more favorable return to the screen, after a year's absence, than he does in 'A Stage Romance.'"

—Moving Picture World.

"ALF'S BUTTON"

(First National)

"This First National release made in England contains a first-rate comedy idea although to be judged solely as entertainment it is entirely too long for feature length. The story back of 'Alf's Button' is a fanciful thing—one bearing a strange resemblance to 'Aladdin and his Wonderful Lamp.' In fact it is a distant relative to that fantastic tale.

"However, after three reels have traveled through the machine, one becomes a trifle tired. It is all the same.

—Motion Picture News.

"Perhaps 'Alf's Button' did make the Prince of Wales laugh, but then the Prince of Wales is English. So is 'Alf's Button.' Therefore, it is logical that mutual understanding and appreciation provided a successful combination. But just how American audiences can be expected to find the picture amusing when there are such fun makers as Lloyd, Chaplin, Keaton and a few others capable of drawing continuous laughs is hard to say. They are bound to make comparisons in which the English comedy will be likely to make a poor showing."

—Wid's.

"THE BROADWAY PEACOCK"

(Fox)

"Pearl White does good work in this story of renunciation. It is away from that in which we have been accustomed to see her, but she fits into the character of Myrtle May gracefully and easily. The role affords her an opportunity to wear several smart gowns, any one of which will interest women patrons."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Pearl White's performance in 'The Broadway Peacock' unfortunately has a certain bizarre style that tends to cheapen any effort at serious drama. . . . Miss White's make-up and costumes show a lack of refined taste and if she were more conservative in the love scenes, the effect would be improved."

—Moving Picture World.

"This is a companion piece to 'Any Wife' in the sense that it gives Pearl White further opportunities to display an emotional talent. . . . 'The Broadway Peacock' is a stage story carrying very little physical action but realying upon shadings, subtleties and much romance and atmosphere for its interesting qualities. The title, incidentally, is a winner for this type of feature."

—Motion Picture News.

"TRACKED TO EARTH"

(Universal)

"The story carries a colorful title suggestive of much action, but this necessary element never figures prominently, it being subordinated to the love interest. . . .

"The backgrounds reveal some picturesque shots of a desert country, with the sand and sage-brush visible in every direction.

"The picture is mostly exteriors, and the director has caught some highly picturesque shots. But there is little action or incident. Frank Mayo fulfils the demands of the role and his support is competent enough. You can call it fairly interesting."

—Motion Picture News.

"Any amount of beautiful shots, rolling hills of sand and splendid photography provide fine pictorial effects and excellent visual appeal in Frank Mayo's latest Universal production, 'Tracked to Earth,' but these factors aren't quite sufficient to fulfill the requirements of entertainment. Sand, sand and more sand. That is about what you will find in the picture."

—Wid's

"Spectators who are not over-particular regarding the plausibility of a picture-story will probably get considerable entertainment out of 'Tracked to Earth,' Universal's latest feature starring Frank Mayo.

"An attractive feature of the production is a number of well-photographed sand scenes."

—Moving Picture World.

"ON ENTERING PICTURES"

By Richard Walton Tully

I feel I am indeed fortunate in the circumstances which surround my entrance into the motion picture industry. As a tyro in this branch of the profession, I might feel more timid of my venture if it were not that I felt that those who are cooperating with me will not let me put my feet on false ground. It would be futile for me to try to give my impression of a business into which I had just come. My first associations have been with James Young, the veteran director, who will make my first picture, and it was with great gratification that I found that here, indeed, was a master of the picture art, who not only knew the rules of the game but could explain the why and wherefore. On the other hand Wilfred Buckland, in the old days an associate of the stage, was able to present so wonderfully the technical side of the art of screen settings that, between the two, I have been placed very much at home.

To me the great thing has always been upon the stage to present an interesting story directly and forcibly for the amusement of the public. In presenting a story upon the screen I feel that this also holds true. It was therefore my decision to base my first production on the stage success, "The Masquerader." Guy Bates Post appeared in "The Masquerader" for over six years with success. In almost every theatre in America he has broken the capacity record. It seems fitting, therefor, that this artist should appear in this play as my initial offering. That I have been able to do this and introduce Mr. Post to the screen fans of America is a great pleasure. I cannot help but feel that with the combination of helpers which I have assembled, and this attratcion as an offering, the same success will attend the venture upon the screen that has been met with in the legitimate theatres of America.

It is my intention to present the plays which I have written and produced, one after another upon the screen. The fact that commentators in the past have rated my offerings as high in pictorial value leads me to hope that they will lend themselves to the requirements of the silent drama. Among other plays I contemplate producing in the future are "The Bird of Paradise," "Omar, the Tentmaker," "The Flame," "Keep Her Smiling" and several other original dramas which are now in scenario form.

This has always been my slogan—"Clean plays, 100% entertainment." Those who know how closely this ideal has been followed in the past will perhaps appreciate what I hope to try to do in the future.

BOWMAN STORIES FOR WARNER

Earl Wayland Bowman, author of "The Ramblin' Kid" and other published stories, has been signed by Metropolitan Productions, Inc., to furnish a series of stories, featuring James B. Warner. The first story is to be based on "High Stakes," which appeared in The American Magazine a short time ago.

MAJOR CAMPBELL TO LEAVE LASKY

Upon the conclusion of his present contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Company on March 22nd, Maurice Campbell will "free lance" until arrangements ,now pending, have been completed for the making of his own productions.

Major Campbell has filmed twelve productions for the Famous Players-Lasky Company.

Editorial

"The screen has at last proved the truth of the adage.

"Stung by the injustice of a nation-wide dissemination of vile scandal about the lives of players and others in the moving pictures, a number of people well known to all of us have combined in an appeal to the public for fair play. Elsewhere in this issue appears the appeal in full, together with the signatures of the group.

"This appeal is a good thing as far as it goes and it will help, but it fails to go far enough. We suggest that the same group or another group, and the more important the better, consider seriously the issuing of a plain statement which will place the blame for this outrage where it properly belongs. The blame rests with the sensation-mad newspapers and their Los Angeles correspondents, who have deliberately fabricated the most impudent, the most conscienceless and the most damnable scandals, out of whole cloth and with an utter disregard of the reputations of innocent men and women, have produced stories that on their face would seem to be the product of drug-crazed brains.

"These correspondents have been aided by Thomas Lee Woolwine, District Attorney of Los Angeles, who has become a correspondent himself, writing, no later than last Sunday, of the case under his own signature. He is an officer of the court and yet he joins in the mad scramble for this unholy publicity.

"Los Angeles can only save itself from material disgrace by starting now to call a halt on this orgy of falsehood, mendacity and rotten fiction retailed to the country as facts. Los Angeles knows these correspondents. Let them be taken in hand and called upon for the sources of their contemptible output."

"The attacks to which the industry is being subjected at the hands of the so-called reformers, and the lurid sensationalism with which some newspapers have attempted to indict the whole picture business, are common knowledge to every exhibitor. More than that, they undoubtedly present a very real problem to the exhibitor in dealing with his public. He knows, of course, that the industry has been maligned and vilified and misrepresented. But the public, in part at least, may not understand the true facts.

"Getting the facts to the public is a highly important thing, especially at this time. And that is just what the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan are doing. They have worked out a constructive plan for newspaper co-operation—and, what is more, they have got the co-operation."

HAMILTON STARTS COMEDY

Hamilton-White comedies has started work this week on a new Lloyd Hamilton Mermaid comedy for Educational release. Irene Dalton, who has been seen in several recent Hamilton comedies, will again play the leading role opposite the star.

When Frank Mayo arrives in Los Angeles from his sojourn in New York he will star in "Out of the North," a story written for him by Drago, according to report.

While in New York Mayo made a phonograph record for the Brunswick company. It included the monologue Mayo has been presenting in vaudeville for the past two months.

Bunny and Carolyn Davie are recovering from operations upon their tonsils and adnoids.

We Receive a Reprimand

Just to prove that life at best is not all boosts and smiles in this enterprising age, we are reprinting below a pleasant little communication which wandered in this week. Taking it all in all, Hope Hampton Productions, Inc., is not to be censured for protecting, even eulogizing, its turn-out to the fullest, not only for the reason that such a course is the natural one, but also because all available support could not suffice to bolster its unvaryingly mediocre product into an artistic class.

Nevertheless, we pause a moment to point the fact for the indignant Mr. Clark's benefit, that in our review of "Stardust," we but casually referred to an impending suit against his organization by Fannie Hurst, the authoress of its latest release, a much mutilated adaptation of her story, as it had come to us through some half dozen trade journals and not through "inspiration," as the worthy gentleman suspects.

Indeed we anticipated no such onslaught as has resulted from his wrathful typewriter when we honestly observed further that the popular fictionist was certainly justified in considering herself injured by the distribution of such hackneyed material under her name, even to the extent of seeking legal reparation, providing, of course, that the understanding was that Hope Hampton Productions was to film the widely-read story with any degree of accuracy. Now that we have been challenged, however, we feel considerably elated at the opportunity to display the type of reasoning which guides some of our producing outfits.

Mr. Clark refers to the picture in dispute as far "superior" to the original, but he fails to explain the lack of judgment displayed in expending $35,000 for the title of an unsatisfactory story, which had to undergo a general improvement treatment by the Hope Hampton staff writers before it deserved picturization. Awfully wasteful we call it, but scarcely so illuminating as the statement that unless a reviewer sees a film before it is cut, he is in no position to judge the process. What a continuity poor "Stardust" must have been!

However, undoubtedly our attacker is right! Since his picture has been booked it is senseless to hand it detrimental reviews. This assuming that critics always have it in mind to ruin a picture's sale when their judgments are adverse upon it. Our communicant must be of the opinion that inferior pictures just aren't shown, even in the franchise holding house of its own distributing circuits. We only wish in our weary weekly round, witnessing just such stuff and nonsense as his much-maligned "Stardust," that we could share his encouraging outlook. Anyway he deserves a large amount of credit. He is some optimist!

"The Camera,
"Los Angeles, Calif.
"Gentlemen:

"In a recent issue of your valued magazine you stated in error that Fanny Hurst was suing the Hope Hampton Productions for using her title, "Stardust." Miss Hurst has never sued us for anything or on any grounds, but we are suing her for $250,000 damages, because of her unceremonious denunciation of our picture, after we had paid $35,000 for the picture rights, which gave us permission to make any changes, additions, substitutions, etc., that we desired.

"Even if our picture had not been superior to her book, which it is, it was poor sportmanship on her part, to say the least, and her action has given us the sympathy of the public. You are, of course, one of the rare exceptions.

"Your statement that careless cutting hurt the film is also erroneous, and as a matter of fact you are not in a position to judge this, as you never saw the film before it was finally cut. It therefore seems to us that this statement of yours was inspired. As a matter of fact it was the cutting and titling of this picture, which in our opinion, has made it a great picture for audiences. For some reason or other, a few magazines have become so thoroughly biased and unfair, that their criticisms cease to be of interest, as long as the public, as they are doing in the case of "Stardust," give us their approval.

It will no doubt interest you to know that "Stardust" is a proven box office winner and it has played at the Strand Theatre, New York; The Strand Theatre, Brooklyn; The Strand Theatre, Providence; The Olympia Theatre, Boston; The Rivoli Theatre, Baltimore; The Metropolitan Theatre, Washington, D. C.; The Grand Theatre, Pittsburgh; The Regent Theatre, Pittsburgh; The Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia; The Kinema Theatre, Los Angeles; The Strand Theatre, Cincinnati. It will play the biggest theatre in the country, The Chicago, in Chicago; The Strand, Milwaukee; The Circle, Indianapolis, and several more in the largest cities, so you see that the largest theatres in this country are playing it, notwithstanding some very marked and unjust criticisms which evidently have not influenced either the public or exhibitors.

"Very truly yours,
"HOPE HAMPTON PRODUCTIONS, INC.,
"By W. A. Clark, V. P."

Current Reviews

"A FOOL'S PARADISE"

Grauman's Rialto

In Cecil de Mille's latest production, "A Fool's Paradise," the public will enjoy a departure from this director's customary line which nevertheless possesses many of the attributes that have always lent attraction to his work. This story, a re-vamping, by Sada Cowan, of Leonard Merrick's "The Laurels and the Lady," for instance finds its motivation in the sort of punchy mix-up of men and women in their search after one another, which seems to hold forth so much fascination to the average dull, romanceless audience. It has also been given a consistent de Mille production from every standpoint. Excellent photography and artistic tinting exaggerate somewhat over-elaborate sets, which add to the always-prevalent note of luxury; a well thought-out and effectively executed scenario by Beulah Marie Dix, is also invaluable to the picture. If the reaction of this type of photoplay is a bit sticky, we may only suppose that the market for it is sufficiently large to overrule merely wholesome objections.

Nothing more could be asked of the cast than the high class work which it offers.

Dorothy Dalton is unusually animated and fills an almost perfect position in Poll Patchouli, a flesh and blood woman who overcomes an exceedingly earthy disposition to "play the game." She gets over the abandonment of the Latin admirably.

With the evenness, which can be maintained only by a beautifully trained talent, Conrad Nagel interprets Arthur Phelps, a young man of illusions, whose physical blindness loses him one sweetheart and whose spiritual lack of vision robs him of another.

A striking characterization is added to the cast by John Davidson, whose work as the Siamese Prince, Talaat-Noi, provides some of the most graceful moments in the picture.

Mildred Harris is typically dainty in the illusive, dancing snow queen, while Theodore Kosloff offers a vital touch in Roderiguez.

Julia Faye, Kamuela Searles and Jacqueline Logan complete the cast.

Paramount releases "A Fool's Paradise."

"WATCH YOUR STEP"

California

A brisk and truly clever little comedy by Julian Josephson is "Watch Your Step," a Goldwyn offering which preesnts Cullen Landis in the featured role. Being a simple chronicle of the adventures of an American boy against rather ordinary odds, the story's interest lies chiefly in the comedy found both in its situations and atmosphere. A clever cast assures the safe accomplishment of each laugh attempted. Technically everything is satisfactory. William Beaudine directed the cinemaplay which was photographed by John Mescall.

Landis has pronounced star material in his make-up, which might perhaps be better expended upon something sympathetic than upon comedy. Nevertheless, in matter of cultivation he is equal to anything and as Elmer Slocum, a misjudged "city feller," who accepts a six-dollar a week country job, he is entirely pleasing.

Patsy Ruth Miller, a comparative newcomer to the screen, is also well cast and dispatches with attractive ease the fairly uncomplicated action of Margaret Andrews, Elmer's village love.

The performance of Raymond Cannon in Lon Kimball, the small-town, wiseacre heavy, we will leave for review by our contemporaries, as is our custom.

Bert Woodruff, Alberta Lee, Gus Leonard, Henry Rattenbury, John Cossar, and William Orlando are immense types for Mr. and

"RANGER" BILL MILLER

Mrs. Rus Weaver, Jennifer Kimball, the Constable, Henry Slocum and the physician, who caused it all.

George Pierce, Joel Day, J. O. O'Connor, Lillian Sylvester, L. H. King and Cordelia Callahan complete the cast ably.

More comedies on this order would be appreciated from Goldwyn.

"R. S. V. P."

Kinema

Another Charles Ray production that misses the almost proverbial fire which has been his is "R. S. V. P.," the Rob Wagner story, which First National has just released. Suffering a foolish rather than funny introduction, it takes far too long to get under way and thereafter depends upon a boring amount of repetition to "fill out" its footage. There are several good laughs in it, but their number is not large enough for Charles Ray and the standard of the picture, as has been true of his past couple, is unpleasantly reminiscent of the last several mediocre productions which he made for Thomas Ince. Then, however, the blame was entirely another's. This time Ray directs himself.

He plays Richard Morgan, a young artist, who attends a reception without a dress coat and "kills" the evening in the wash room. He has had more amusing positions by far.

Harry Myers in Richard's chum, Benny Fielding, struggles valiantly to insert comedy into his situations and now and again he succeeds, which is quite an accomplishment.

Jean Calhoun enacts the leading feminine part, Betty Plimpton, and Robert Grey creates a needed note of suspense in the eagle-eyed detective.

Ida Schumaker in Minnie Meadows, a china painter, Florence Oberle, Tom McQuire and William Courtright complete the list of players in this picture, which is presented by Arthur S. Kane.

"HER HUSBAND'S TRADEMARK"

Grauman's

A Clara Beranger story serves Gloria Swanson for her newest Lasky starring vehicle, "Her Husband's Trademark," and Lorna Moon's adaptation of it forms a drama of considerable value. Its incident is well developed and while its star position is far from the predominant one, a suitable picture for the Swanson personality and wardrobe results. Moreover, the story uncovers a real punch in the Mexican fight stuff toward the finish which is well received. Sam Woods competently directed the production, which was well photographed by Alfred Gilks.

The star plays Lois Berkeley, a butterfly matron, with no very vivid characteristics, sympathetic or otherwise; but her coiffures and gorgeous, if somewhat movement-hampering, costumes will be a never-ending source of joy to the feminine public. Such do we demand as entertainment.

Stuart Holmes is very clever with his heavy work in Berkeley, Lois' parasitical husband, while his two or three comedy touches never fail to hit even in the midst of strenuous action.

The sympathetic male lead is enacted by Richard Wayne, who lends considerable virility to Franklin, the young engineer who loves a married woman.

Lucien Littlefield and Clarence Burton do excellently a comedy secretary and a Mexican bandit respectively, with Charles Ogle, Edythe Chapman and James Neil otherwise established.

PREACHER AND EXHIBITOR ACCOMMODATE ONE ANOTHER

The manager of a motion picture theater in Toccoa, Ga., recently accomplished the supposedly impossible feat of crowding more people into his playhouse than there are residents in the town. Toccoa boasts of a population of 3,500, but Joseph Burton, manager of its chief picture house, jammed 5,865 admissions through his doors in a single day to see Katherine MacDonald in "Her Social Value," supplemented by a Buster Keaton comedy.

Manager Burton doesn't have to concern himself with "blue laws." He turns his theater over to the local Baptists for their Bible class every Sunday morning, in return for which compliment the minister gets through his evening sermon in time to permit his congregation to attend Sunday night's second picture show.

Harold Miller has been selected to play an important role in support of Shirley Mason in her current starring production which Harry Beaumont is directing at Fox.

Pickups By The Staff

WRAY DISCUSSES RELATIONSHIP OF DIRECTOR AND STAR

What is the psychic relationship of the screen player to the director? John Griffith Wray, director of the Thomas H. Ince productions, "Someone to Love," "Jim," and "Hail the Woman," believes the screen director must take the place of the spoken drama's audience; that just as an actor achieves more glowing, subtle, or profound historionism in ratio to the sympathetic attitude of an audience, just so does he rely on the screen director for his heightened inspiration before the camera.

"A director must cleave to a sustained psychological mood. He must indicate his appreciation of every subtlety, of every nuance. He is both director and mirror. The element of vanity does not enter in; its simply a case of the player exacting recognition.

"Therefore, I maintain that it is as important that an aesthetic and artistic attunement be effected between director and star—in the interests of fine histrionism, as it is necessary for a star to have and hold the interest and sympathy and understanding of an audience in the case of the spoken play."

"RINTINTIN" WINS HONORS

"Rintintin," Belgian shepherd police dog brought from the European trenches back to this country by Lee Duncan of Lankershim, carried away honors for high jumping at the first annual Specialty Show held in Pasadena recently by the Shepherd Dog Club of the West. It was "Rintintin's" ability to jump that won him an important place in Irving Cumming's forthcoming five-reel feature, "The Man from Hell's River," about to be released.

RECENT VISITORS

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman of Columbus, Ohio, and Mr. and Mrs. Moore of the Church Film Corporation, were recent visitors at the Cosmosart Studios, where they expect to make pictures for exhibition in churches. It is understood that eight corporations are now in existence for the making of films for this purpose.

LAURA LA PLANTE

FIFTEEN PAGES FROM SIAM TO MEXICO

Twenty-five days from Siam to Mexico.

While days and days are required to traverse the distance between these two nations, on one occasion at least they were brought near enough so that any man could walk from one to the other in fifteen paces at the most.

It was during the filming of Cecil B. de Mille's Paramount production, "A Fool's Paradise," which opens Paramount week celebration at Grauman's Rialto on Sunday, March 12th, that these two countries were brought into such proximity. On one end of a stage at the Lasky Studios there was built the interior of a Siamese temple; on the other end stood a cantina of a oil town in Mexico. A short distance away from these two sets which are seen in "A Fool's Paradise," was another which represented a city in France. The action of the de Mille creation encircles the globe.

Alfred Allen and Barry Barham are included in the cast of the latest Nell Shipman production which is being filmed in northern sections of the country.

J. Robert Rubin, general counsel and treasurer of the Louis B. Mayer corporations, has returned to New York, after a two weeks' conference with Mr. Mayer, during which the future plans of the studio were decided upon and several contracts signed. The details of these latter will be announced within a few days. Oscar Grossberg, a Boston man financially interested in the Mayer projects, also took an active part in the business meeting.

AUTHOR WRITES MUSICAL SETTING

Eugene Manlove Rhodes has written the musical setting for the presentation of his "Stepsons of Light," about to be filmed by McFadden Productions with Robert Gordon in the stellar role.

Anita Brown, 250-pound comedian, who was recently seen in a character role in "Inside the Cup," is now in Hollywood.

Dorothy Devore's next appearance in a Christie Comedy will be in "Fair Enough," which has just been completed.

A daughter was born recently to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spicer. Mr. Spicer is Vice-President of the Cosmosart Studios.

Hal E. Roach has added Jackie Condon, three years old, to his stock actors, the new addition being the most youthful member on the lot.

Winnifred Verina recently left the New York Hippodrome ballet to appear in Pathe serials starring Charles Hutchison.

William A. Brady is said to have refused an offer of $200,000 for the motion picture rights to "The Man Who Came Back."

Evonne Blasdale is cutting the initial Mission Film production, "Carry on the Race," which Clarence Geldert directed.

Lloyd Hamilton, of Hamilton-White Comedies, will make a trip to New York upon the completion of the production in which he is now working at United Studios.

Baby Peggy Montgomery, who has a prominent role in "Penrod," also has a good part in Marshall Neilan's "Fools First," which has just been completed.

Thomas N. Miranda, who edited and wrote the titles for the First National feature, "The Rosary," is at present engaged in titling the Fox feature, "The Fast Mail," starring Charles Jones.

Florence Lewis of the Marion Morgan dancers trained the chorus which appears in King Vidor's forthcoming cinemaplay, "The Real Adventure," in which Florence Vidor enacts the role of a chorus girl.

The report that Al Ray was to assist F. Richard (Dick) Jones in the filming of "Suzanna," starring Mabel Normand is erroneous, and Mr. Ray wishes to state that he expects to be affiliated indefinitely with his cousin, Charles Ray, in the filming of forthcoming Charles Ray productions for United Artists.

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd is taking the final scenes this week for his comedy, which will probably be called "Grandma's Boy." Four scenes that constitute the "water sequence" and final fadeout were necessarily postponed as the comedian was stricken recently with the "flu" and is just getting around again. Five reels of the comedy are assembled and titled.

Harry "Snub" Pollard's work this week has been interrupted by the illness of his leading lady, Marie Mosquini, who had a light attack of the "flu." Mr. Pollard has been taking various location shots for a costume comedy which was finished recently. His comedies, "Do Me a Favor" and "The Movie," were previewed this week at the studios.

Work is progressing on the second production of the children's comedy company. Tom McNamara, who wrote the script, is on the set daily with Bob McGowan, director of this unit.

"Paul" Parrott is working this week on interiors for scenes in his latest comedy, which has the working title of "The Joiner."

AT THE UNITED STUDIOS

Sol Lesser, producer of the Jackie Coogan pictures, has taken offices at the studios and will use them as his headquarters indefinitely.

Lou Anger, general manager of the Joseph M. Schenck Productions, has received word from New York that Constance Talmadge will return to the studios presently, prepared to start another production. Sidney Franklin, who recently completed "The Divorcee" with Miss Talmadge, will handle the megaphone on her next picture.

Allen Holubar has completed the exterior ship scenes for "The Soul Seeker," his current attraction, and has returned to the studios to complete the production.

A. Carle Palm has left for New York with the negative of "The Masquerader," in which Guy Bates Post is starred.

AT THE INCE STUDIOS

Two more weeks of active work will see the completion of Maurice Tourneur's "Lorna Doone." The cutting and editing will be done by Mr. Tourneur and Wyndham Gittens.

Reeve Houck, assistant production manager, for Thomas H. Ince, is in San Francisco negotiating for an entire circus to be used in "Someone to Love."

"The Brotherhood of Hate" company, directed by Lambert Hillyer, has spent the week filming exteriors.

WESTERN PICTURES NOTES

Dick Hatton expects to start production in about two weeks on a lumber camp story.

"The Man from Hell's River," is on its way to New York, where Irving M. Lesser has arranged for a showing of this latest feature, starring Irving Cummings. The picture was made from a story by James Oliver Curwood and was filmed in Yosemite Park, following the recent heavy snowfall.

AT THE COSMOSART STUDIOS

The Cosmosart Studios are nearing completion. A syndicate to make educational pictures at the studio is ready to start production activities, with W. G. Logan, President of the Logan Wholesale Drug Company installed as business manager and treasurer.

"Rigoletto," the first of the grand opera series to be filmed on this lot, will go into production shortly.

Hugh Thompson and C. K. Van Auker are interpreting principal roles in Nell Shipman's forthcoming photoplay of the far north.

Bryant Washburn is said to be considering the refilming of "Skinner's Dress Suit."

"East Is West" will be an Associated First National production. Constance Talmadge will have the role which Fay Bainter created on the spoken stage, and the picture will be made jointly in California and China, with all the exteriors in California. "East Is West" was written by Mr. Shipman and John B. Hymer.

FIRST NATIONAL NOTES

First National during the next ten days will release Anita Stewart's "A Question of Honor," Mack Sennett's comedy, "On Patrol," Charles Ray's "Gas, Oil and Water," Buster Keaton's "Cops" and Norma Talmadge's "Smilin' Through."

Laurence Trimble and Jane Murfin, co-producers with H. O. Davis of "The Silent Call," are starting west from New York to begin production on another feature in which Strongheart, the wonder dog, will be the star.

The Buster Keaton company is filming "snow stuff" at Truckee. The snow is eight feet deep up there, they say, and still falling.

Katherine MacDonald is also at Truckee with the all-star cast of her current production, "The Woman Conquers." Miss MacDonald's recently completed photoplay in which she is supported by Nigel Barrie has been retitled "Heroes and Husbands."

Marshall Neilan's "Fools First," is now being edited for First National release. Neilan's next production will be "Her Man," adapted from George Pattullo's Saturday Evening Post story.

Anita Stewart took her two latest pictures, "Rose o' the Sea" and "The Woman He Married," to New York with her, last week. They will be previewed in the First National offices in a few days.

It is expected that Sol Lesser will depart with Jackie Coogan's recently completed picture, "Trouble," for New York in a fortnight.

Mabel Normand resumed work recently at the Mack Sennett Studios in "Suzanna," her next First National attraction. Miss Normand has completely recovered from her recent cold and nervous breakdown.

TILFORD CINEMA PURCHASES TIFFANY STUDIO

Walter Ford Tilford, president of the Tilford Cinema Corp., of New York, announced recently that his company had purchased the studio at 334 West 44th St., New York, now known as the Tiffany Studio.

Tilford Cinema has designed and executed the sets for quite a number of Eastern-made productions recently, among them "School Days," "Why Girls Leave Home" and "The Beggar Maid."

The plant was formerly the old Amsterdam Opera House, which was converted into a studio several years ago. Robert Z. Leonard made "Heedless Moths" and "Peacock Alley" there.

CHANGES IN SELZNICK NEWS

Secretary David O. Selznick, in his capacity of managing director of Selznick News, recently appointed Lawrence J. Darmour and Lewis Allen Browne as heads of the editing staff of the reel. Mr. Darmour will be editor and Mr. Browne news editor.

Mr. Selznick also announces the appointment of E. V. Durling, former editor, as sales manager for the news reel. Thomas A. Ruddy as special representative, and Dan Hart as laboratory representative, complete the staff of the News.

The third Ben Wilson-Neva Gerber production is "Impulse."

The American Feature Film Company, which distributes the Universal product in New England, with the exception of a little corner in Connecticut, recently opened its new quarters in Boston, Mass.

RECENT UNIVERSAL RELEASES

Late Universal releases are:

"The Dangerous Little Demon," featuring Marie Prevost (5 reels).

"Black Gold," 15th and final episode of "The Secret Four," featuring Eddie Polo.

"The Ordeal," 10th episode of "With Stanley in Africa," featuring George Walsh and Louise Lorraine (2 reels).

"The Sea Raiders," first episode of "The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," featuring Harry Myers (2 reels).

"A Golf Insect" (1-reel comedy).

International News Nos. 25 and 26.

"Two of a Kind," featuring Harry Sweet (2 reels).

"The Call of Courage," featuring Lauro LaPlante and Percy Pembroke (2 reels).

ZOLA ZORANA

TITLE CHANGED

Constance Talmadge's next First National picture written for her by Edgar Selwyn, and originally entitled "The Divorcee," has been changed to "The Primitive Lover."

It will be released some time in May, being scheduled to follow "Polly of the Follies." The two leading men, Harrison Ford and Kenneth Harlan, who usually alternate in Constance Talmadge's cinema productions, will both be seen in this film. Others in the cast are: Charles Pine, Chief Big Tree, Matilda Brundage, George Pierce and Clyde Benson. Sidney Franklin directed.

GOLDWYN TO FILM "THE CHRISTIAN"

The Goldwyn company has decided to send a unit from Los Angeles to England, (to the Isle of Man, off the English coast), to film "The Christian." Work on this production will be done under the supervision of the author, Hall Caine. No announcement has been made as yet regarding the director and cast. "The Christian" was filmed several years ago by Vitagraph.

The first of the Tom Santschi two-reelers is entitled "The Guilty Oath," which Robert M. Bradbury is directing.

George Berrell and Walt Whitman are playing important parts in the forthcoming Nell Shipman production under the direction of Bert Van Tuyle.

PRESENT CONDITIONS OF THE STATE-RIGHT MARKET

Never before had the Independent Producer a better opportunity for success than is afforded to them under the present market conditions.

The state-right market as it is generally known, struggles with difficulties to get pictures good enough to compete with the immense flood of foreign made pictures that are forced on the American public by organizations financially capable of spending great amounts for publicity to put over inferior foreign pictures on the strength of a few good ones, making the market there-by almost impossible for high class independent productions costing far more to produce than pictures purchased from Europe.

Yet it is but child's play to compete with these foreign made pictures if all independent producers will produce the type of pictures the state-right buyers demand—and produce them economically, so that they could be sold direct to the buyers for low enough prices to stand the competition, yet good enough quality to make the market for foreign made pictures impossible.

The Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate, with headquarters in the Loew's State Bldg. in this city, was organized solely for the purpose of putting the producers in direct touch with the state-right buyers, who advise them from time to time of the exact types of pictures the market requires and of the prices they are able to pay for their respective territories, to stand the present market conditions.

Independent producers are now able to ascertain therefore exactly just what type of pictures to produce, and at what expense; to make pictures for which there is a demand and yet can be produced for a low-enough price to allow a legitimate profit on their efforts and investment, by merely keeping in constant touch with the buyers, through the above Syndicate.

COMPLETES DUTCH FILM

George Beranger, the American director, has completed in Haarlem, Holland, "Thou Shalt Not" for Hollandia Films. Before going to Holland, Beranger made "Sinister Street" for Ideal.

INTERNATIONAL SIGNS HILLER

Lejaren A. Hiller has been engaged by International to collaborate on "When Knighthood Was in Flower," in which Marion Davies will be starred.

GOLDWYN REPRESENTATIVE ON SOUTHERN TRIP

H. H. Hoffenberg, whose title with the Goldwyn company is foreign representative, sailed recently for a three or four months' tour of Central and South American countries.

The production of "Enemies of Women," which Albert Capellani was to make for Cosmopolitan Productions, has been indefinitely postponed.

The third of a series of Little Nap Comedies, which feature the chimpanzee, has been completed by Harry Burns at the Morris R. Schlank studios.

"The Cradle Buster," starring Glen Hunter, which will be released March 19th, includes in its cast Marguerite Courtot, Lois Blaine, William Tooker, Osgood Perkins, Mary Foy, Townsend Martin and Beatrice Morgan.

BARRELL GOES ABROAD

Charles W. Barrell left recently for a four months' trip in Europe, where he expects to make a series of pictures for the Western Electric Co. and other organizations. Some of the subjects will show the development of the telephone in European countries. He will also make a film showing textile conditions in France and in England.

Gertrude Clair, who has played many mother roles, is cast again as a mother in the Louis Burston special production, which co-stars Gareth Hughes and Bessie Love.

Contemporary Criticisms

"LOVES OF PHARAOH"

(Paramount)

"'The Loves of Pharaoh,' billed as the masterpiece of Ernst Lubitsch, and brought to this country by that master of all German directors, is another big production abounding in imposing architectural compositions, stirring battle scenes, in which thousands of characters are used, colorful Egyption splendor, and depending upon these for much of its merit.

"The story is one that, while humanly possible, is interesting only at times and at other times drags to a point that is only relieved from tiresomeness by the advent of one of the big mob scenes. There are a number of these and in every instance they are handled with rare skill."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"The superlatives heaped upon Ernst Lubitsch for his masterly production of 'Deception,' are in order again with his newest achievement, 'The Loves of Pharaoh.' When the season is complete, this spectacular drama of Egypt and the fall of a king will stand near the top. It carries color, bizarre sets, perfect atmosphere and detail, splendid acting, thrills in abundance, real dramatic incident and massive backgrounds against which are assembled thousands of extras."

—Motion Picture News.

"'The Loves of Pharaoh' is a masterpiece. Coming as it does during a period that seems to be marked with a succession of such excellent pictures that all previous standards of comparison are utterly shattered, that it is a masterpiece of the spectacular in moving pictures has far more import than if it was qualified as such at another time. . . . .

"The gorgeousness, stupendousness and sheer artistry in direction baffle description. So much that is overwhelming meets the eye of the enraptured onlooker that his reaction is not to burst into paeans of wild praise, but to attempt in the simplest manner possible an adequate estimate of what is in store for all persons fortunate enough to witness the latest work from the mind and hand of young Ernst Lubitsch."

—Moving Picture World.

"'The Loves of Pharaoh,' incidentally a very bad title—'Pharaoh's Wife' would have been much better—is probably the finest foreign spectacle as yet shown in this country and in addition contains a story of real interest—something that the usual foreign production sadly lacks. Lubitsch, who showed real ability in previous productions, has surpassed all previous efforts very definitely in this.

"There are so many magnificent sets and groupings of large masses of people that it would be difficult to refer to any one without minimizing the value of others, but there are few audiences who will look upon the sets showing the palaces of Pharaoh and the reception of the Ethiopians without a quiver of delight and appreciation."

—Wid's.

"PARDON MY NERVE"

(Fox)

"'Pardon My Nerve' is a good melodrama of a familiar sort. 'Buck' Jones, more willingly known as Charles Jones, has a heroic part which he does with intelligence as well as nerve, and his agility in penalizing wife-beaters and mortgage sharks, will no doubt, win the admiration of every 'red-blooded' fan."

—Moving Picture World.

"Adopted from a regulation pattern with the characteristic flavor of the western revealing gun-play and the other accepted ideas, 'Pardon My Nerve,' reaches the screen as Charles (Buck) Jones' latest opus. It provides weak entertainment because the action centers upon a single shooting scene with the identification of the villains.

"Jones engages in a fight scene which is not hefty enough to color a western."

—Motion Picture News.

"Charles (Buck) Jones' latest release varies very little indeed from several of his past productions and perhaps isn't quite as strong a western feature as he usually offers. There is a good deal of action, but it is all the same kind—hold-ups, and more hold-ups.

"The exteriors are of the usual order, but it is about time the Fox west coast lots saw a new 'western town set.' The same one has been used so frequently in both the Tom Mix and Buck Jones pictures that it is already too familiar."

—Wid's.

"BEYOND THE RAINBOW"

(R-C Pictures)

"There is an odd mixture of comedy and drama running through the production, and either idea would have furnished material for a feature. It is too bad the comedy plot was not carried out more completely, for just as it promises a highly interesting finish, it veers off into a near-tragedy and is forgotten. The production is one of the best offered by Robertson-Cole in some time and will undoubtedly attract attention by reason of the large cast and the skillful handling of the story."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"It is easy enough to know that the picture is good entertainment, but how to classify it is another matter.

"The lack of compactness forces the introduction of very many characters. The production is so many-sided that it should have a very wide appeal, and if this is Mr. Cabanne's intent, he has succeeded admirably."

—Motion Picture News.

"This is undoubtedly the best picture William Christy Cabanne has made since 'The Stealers,' and offers a form of variety entertainment, the kind that consists of enough different elements to reach out and satisfy the desires of about everyone in any audience."

—Wid's.

"When the first and foremost object of producing is to be pretentious, a picture cannot fail to sacrifice something as far as entertainment and truth are concerned—and this is the impression created by 'Beyond the Rainbow.' The use of a grand cast and the elaborateness throughout are features that are emphasized to the point of being obtrusive, and consequently inartistic. No inconsiderable part of the first reel is devoted to the introduction of so many names and characters that only the most systematic of minds could possibly retain them all, and the significance of each. . . .

"'Beyond the Rainbow' has only the smallest connection with the story and has most likely been selected for its picturesqueness, if any."

—Moving Picture World.

"THE CAVE GIRL"

(First National)

"This semi-humorous romance presents a variation of the primitive love formula. Instead of representing a city-bred girl finding a cave-man for a mate in the wilds the authors have reversed the pattern. Otherwise the picture follows the regular, orthodox channels, depending upon a wholesome story, worked out logically, although coincidence creeps in here and there to give it a dramatic flavor."

—Moving Picture News.

"As a modern slant on the hardships of roughing it, especially when the vacationers are society folk, 'The Cave Girl' is good entertainment. Most of the picture has been executed in a light vein, and contains some clever comedy. . . . It starts out by being sophisticated and humorous, continues by being red-blooded and sinister, finally returning into the first mood, as it draws to a close."

—Moving Picture World.

"For winter scenery and fine out-of-doors atmosphere 'The Cave Girl' belongs way up on the front rank and even if the story isn't a whopper, the feature as a whole will be likely to satisfy because of its splendid pictorial appeal. There's no imitations nor winter 'effects' in this. It's the real thing and has been beautifully photographed."

—Wid's.

"HER OWN MONEY"

(Paramount)

"A rather conventional plot has been gracefully presented here in a subject devoted to the art of domestic financeering. The entire production is typical of Ethel Clayton in the smooth, restrained manner of the performance which is entertaining without being startling.

"There are several opportunities for intrigue and melodrama, but the original purpose of the story has been kept carefully in mind, and the temptation to create a 'scene' now and then just for the sake of excitement has been avoided."

—Moving Picture World.

"It really doesn't matter a great deal that the basic situation of 'Her Own Money' is not an altogether new one on the screen because the feature, as a whole, offers a pleasing entertainment of the light variety, has an appealing star to help put it over and, after all, deals with a subject that happens to be a part of every day life."

—Wid's.

"An appropriate vehicle has been found to fit Ethel Clayton's personality and talent in 'Her Own Money.' . . . There is nothing very emotional or exciting about the story. In its favor, however, is a decidedly refreshing note. And this after all is what makes the picture a satisfying one.

"There are no morbid sex moments. The picture holds the interest without the added help of expensive settings and sartorial display."

—Motion Picture News.

The Man on The Cover

By Ted LeBerthon

It is not often that one meets so real a man. By real I mean one totally unaffected, who says what he means, is direct and unreserved, is not afraid to voice his convictions—one who talks about others' achievements rather than his own.

There is a wholeness about Frank O'Connor that is stimulating to those about him, a candor that is delightful and disarming.

There are very few professional actors and actresses who are not acquainted with the ebullient O'Connor, and those who have not met him know his sterling reputation as a perspicacious director attained during two years at Lasky's.

O'Connor came out here from New York with the late William Desmond Taylor a few years ago; in fact, co-directed nine photodramas with Taylor, including "Sacred and Profane Love"—a somewhat recent starring vehicle for Elsie Furguson.

The big, broad-shouldered son of Erin is a master of anecdote. As we sat at luncheon in the Armstrong-Carleton Cafe on Hollywood Boulevard, he espied Bernard Durning at another table.

"My second director," he announced, "back in the old Edison days when I was a promising young leading man, fresh from musical comedy."

"With whom did you start your screen career?"

"With Vitagraph, in Brooklyn; took the L that goes to Sheepshead Bay every morning, back in the days when Norma Talmadge was a youngster and Connie was still in short skirts"

His blue eyes twinkled gaily as he lit a cigar. "Yes, I was Gladys Leslie's leading man for several pictures, just long enough to realize that mine was not a screenable personality—that the directorial end should be my goal.

"You see, I knew all about stage direction and had kept my eyes and ears open around the film studios."

"How long were you on the stage?" I queried.

"Started when I was eleven years old with Henry Miller in 'Richard Savage. Madame Dion Bousicault, Harry Northrup, and Wilfrid North—now production manager for Vitagraph, were in that same company.

"Later on I went with Richard Carle in 'In Gotham,' in which the famous fountain and first floor of Siegel-Cooper's Department store were reproduced."

Between the soup and the broiled lobster, he told me of an uncle of his who made three million dollars fifty years ago in New York by burlesquing Shakespeare and not letting the audience in on the fact.

"How was that possible?"

"Well," he replied, chuckling, "it was this way: everything was advertised and presented as being serious, but the acting would be so rotten that the audiences would hoot and jeer. Then my uncle would stop the play, advance to the footlights and tell the audience that they were not being fair to the hard-working players, who had families to support and were doing their best! This would evoke much derisive laughter and comment.

"Sometimes he would have it fixed that a piece of stage setting collapsed, so that a serious love scene would be interrupted and, of course, marred. Each performance he had something different happen. Once one of the audience tossed a cabbage onto the stage and my uncle, with serious mien and tears in his eyes, begged the hurler to throw on some corned beef as well—so that some of the starving actors might eat! Another time, while playing Hamlet, he stopped in the middle of the famous "Soliloquy" and in grave and dignified tones declared to the audience that it had just occurred to him to announce the following week's program!

"He buffaloed the public—and the press. To reporters and magazine interviewers he insisted that the public were a bunch of cattle who didn't know 'art' when they beheld it face to face; and that the critics were a bunch of uneducated hoodlums. All this stuff got into print—with the result that his performances were always packed to the doors."

O'Connor told me of many other screamingly funny incidents, but space forbids my passing them on to the readers. The conversation gradually drifted back to motion pictures.

Frank O'Connor thinks that Marshall Neilan is the greatest of all directors.

"He's without a peer," he declared, looking very earnest; "he knows the human heart better than any other director extant. When it comes to inscribing genuine sentiment on celluloid documents, he's the master. And he has the courage of his convictions—never wanders about in mazes of so-called art, but plays upon the chords of romance, as romance is known in ordinary human experience. At any rate, the popularity of Neilan pictures is proof of his ability."

I objected that popularity was no measure of merit.

"Well, what is, then?" he countered; "when you get down to the question of art, just what is art? Is it the director's province to proffer beautiful settings and poetic sub-titles—or should he center his efforts towards plumbing universal emotions? Or is it art to write a book or produce a photoplay that is comprehensible to a limited audience? These are arbitrary questions that cannot be satisfactorily answered. But the box-office is a sure criterion. Here is something tanglible, concrete. Candidly, I think Neilan a superior artist because he knows what will make us laugh and cry. At any rate, he's more of an artist than several directors who talk much of 'art.' He just says nothing and makes about five times as much money as most of them."

This seems like pretty good logic. O'Connor also avers that too many artistic standards are heritages of by-gone years and centuries; that it is impossible to overlook the read and run spirit of today. He believes that many literary classics could be filmed—but in a more rapid tempo than that in which they were written.

"But I don't think they'll ever film the plays of Moliere, Rostand, or Hauptmann," he added—"satire, poetry and extreme profundity have no place at present on the screen."

Frank O'Connor is to start a series of productions of his own in the immediate future

"THE WISE KID"

(Universal)

"Universal is fortunate to be able to secure stories of this type because they suit the personality and talents of Gladys Walton better than anything else she has had. 'The Guttersnipe' was another of this variety and 'The Wise Kid' is a good follow up on it.

"A good deal of the picture's laughs come from the titles of which there are a great many. They are well written, however, even if they do make the film a bit 'talky' at times."

—Wid's.

"If there is one star who is finding appropriate vehicles for expression—that star is Gladys Walton. Her personality fits exactly the type of role which she has been portraying of late—a type of role which may find her as some ragmuffin Pollyanna or East Side Cinderella."

—Motion Picture News.

"A more than pleasant reaction for the tiresome Pollyanna fairytales, 'The Wise Kid,' is a laugh on the person who goes through the world looking for a chance to do 'kind deed' instead of minding his own business. . . .

"It might be described as a love affair in slang as the characters are of the tenement section with the jargon and tastes of that district consistently reproduced."

—Moving Picture World.

"A WIDE OPEN TOWN"

(Selznick)

Conway Tearle has been given a first-rate story in his latest production and one that will in all probability please his admirers thoroughly. The 'honest gambler' idea is not essentially original but it is nicely built up with a romance that reaches the happy ending in the final reel. Director Ince tells the story evenly and it moves swiftly toward an effective climax.

—Wid's.

"A typical high-class program feature is 'A Wide Open Town,' starring Conway Tearle. . . . It is of the 'reform' variety, but it is never trite or dull."

—Motion Picture News.

"CARDIGAN"

(Messmore Kendall)

"So much ground is covered by the story that many long descriptive and informative titles have been necessary to keep it comprehensive. They succeed generally in keeping facts clear and intelligible, but there a 'kind deed' instead of minding his own givn a little too much prominence and the romance suffers thereby. . . .

"Undoubtedly the best feature of the production is the presentation of the famous Paul Revere ride. This bit in particular is sure to inspire a great patriotic fervor and for that matter the entire picture has a tendency to boost the 'America for Americans' slogan."

—Wid's.

"The story-interest is not as keen in the picture as in the novel, there being several jumps in the continuity and liberty has been taken with showing incidents of the time which sort of defy logic.

"The Indians are not good types and the Colonial scenes are too refined. However, the picture carries some exciting sequences."

"Crammed with exciting and varied incidents which are accompanied by a charming love story that, in a manner of speaking, plays a counter melody to the historical plot, but is strong enough to satisfy those who demand romance in their pictures, the picturization of Robert W. Chambers' extremely widely read novel of some years ago makes a picture with which no exhibitor can go wrong. . . . It is illustrated patriotism without being mawkishly sentimental and it is stirring without performing what is popularly known as 'waving the flag' in a cheap manner."

THE MAN ON THE COVER
By Ted LeBerthon

at the Robertson-Cole Studios. The first of these will be an adaptation of "Tales of the Road," a Saturday Evening Post episodic mirroring of commercial travelers' lives, written by C. N. Crewdson.

"I'm going to make dramas and comedy dramas, but no tragedies," he declares; "and I'm going to cleave to that middle road wherein the story's the thing. No trying to put over a negligible story because of its pictorial possibilities."

That same evening I had dinner with a quite successful motion picture director. I asked him if he knew O'Connor.

"Do I?" was the prompt reply. "Why, I've watched him for the past two years, and his future is an assured success. He combines practicality with a strain of poetry and a feel for strong drama that is almost uncanny. Yes, Frank is a mighty capable fellow."

AT LASKY'S

Among the interesting arrivals at the studio this week were Mr. and Mrs. George Fitzmaurice, the latter known professionally as Ouida Bergere, who is responsible for the scenarios of many of her husband's motion pictures. Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corp., announced that Mr. Fitzmaurice, who is the producer of "Experience," "On With the Dance," "Forever," "Three Live Ghosts," and other Paramount pictures, would soon begin work on a screen version of "Happiness," J. Hartley Manners' stage success, with May McAvoy in the role formerly played by Laurette Taylor. Miss Bergere will adapt "Happiness" to the screen.

Tom Geraghty, formerly Supervising Editor of the London Studios, arrived, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Fitzmaurice, and will augment the staff of Frank E. Woods at the studio in a chief editorial capacity.

John S. Robertson, producer of "Sentimental Tommy," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," "Footlights," etc., accompanied by his wife, professionally known as Josephine Lovett, are soon to become members of the big family at the studio, where Mr. Robertson will shortly begin production of a picture.

William de Mille will soon arrive in California to begin work on "Nice People," which play Clara Beranger has adapted to the screen. Mr. de Mille has secured for his production to follow "Nice People," the Booth Tarkington play, "Clarence," which is to be made with a star cast.

"Blood and Sand," which is Rudolph Valentino's initial star vehicle, was started this week at the studio under the direction of Fred Niblo. June Mathis adapted this Ibanez story. Anna Q. Nillson is leading woman, and Lila Lee appears in one of the role sin the picture.

Gloria Swanson has begun work on "The Gilded Cage," her next picture, a Sam Woods Production. Elmer Harris wrote the screen play from the stage version by Anna Nichols. David Powell is leading man, and among others in the cast are Anne Cornwall, Chas. A. Stevenson and Walter Hiers.

Jack Holt and Bebe Daniels, co-stars in "Val of Paradise," the film play directed by Rollin Sturgeon, adapted by Will M. Ritchey from the story by Vingie E. Roe, are at work at the studio and nearby locations completing this western drama, much of which was made in Arizona

"The Ordeal," under the direction of Paul Powell, is nearing completion.

Under the direction of Alfred Green, Thomas Meighan is progressing towards the climax of "Our Leading Citizen," George Ade's original contribution, which the author and Waldemar Young adapted.

"The Woman Who Walked Alone," George Melford's production, in which Dorothy Dalton is featured, and wherein Wanda Hawley and Milton Sills have important roles, has now reached the stages when location work is necessary to represent scenes in the South African veldt and the mountainous country of that section of the world. This story is by Will M. Ritchey from the short story by John Colton.

Penrhyn Stanlaws' production, "Over the Border," after many weeks in the far north of the State, is being brought to a close at the studio. The cast of this picture is headed by Betty Compson and Tom Moore.

Cecil B. de Mille appeared for a short time at the studio this week, almost entirely restored to his normal health, and it is understood that, within a few weeks, production will be started on "Manslaughter," by Jeanie Macpherson, suggested by the story of the same name by Alice Duer Miller. It will be a Paramount Picture.

Valuable Publicity

Very infrequently do we stumble upon any type of publicity which we recognize as sufficiently notable or meritorious to overcome an inherited journalistic distaste for editorial advertising. "My Travels Abroad," by Charlie Chaplin, a March publication from Harper and Brothers, is a recent exception. It is because this effort is significant to the motion picture industry from several angles and therefore entirely worthy of the profession's serious perusal that we attempt a short review at this time.

Being a humorous autobiography rather cleverly shaded with a half pathetic tone, of the world famous comedian's first return to Europe since his advent in America ten years ago, it makes up in pictureseque phrasing and an intimate portrait of its subject, that which it misses in the way of technical perfection. The idea behind the document may be unusual in no sense, but its genuine tone and interesting attitude has never heretofore been characteristic of even the highest type of picture celebrity publicity. The real Chaplin is continually revealed through these pages of adventure as any of his acquaintances can testify and the way that liberties are taken with his mental trend further points to the idea that the droll genius is in fact the author of these sidelights upon himself. We doubt whether any eminent human would allow another to throw him into the light of ridicule of the type which Charlie consistently directs at himself. But it is delightful, constructive ridicule in places approaching the very ingenious in its comedy.

His diffidence at the prospect of meeting George Bernard Shaw, his casual failure to appear in season after having arranged an appointment with Lloyd George, his appreciation for Thomas Burke and affection for the simplicity in H. G. Wells, all of these disclose the soul of a timid but rather naughty child combated strenuously by the outlook of a hero-worshipped man of the word. To use a favorite term of the little actor, it is all very "intriguing."

Further, the personal slants upon the foremost political and artistic personages of Europe are more than entertaining; they are instructive.

From our standpoint as an industry there are two notable points accomplished here. In giving to the public something both amusing and wholesome in the way of picture colony personality sketches, Chaplin is assisting his profession to discount the detrimental press copy which it has recently received in such inordinate doses through the unscrupulous agencies of sensation seeking newspaper correspondents. Furthermore, we probably have in this little volume the only authentic life chapter which will ever be written upon this artistic and justifiedly famous representative of a great endeavor. As such it is infinitely valuable for our history. Its preparation was a happy thought and its publishing by a reputable firm, a rare piece of judgment. F. R.

"Outlook" Says of the Theatre

The following article from a March "Outlook," championing the actor, should be of great interest to the picture profession. Its view-point is entirely wholesome and it contains only the most obvious and therefore supportable statements.

"A savage onslaught on all theaters and all actors and actresses cannot be justified, but it may be palliated, if not excused, on the ground of the accuser's ignorance. It practically never comes from any one who has a living acquaintance with the members of the theatrical profession or has any familiarity with their work upon the stage. Those who have that familiarity and have the good moral sense to seek the best which the theater has to offer will generally agree with the sentiment attributed by Sidney Colvin to Robert Browning after seeing Salvini's impersonation of King Lear: 'It makes me wonder which is the greater, the poet or the actor.'

"Great actors have in their autobiographies and their letters graphically described the perils of the stage. They might well be inclined, when not in a defensive mood, to acknowledge that theirs is an extra-hazardous profession. There is no doubt that there is great need of reform. The responsibility for the evil conditions which exist must be divided, though unequally, between three classes.

"It partly rests upon certain theatrical managers who have neither moral nor art standards, to whom the theater is merely a money-making profession, and who measure success wholly by the receipts at the box-office. Such managers are to be classed with shysters in the law, quacks in medicine, purveyors of vicious art and degenerate literature. The responsibility partly rests upon theater-goers whose morbid curiosity is great, whose consciences are dumb, and who are attracted by vicious plays—the more vicious, the more attractive. But the responsibility is partly shared by those who ought by their influence to inspire a discriminating judgment between the good and the evil, but who, instead, by their indiscriminating condemnation of all theaters and all actors encourage an equally indiscriminating approval of all.

"We hope that the day is not far distant when the preachers will regard the drama as they now regard fiction, and will use what influence they possess to inspire their young people to exercise a discriminating judgment upon both forms of intellectual and emotional life.' '

AT THE ROACH STUDIOS

Harold Lloyd put the final touches this week on his feature, "Grandma's Boy," which is his first five-reeler. The comedy has had several studio and two public previews, and with a third showing will be ready for shipment to New York. The comedy went under production October 22. Screen credit in addition to Mr. Lloyd and Mildred Davis playing opposite, goes to Charles Stevenson, "heavy," Anna Townsend, Lloyd's grandma, and Dick Sutherland, the rolling stone. Mr. Lloyd will take no vacation but will commence immediately on his next production, the script for which was written by Hal Roach, Sam Taylor and Jean Havez.

Harry "Snub" Pollard began his first two-reeler this week, the working title being "Grandpa's Will," Charles Parrott, director-general of Roach Productions with the exception of the Harold Lloyd comedies, wrote the story and will handle the megaphone, assisted by Bob Evans. Marie Mosquini heads the support.

"Paul" Parrott has a few more scenes to take for his first picture under his new series of comedies. Mr. Parrott is going over the script for the second comedy which starts production next week, Al Santell directing. Eddie Baker plays opposite the comedian as "heavy."

AT UNIVERSAL

"Human Hearts," a Jewel special, starring House Peters, supported by an all-star cast and directed by King Baggot is being given its second and final editing. "The Storm," the second special, starring Peters, directed by Reginald Barker, and "That Lass o' Lowrie's," a Jewel production starring Priscilla Dean are also being edited.

Recently completed features to be sent to the exchanges this week are: "The Man Under Cover," Louis Victor Eytinge's story of convicts by a convict, starring Herbert Rawlinson and directed by Tod Browning; "The Way Back," the last screen story by the late John Fleming Wilson, starring Frank Mayo and directed by Stuart Paton; "Kissed," starring Marie Prevost and directed by King Baggot; and "Second Hand Rose," A. P. Younger's story with Gladys Walton, directed by Lloyd Ingraham.

The three Universal Jewels that are starting production are "Under Two Flags," Ouida's international romance starring Priscilla Dean; "The Suburban," Charles L. Dazey's old time stage melodramatic success, to be filmed as a Universal Jewel with an all-star cast; and "The Flirt."

"With Stanley in Africa" and "In the Days of Buffalo Bill," two historical chapter plays starring George Walsh and Art Acord, are two-thirds completed, while "The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," starring Harry Myers, in making rapid progress with earlier episodes.

Euna Luckey is included in the cast of "Locked Out," starring Alice Calhoun.

The removal of the Selznick organization and Warner Brothers to Hollywood virtually concentrates all motion picture production in the west. There remain in the vicinity of New York only the D. W. Griffith and a very few other and less important units.

Current Reviews

"WILD HONEY"

(Superba)

An introduction in the parks of the English nobility, tragedy in the way of a murder early in the picture, the horror of the lost in the South African veldt, a rescue from melodramatic opposition and "wild honey" with a dam explosion and a realistic, ensuing flood which brings the production's climax after effective suspense! This is "Wild Honey," Universal's latest Priscilla Dean presentation written by Cynthia Stockley and well scenarized by Lucien Hubbard. It is an exceedingly suitable vehicle for the strenuous young star and altogether the situations hold unlimited interest.

Wesley Ruggles' direction displays a fine comprehension of his story and he achieves an unusually high tone for the photoplay in view of its class.

Miss Dean gives a characteristic performance in Lady Vivienne, an Englishwoman, who leaves her superficiality under the merciless sun upon the South African desert. This portrayal can only increase the star's popularity, generally.

Robert Ellis plays the masculine lead, Kerry Burgess, according to the hero standard, lending him much virility and considerable sympathy.

The Beery brothers are seen in distinct but equally impressive and repulsive heavies, Henry Porthen, a financial demon, and Buck Roper, a derelicit. Noah fills the former and Wallace, the latter. Both are invaluable touches to the story which, as has been said, depends to quite some extent upon melodrama to accomplish its suspense.

In fact, "Wild Honey's" opposition is so vital an element that it takes six actors to handle it. They are further, Lloyd Whitlock, Landers Stevens, C. J. Frank and Harry De Roy.

Helen Raymond offers a clever note in Joan Rudd, Porthen's scorned secretary whose revenge is murder, while Raymond Blathwayt and Carl Stockdale complete the list of players.

"COME ON OVER"

(California)

Rupert Hughes' latest Goldwyn produced story, "Come On Over," is a whimsical, simple little Irish comedy with many rich characters from old Erin strung upon an almost too thin plot-thread. In fact, the entire picture depends upon the charm, humorous and pathetic, of these various portrayals for in intrigue, intense interest, or even marked logic, the tale is conspicuously lacking. Nevertheless, it holds a fair amount of entertainment value and, as has been intimated, gold mines of characterization for its cast.

Particularly well managed by Director Al Green are the comedy situations, the picture's most excellent moments.

An understandable scenario by the author, good photography which is to L. W. O'Connell's credit and a few quaintly beautiful locations add further to the attraction of "Come On Over."

However, it takes the talented players themselves to make the production really live.

The chief feminine position is piquantly occupied by Colleen Moore whose delightful Irish mannerisms and attitude seem quite the natural thing from her. Much more involved roles has the sincere little actress accomplished admirably, but Moyna Killilea will hold inestimable delight for those who are beguiled by Celtic elementalism.

Ralph Graves is also picturesque and almost typical in Shane O'Mealia, Moyna's misunderstood lover.

It is the homely atmosphere of the Morahan family, cleverly headed by J. Farrell MacDonald and Kate Price, however, that provides the finishing touch to the shamrock framed picture. Florence Drew, Harold Holland, Marry Warren and C. B. Leasure fill it out, each in pleasing part.

FRANCIS ERDMAN

Elinor Hancock, James Marcus, Tom Bates, Kathleen O'Connor, Monti Collins and C. E. Mason competently handle the remaining material which is unvaryingly, completely Irish.

"Come On Over" is not up to the Hughes story standard despite its several excellent points. Its title and type should, in any event, draw large houses.

"THE SEVENTH DAY"

Kinema

Richard Barthelmess' second starring cinemaplay for Inspiration Pictures, Inc., while being unable to boast any degree of the strength which made "Tol'able David" one of the year's best, is a fortunate follow-up for that production. "The Seventh Day" is a simple romance dealing with real people, sincere and frivolous. Always one is aware of the quaint fishing village background with which its author, Porter Emerson Brown, has added so much that is charming to his briny little tale.

Henry King seems almost essential to Barthelmess pictures inasmuch as he continues to add immeasurably to them with his superfine direction. Into this story he inserts in perfect proportion the comedy and pathos upon which it depends. His progression makes the absence of an outstanding climax or an element of pronounced suspense, unnoticeable.

The scenario moves evenly, Conjager's photography fulfills all expectations and the title writer helps not a little. The cast is, without exception, capable.

Dick himself makes a lovable boy out of the unsophisticated but always dignified John Alden, Jr. He carries well the responsibility of his fishing boat and position in the community which is an agreeable digression in the young, rural screen characterization, ordinarily so devoid of any obligation or poise. John is all that could be desired in sincerity and it is easy to understand why even a pampered, city girl might fall in love with him.

The flapper in this instance is none other than Louise Huff whose rendition of Patricia Vane is unimaginably delectable despite the fact that she runs to superficialities.

George Stewart and Anne Cornwall playing opposite one another in second parts, namely Reggie Pell and Betty Alden, are an entirely attractive addition to the story while Frank Losee, Leslie Stowell, Tammany Young, Alfred Schmid, Grace Barton, Patterson Dial and Teddie Gerard are suitable choices for the remaining positions.

"The Seventh Day" will unquestionably draw well for First National. Its star is a great bet.

"TRAVELIN' ON"

Grauman's

The same rugged frontier setting, the indomitable hero, red-blooded battles and quick gunplay, wound up with a sympathetic sacrifice finish, that brought William S. Hart into the warm light of public favor where he has remained unchallenged for the past several years, is seen again in "Travelin' On," his current production scenarized and directed by Lambert Hillyer from the cowboy star's original. The suspense doted upon by Hart's six year old fans and others as well, is present in abundance and the tear that comes with the good bad man's reform is very real. Otherwise, in fact altogether, there is nothing new included in the melodrama. We doubt whether its lack will be noticed. So long as the spirit of adventure fills young hearts, big, homely Bill Hart will delight thousands.

Here he enacts J. B., a man who trusts nothing but himself on less than four legs. The quiet, fearless stranger is not so posy nor his attitude so trite as the sophisticated might be led to believe, for the appealing personality of this actor humanizes the exaggerated.

Ethel Grey Terry is a remarkable type for the pioneer woman. As the minister's wife who knows that the Lord will provide her with sufficient strength to resist the two desperate men who desire her, she is always convincing.

James Farley makes Dandy McGee just as repulsive as dance hall and saloon keepers should be according to all accepted standards, and Willis Marks lightens the atmosphere somewhat as Haskins, the village gossip and schemer.

Brinsley Shaw as the patient minister, little Mary Jane Irving and Robert Kortman complete the cast of "Travelin' On," which is released by Paramount.

It is understood that Jack Dempsey will start work on a new serial about April 15th.

A weekly prize of $100 will be awarded for the best fifty word answers to the question of the hour: "How Can Business Be Improved for the Manufacturer, Merchant, Working Man and Woman?"

The prize winner will be announced each week on the screen. The sponsors of the contest deem the screen as a logical vehicle for the conduct of such an important campaign.

Pathe Exchange and the producers of this reel have been overwhelmed with suggestions from various sources as to the immense amount of good possible of attainment in screening a series of Better Business messages. It is to make these messages a real helpful inspiration to our lawmakers, and thus bring about remedial legislative action, that the contest is being conducted.

FORTHCOMING EDUCATIONAL RELEASES

"Missing Men" will be the second of the Wilderness Tales by Robert C. Bruce, of which "And Women Must Weep," that recently had its premiere at the Capitol Theater in New York, was the first: "Missing Men" tells in a dramatic little story the misfortunes of a man overcome by the "timber panic" in the great forests of the Northwest.

"The People of Old Bruges," the next release in Educational's series of World Wanderings, gives ten minutes of interesting glimpses into the life of the people of this old town in Belgium.

Contemporary Criticisms

"FALSE FRONTS"

(Bradley Feature Film)

"'False Fronts' as its title indicates, is a story of shame and pretense. Written by S. Barrett McCormick, the Cleveland impresario, the feature reveals that a showman, having his hand on the pulse of the public, is able to give that same public what it wants.

"The director is to be commended for making a simple progressive drama. There are no repetitious details, the plot unfolding easily and naturally. Pictorially it offers some telling 'shots' emphasizing a number of lavish sets, not a few of which are exceedingly vital. And it carries a fine vein of interest and suspense culminating in a stirring climax.

"The story carries elements of heart interest, pathos, romance, thrills, rich incident and considerable local color. It tugs at the finer sense because it approaches the bedrock of human nature."—Motion Picture News.

"This story was written with the audience values in mind, for the writer, as the announcement discloses, is S. Barrett McCormick, managing director of the Allen Theatre, Cleveland, and writer of the well-known pictures, 'Truthful Tolliver' and 'The Disciple.' Its situations are new; its action fact and the direction by Samuel Bradley shows a decided improvement in his work as a producer.

"The determination of a young man to 'come back' and the clever ruse by which his best friend at the risk of that friendship brings him back to his senses furnish the appeal and suspense."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"LOVE'S BOOMERANG"

(British Paramount)

"'Love's Boomerang' is a production made by the Paramount English studio with a cast mostly American and directed by John S. Robertson. The picture was photographed in England and France, and is an adaptation of Dion Clayton Calthorp's novel, 'Perpetua.'

"It happens that beside the excellent work of the cast it is the atmosphere that contributes most of the interest to the present picture, and in such a degree that it completely overshadows the story. The latter is old fashioned in style and unusually theatrical, so much so in fact that you can see the wheels go 'round, to mix the metaphor."—Moving Picture World.

"John S. Robertson has again scored in his most recent production made on the other side. While 'Love's Boomerang' lacks the material and consistency of some of Robertson's former productions it nevertheless makes a charming production with many attractive points of interest. Robertson has kept the first half of the offering in his 'Sentimental Tommy' mood while the climax he has intensified to the 'Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde' pitch. Touches of both productions are evident in 'Love's Boomerang.'

"From start to finish the director's hand is evident. Well thought out details and a masterly handling of the situations raise the story from its ordinary level and keep the interest on a high plane. Fine sets, splendid photography, artistic locations and good acting all help to compensate for the melodramatic and inconsistent story."—Wid's.

"'Love's Boomerang' is not devoid of heart interest, outlining a love story with a good deal of tender sentiment, with a melodramatic setting and a murder mystery for good measure, which is solved to everyone's satisfaction at the close, virtue being duly rewarded and the guilty villain meeting his just deserts. The film was made abroad, and is consequently rich in local color, the French and British atmosphere being, of course, true to life and thoroughly in keeping with the unwinding of the tale.

"There are many beautiful exteriors in evidence, not the least of the picture's artistic lure being the charming views of the quiet British countryside, and good lighting prevails. The continuity is unbroken and the action moves smoothly."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"There are enough plots and counterplots in 'Love's Boomerang' to fill a serial... The central theme is interesting since it shows an old idea refreshened with some plausible incident... It is our impression that if the picture were simplified in plot it would carry a greater appeal.

"The story is difficult to follow because of its many sub-plots. But in its favor is a remarkable display of backgrounds, the director sparing no expense to collect charming exteriors. There is some good circus atmosphere and technically the production is too good for such weak material."—Motion Picture News.

"SHATTERED IDOLS"

(Associated First National)

"Perhaps because there have been so many mother love stories picturized of late the producer thought a mother-hate theme would be thoroughly appropriate and so Ida A. R. Wylie's novel, 'The Daughter of Brahma,' was selected and produced under the title, 'A Bride of the Gods.' The adaptation has been given a suitable presentation and a capable cast selected to portray the various roles with evident discretion as to their suitability for the parts.

"The story's main situation is much too improbable to be convincing."—Wid's.

"'Shattered Idols' is a lavish production of a theme that has great possibilities. India, it always seems, affords very fine opportunities for a picturesque development of drama, and this fact has been born closely in mind. The material splendor, in this case, is more than abviously pleasing, too... Hindu intrigue and Hindu traditions furnish the dramatic and spectacular interest, the best illustration of this being the temple scene.

"A justifiable criticism of the entire production is that it has a tendency to be vague at times, as if some of the important links had been omitted, and too much is left to the imagination."—Moving Picture World.

"BOY CRAZY"

(R-C Pictures)

"The picture 'Boy Crazy,' featuring Doris May, is fairly good amusement for an audience who seek light comedy...

"This picture may prove to be a refreshing bit of comedy for any audience, but its particular appeal will possibly be among the school-girl patronage."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"A polite little comedy is 'Boy Crazy,' starring Doris May. There is nothing very humorous about the story, the various scenes, characters and titles unfolding an obvious line of action, none of which are marked by any mirth provoking qualities. It is to frail or brittle that compresses into three reels the picture would contain a compactness and a spontaneity which is largely absent through scenes which are over-emphasized."—Motion Picture News.

"Where there is a demand for flapper comedies with more speed than sense and more pep than plot, 'Boy Crazy' with Doris May should fill the requirement.

"It is not presumptuous to say that the average adult requires something a little more sustained and consistent as screen entertainment—especially in the way of features. Apparently a two-reel comedy could have been made of this material with excellent results."—Moving Picture World.

"POLLY OF THE FOLLIES"

(First National)

"Quick action, a bunch of farcial situations, and a strong tinge of satire directed at those well-meaning but unimaginative legislators who would fain murder the movies by the introduction of hampering blue laws are served up in this latest vehicle designed by John Emerson and Anita Loos for the starring of the ever popular Constance Talmadge...

"Despite the episodical nature of the plot the continuity is well preserved and fast action distinguishes the production from first to last."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Here is an excellent example of what intelligent direction can make out of next to nothing. The story of this latest picture for Constance Talmadge is so fragile, so diaphanous that under the shouting and the mauling of the average director it would have blown entirely away. But Mr. Emerson and Miss Loos have handled it with such delicacy and humor and such a nice sense of burlesque that they have made it into one of the most intelligent and diverting screen comedies we have seen."

"This picture ought to go a long way toward restoring Miss Talmadge to her position as the leading light comedienne of the screen—a position she has been in danger of forfeiting of late. And is proves beyond doubt that Miss Loos and Mr. Emerson are without peers as the writers and directors of intelligent comedy.

"We recommend this one to you without reservations."—Filmplay Journal.

"The last few Constance Talmadge features were not up to the expectations of those who had come to expect really fine comedy features from this comedienne, but everyone who sees 'Polly of the Follies' will vote it a big improvement over the others and a truly worthwhile offering.

"There is no conspicious plot or continuous story in 'Polly of the Follies,' but there is plenty of humorous incident and laughs evenly distributed that make up adequately for the usual plot."—Wid's.

NATIONAL EXCHANGES, INC., OPENS SECOND OFFICE

Announcement of the opening of the second affiliated exchange, owned and controlled by National Exchanges, Inc., is made by Walter L. Johnson, president of National Exchanges.

The new exchange is Cosmopolitan National Exchanges, Inc., located on South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, with Carl Harthill as manager.

The first of its own exchanges opened by National Exchanges, Inc., was Metropolitan National Exchanges, Inc., with offices on Seventh Avenue, New York City, which has been doing business for several weeks under the direction of R. C. Cropper.

With the opening of the new Chicago exchange, National Exchanges, Inc., now has its own distributing offices in the two largest cities in the country. This is in line with the policy of National Exchanges to own and operate its own distributing offices. Further expansion in the concrete form of more exchanges directly controlled by National Exchanges, is definitely promised for the very near future.

"Opening our own exchange is the greatest forward step possible for us to take," said Johnson. "The history of the motion picture industry shows that the distributing concerns that have endured have been those able to control their own exchanges. This move places us on as solid a basis as that enjoyed by the older distributing organizations. National Exchanges at the present time has more than 150 reels of film being distributed and our own branch offices are ready to give complete program service to exhibitors."

Carl Harthill, manager of Cosmopolitan National Exchanges, Chicago office, is a veteran film man. Associated with him are George West and Charles Lindau, salesmen.

"Why Not Marry?" a feature comedy romance with Margery Wilson, directed by John S. Lopez, will be the next release of National. Cosmopolitan National Exchanges, Inc., in Chicago and Metropolitan National Exchanges, Inc., in New York will distribute this production as the first of a schedule calling for one feature a month, a Charles Ray picture every other week and a single reel comedy or magazine subject every week. Cosmopolitan National Exchanges, Inc., is also distributing "The Great Reward," a serial, with Francis Ford and Ella Hall.

STAFF OF ARMSTRONG COMEDY UNIT

Charles B. Diltz, studio manager of Reaguer Productions, Inc., producing a series of "Billy" Armstrong two-reel comedies for release through the Pacific Film Company announces the following staff: Rae Hunt, Director; Roy Miller, assistant director; Robert Smith, Cinematographer, and Castillo Guerin, cashier.

The Reaguer unit is now busily engaged in producing "Slow and Easy," which will be finished about the middle of April.

Aaron Edwards has been cast in "My Wild Irish Rose," an all-star production, now being directed by David Smith at Vitagraph.

Martha Mattox has been chosen to enact a leading character role in Rupert Hughes' current cinemaplay for Goldwyn entitled, "The Bitterness of Sweets."

NEWMAN AFFILIATES WITH FIRST NATIONAL

John McCormick, western representative of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., announces that Edwin De Baum Newman has arrived from New York to assist him in taking care of the western activities of that organization.

The arrival of Mr. Newman is the first step taken to carry out the policy announced by executive committee of First National when they stated that the exhibitor organization would hereafter take a more active interest in the production affairs of the various independent producers.

Mr. McCormick announces that Mr. Newman will make his headquarters at the United Studios where a branch of the local representative's office will be maintained.

Mr. Newman is a newcomer in the motion picture business. Previously he was with the Detroit Cadillac Motor Company and during the war he managed the Aeromarine Plane and Motor Company, building flying boats exclusively for the U. S. Navy.

Mr. Newman was accompanied to Los Angeles by Mrs. Newman and their two sons.

The Iris Film Corp. of Fairhaven, Mass., has been incorporated with a capital of $125,000. The new corporation will produce three and six reel dramas, melo-dramas and comedy dramas.

Arrow recently purchased five Clara Kimball Young subjects, "Ten Nights in a Barroom," twenty-six Eddie Lyons and Eddie Barry Broadway comedies, and fifteen two-reel Sherlock Holmes pictures, for distribution through the eight Pacific Northwest states.

To the Editor of Camera!:

It is seldom that I intrude even a letter of appreciation on the crowded time of an editorial staff, but after reading the two amusing letters of criticism printed in a recent issue of Camera! I concluded that perhaps such an expression as am now making might be appreciated.

I subscribe to Camera! because I am interested in certain phases of motion picture production, and being too busy to scan the voluminous matter contained in fan publications, find that your little magazine contains all that is worthy of mention compressed in a comprehensive but always brief and readable form. The editorials are distingue. I like their pointed, snappy and slightly sarcastic (caustic sometimes, but none too severe) style. After raging to a white heat over the filthy and grossly unjust newspaper insinuations made upon the pretext of the Taylor case, I found that my indignation had been boiled down to a nice exactness and expressed with dispatch in the current Camera! editorial.

Then, too, I would say a good word for the colorful articles by Ted Le Berthon. With a distinct literary flavor and an agreeable absence of interview "Hokum," they are informative and entertaining. After wading through the slush and crepe de chine verbage of the conventional fan interview, it is altogether delightful to find a sane and introspective interview such as this Le Berthon is capable of. Truly, he is an artist, and if he is not now contributing to SMART SET, he should be.

May the good work that Camera! is accomplishing for the industry continue to the prosperity of its creators as well. Selah!

Very truly,

W. E. SPENCER,

Lacey, Drew County, Arkansas.

Conditions Improve

Now that an often threatened, production flurry has finally materialized at least to the extent of establishing itself upon our horizon with a promise of immediate development, those hundreds in the picture industry who have felt the late depression to an alarming degree may enjoy a very welcome breath of relief and once again proceed with real advancement campaigns, meanwhile indulging in pleasurable bill paying orgies.

For the encouragement of those who have suffered hopefully and for the persuasion of others who have been rendered skeptical by the optimists' previous false reports, we present some interesting information.

There are one hundred units either producing or preparing to produce feature pictures in Los Angeles this week and they are supplemented by forty-five short subject companies actually engaged in work. The former staffs are grouped in part as follows. Universal leads with thirteen companies; Lasky has eleven; Fox, seven; Ince, five; Vitagraph, four; Metro and Robertson-Cole, three each; and Goldwyn, two, with the United Studios accommodating ten independent outfits making feature length subjects; Fine Arts, four, and Balboa, two. Independent activity is increasing everywhere and every day brings rumors of new companies in formation.

It is expected that William Hart will restart production for Paramount soon; two Metro stars anticipate resigning at the termination of their contracts in the near future. Charles Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel Company is considering with favor an investment in the cinema industry in company with other equally significant capital. Garson and Schwartz have already resumed work after a prolonged suspension and the Frederick Herbst Productions enter this week. Douglas Fairbanks has commenced "Robin Hood" and Mary Pickford will refilm "Tess of the Storm Country" immediately.

Our New York correspondent tells us further that nearly all of the Eastern plants are closed with their companies and equipment Westward bound. These include Selznick and Famous-Players.

The perfecting touch should be laid upon our enthusiasm, however, when it is learned that the cheaply imported Continental films which have caused so much controversy and so nearly wrecked our American production in the past few months are reported to have failed as a class by representative exhibitors from New York to Oskaloosa. Our prospects are the best and materialized prospects become success.

"Sense or Censor?"

Extracts from a speech delivered by President John Emerson before the Drama League as quoted by "Equity."

"If, by any unlucky chance we should have a political censorship of the stage thrust upon us, I suppost the lines of attack would be much the same as those now followed, or supposed to be followed, by the various Motion Picture censorship boards.

"They have, I believe, three general angles of attack. They are supposed to forbid:

"First—anything indecent;

"Second—anything seditious or opposed to public policy;

"Third—anything which incites to crime, or is inhumanly cruel.

"As to the last of these categories, I think they are indulging in a lot of sheer and utter nonsense.

"If a man goes to a picture, and sees a big hulk of a brute beat his little defenseless wife, and then, before the story is finished sees this same brute receive his just reward, in a coat of tar and feathers, or a good, sound horsewhipping from his indignant neighbors,—do you mean to say that that man is thereby encouraged to go back to his house and start beating up his wife? I don't think so! Quite the contrary!

"Or a child goes to a picture and sees a boy on the screen torturing a cat, and then follows the logical development of that boy's character through the story until he winds up in a penitentiary or on the gallows,—do you think that child is thereby encouraged to go home and start twisting the cat's tail? I don't. . . . .

"In my opinion the boy with real criminal instincts isn't up to the dime novel, nor is he up to the Motion Pictures. They're too good for him—they're too moral. Virtue is always triumphant in the pictures, and vice is always punished. What more in God's name can you ask? . . . .

"If only one of our great philanthropists would divert a little of his money and his altruistic efforts away from the subnormal child to the supernormal child, and develop among us some leaders of thought and action, which we so sorely need, now and at all times!

"As to the second category of things which are taboo by the present Censor Boards, I don't think we have much cause to worry, I refer to those things which are seditious or opposed to public policy. I have never yet heard of a Censor Board which forbade the showing of a picture attacking Mr. Volstead or the Prohibition Amendment, and as long as they allow us that pleasure, I don't think it likely that they will seriously curtail the right of free speech in other directions.

"It is from the first class of so-called offenses that ninety per cent of the trouble arises, that is, from those

"ROBIN HOOD" TO START PRESENTLY

Actual shooting on Douglas Fairbanks' next photo-feature, yet to be named, will start in about two weeks. The cast is practically complete, with Enid Bennett in the role of Maid Marion, Wallace Beery as Richard the Lion-hearted; Sam De Grasse as King John, the usurper; Paul Dickey as Guy of Gisborne, the arch-villain. Fairbanks himself will play the hero in a role showing him first as the Earl of Huntington and later as Robin Hood.

Since his return from New York, Mr. Fairbanks has been at the studio every day with director Allan Dwan, supervising the building of sets and the perfecting of the new story.

Sets now under construction will cover more ground than the famous "Intolerance" sets built by Griffith, or the Monte Carlo replicas set up by Von Stroheim for his "Foolish Wives." A portion of the studio is to be turned into a tournament field, and an athletic field has already been laid out where members of the cast are training for the difficult feats they will be called upon to perform in this film. Instructors have been engaged to teach sword play and archery, which will be featured in this picture.

Fairbanks states that his new vehicle will be a much more lavish spectacle than "The Three Musketeers." He has been working on the story for five months, assisted by his scenario and research departments, and his technical staff and is relying on this film to push forward another big offensive of progress for the film industry.

"While in New York recently," said Doug, "I was astounded to find how little understood this business and the people engaged in it are. Of late the entire industry has been misjudged. I have made up my mind that the only effectual answer lies not in preaching or becoming an attorney for the defense, but in forwarding the cause by making good pictures."

M. P. P. D. A. CHARTERED

The Motion Picture-Producers and Distributors Ass'n, Inc., was chartered in Albany, New York, recently. The organization will have eighteen directors, have its main office in New York and hold its annual meeting the last Monday in the March of each year.

Kosch, Carl Laemmle, Marcus Loew, Saul E. Rogers, J. Robert Rubin, Lewis J. Selznick, George A. Skinner, and Adolph Zukor.

DANCING HOLDS SWAY AGAIN

Al Christie is making a picture which includes scenes in a musical comedy theatre, for which a replica of the Music Box Theatre in New York has been built. Twenty-one dancers from the Ernest Belcher school have been engaged for the ensemble scenes.

In addition Miss Isabel Bryant has imported her dancing girls for another special number which will add pictorial background to the two-reeler.

Vera Steadman who is making her first screen appearance in ten months is playing the title role in this new comedy, "The Balky Princess."

EVANS IN "ROSIE O'GRADY"

Edgar Selden recently purchased the screen rights of "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," from Edward B. Marks, and will use this as the second vehicle for Madge Evans whose first is "On the Banks of the Wabash."

Current Reviews

"THE GREEN TEMPTATION"

Grauman's

The late William D. Taylor made of "The Noose," by Constance Lindsay Skinner, a highly effective filmplay which Paramount now publishes as "The Green Temptation," a starring picture for Bettey Compson. Holding all of the interest so necessary to the crook plot, it is lent further attraction by its picturesque settings of the street shows and Apache haunts of Paris. The screen adaptation by Monte Katterjohn and Julia Crawford Ivers provides some thrilling suspense and a good, all around plot development. In fact, "The Green Temptation," is as satisfying a cinema of its type as has been recently shown. The slight confusion of the war details is immaterial. The camerawork is greatly to the credit of James C. Van Trees.

The star makes quite the most beguiling little Apache in the annals of screen fiction, for the charm that lies in Miss Compson's animation is a very real thing, creating for her a personality unto herself and giving her a beauty of her own. Genelee, the Apache, Coralyn, the dancer, or Nurse Jeanne Paget; each is more graceful and scintillating than the jewels which they acquire so fearlessly.

Mahlon Hamilton, playing John Allenby, the sturdy detective lead, is thrown into keen contrast with the Harlequin, an actor-thief menacingly portrayed by Theodore Kosloff. The former role is entirely restrained; the other perhaps a bit exaggerated. Both are thoroughly enjoyable.

Neely Edwards in Pitou, the clown, and Edward Burns as the American boy are both well situated, while Lenore Lynard assists the Duchess de Chazarin to a distinguished presence and Betty Brice offers the typical society matron of this country as Mrs. Weedon Duyker.

Mary Thurman, M. Von Hardenburg and Arthur Stuart Hull enact the remaining roles augmented by "Broken Nose" Murphy in a small but excellently managed piece of business.

"THE ROSARY"

Kinema

Selig-Rork is presenting a new version of Edward Rose's dramatic adaptation of "The Rosary," scenarized by Bernard McConville and engaging the services of an all star cast. The picture, a Jerome Storm production, suffers to some extent from unsatisfactory cutting which shatters the continuity and tempo now and again. However, the quaint backgrounds, even performances and the well worn, old story will delight the many who choose the old fashioned, even if it be completely stereotyped, to the modern in entertainment.

We all remember the story to be built upon the most conventional of religious foundations, the type of thing from which art is now fleeing hot-footed, but the sentimentalists and old-timers will unquestionably turn out in great numbers to see this romantic subject.

Lewis Stone, as Father Brian Kelly, may be said to head the cast. He is a picturesque figure so placed and a good opposite for Eugenie Besserer who artistically and whole-souledly interprets Kathleen Wilton the woman who loves him and sacrifices for him—her all. It perhaps takes less footage for Miss Besserer to register her sincerity than for any other performer known to us.

Jane Novak is a study in lights and shadows as Vera Mather, just a village girl.

Her lover, Bruce Wilton, is played by Robert Gordon, who might be considered as too effeminate for the role. Nevertheless, he dispatches his action competently.

IDA SCHUMAKER

The comedy element is drolly accomplished by Dore Davidson and Bert Woodruff, whose fierce controversies and inconsistent friendship are the privileges of village mentors.

The opposition is in the hands of Wallace Beery, who is seen as Kenwood Wright, an undisciplined soul, and Pomeroy Cannon, who fills MacTavish, a pirate of the sea.

A fitting duo to complete the romance is composed of Mildred June and Harold Goodwin. They play Alice and Skeeter, her faithful suitor. Miss June displays promise of real things in the comedy flapper line a la Mary Hay.

First National distributes "The Rosary."

"WHITE HANDS"

Clune's

Any screen drama presenting Hobart Bosworth in the leading role is invariably anticipated with eagerness by the older school of picture goers, inasmuch as his stories are known to be marked with the virility and strength that were so popular in the cinema's younger days. It is therefore to be deeply regretted that in "White Hands," the current Max Graf production presented by Wid Gunning, so capable a performer should find himself provided with maudlin material that makes up into a far from satisfactory melodrama. Drunkenness, brutality and sensuality are the notes sounded continually and they leave an impression that cannot be eradicated by the dish-watery moral trend which appears late in the scenario.

The picture by C. Gardner Sullivan is a hackneyed creation entirely lacking in the fineness that made "Hail the Woman," such a worthy attempt by this author. Lambert Hillyer apparently does all that is possible with the direction and J. O. Taylor's photography is up to his usual high standard.

"Hurricane" Hardy, the bestial character who forms the star part, is rather a convincing situation for the stalwart Bosworth even though its final reform through the agency of a baby seems a trifle inconsistent with its previously unscrupulous attitude. Once phased, however, "Hurricane" encourages his regeneration with great vigor and regains all of his lost sympathy with efficient dispatch obviously that the sentimental and dubious in the audience may be completely reassured.

Little Muriel Frances Dana in Peroxide, a pleasurable portrayal, is the one lightening element in the cast, for Helen Maitland, the ingenue, enacted by Elinor Fair, is of necessity a heavy, unwieldy position in view of the fact that her action is just one effort at self protection (from the ferocious males surrounding her) after another. In spite of this handicap, the young actress maintains her poise and the part is sincerely played.

Robert McKim and Al Kaufman handle other villainous heavies villainously while Freeman Wood is rather interesting in the juvenile, a beachcomber, who "comes back." "Enough, said the better," as the saying goes.

"HER MAD BARGAIN"

(Loew's)

Josephine Quirk wrote the photoplay, "Her Mad Bargain," in which Louis B. Mayer offers Anita Stewart over the First National program at this time. If there is nothing markedly reasonable about it the story is yet unusual enough to hold the interest and only annoys during the various episodes in which the heroine, a rather inadmirable individual, battles wildly to retain her virtue. Too much of this sort of business is distasteful in both its sloppily conventional and indelicate aspects. As Alice Lambert, a luxuriously raised and incompetent girl, the best criticism of Miss Stewart is accomplished when it is remarked that she is entirely typical—of herself. We find it impossible to definitely recall any performance in which we have seen her play. They are all the same, so at least one is no worse than another.

Walter McGrail's masculine lead, David Leighton, is very fitting, while Gertrude Astor and Adele Farrington manage the feminine opposition with attendant satisfaction. They play Ruth Beresford and Leighton's aunt.

The cleverest interpretation in the picture is the effort of Arthur Edmund Carewe as Lewis, a dilettante.

Helen Raymond, George Williams, Ernest Butterworth, William Badger, Margaret McWade and Persy Challenger are carefully situated otherwise.

Edwin Carewe's direction of this production takes all possible advantage of the scenario. Robert Kurrle's photography is good.

Sidney Franklin is included in the cast of "Abie's Irish Rose," now showing at the Morosco.

NEILAN'S FIRST STAGE DIRECTOR IN "MICKEY'S" PRODUCTIONS

George Barnum, veteran stage producer and actor and who gave Marshall Neilan his start as an actor at the old Belasco theatre, Los Angeles, has been engaged by the motion picture producer to play an important part in "Fools First."

Mr. Barnum gave Mr. Neilan his first part on the stage some fifteen years ago, in the historic play, "The Heart of the Geisha." In this play the movie producer—then a youngster—portrayed the part of a Japanese boy.

"Whenever I needed a boy character I sent for 'Mickey,," said Mr. Barnum in discussing the old days. "He could play a Jap boy, an Irish boy, or a German boy equally effective."

Mr. Barnum has just returned from Australia where he staged a number of plays and is here to study motion picture production. With the idea of learning the business at close hand, he is starting his motion picture career as an actor. He will also appear in Mr. Neilan's new production just starting, "Her Man," taken from the Saturday Evening Post story of that title.

STORM TO TALK AT NEXT PHOTOPLAYRIGHTS' MEETING

An original scenario, "Woman, Forward March!" by I. Sizick, was criticized at the last meeting of The Photoplaywrights, held recently at the Brack-Shops. At the next meeting the screen version of "The Rosary" will be discussed. L. Rhodobeck has prepared an original synopsis from the picture, to be followed by critical estimates and impressions of the production by Miss Alberta Trueworthy, Mrs. D. Selover and A. Stanton.

It is expected that Jerome Storm, director of "The Rosary," will talk at this session. Any man or woman who is actively interested in scenario writing may attend the meetings.

EARLE PREPARING FAUST FILM

Delving once more into the lore of the Middle Ages, Ferdinand Earle has resumed his labors of research on the Faust legend after an interlude of two months, which time was spent in New York, editing his screen version of the life and Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam.

FRENCH PRODUCER IN STATES

Henri Diamant-Berger, former editor and publisher of Le Film of Paris, one of the leaders of the motion picture industry of France, arrived recently in New York. Diamant-Berger has been producing in Paris for the past three years and brings with him his French version of "The Three Musketeers," as well as "The Bad Boy," featuring Chevalier, the Casino De Paris star, who is to be starred in this country by Dillingham next year. The French producer plans to film "Twenty Years After," by Dumas, this summer. This will be made in forty reels.

He will also make a film with Georges Carpentier, the French pugilist, probably next fall.

Production Notes

"The present market conditions are such," states Mr. Calnay, "that it is almost an impossibility to sell a new star to the state-rights buyer, except with great sacrifice—while well-known players can now be secured at such reasonable figures that it makes it unnecessary to introduce new characters to the buyers unless they are exceptionally good and an almost instantaneous success may be expected of them—as is the case with Monty Montague, Bob O'Conor, Bill Miller, Ena Gregory and some other new comers whose mere appearance on the screen will add to the value of a picture."

Short subjects in general are over-produced; two-reel comedies are almost impossible to sell at a profit at this time, unless they are exceptionally good and very inexpensively produced; while single reel subjects will not sell at any price.

There is an immense demand for big features that can be sold on the two hundred thousand dollar basis, but of course, they must be fully worthy of that price.

Independent Producers Distributing Syndicate is now contemplating to organize four producing units to put out one picture each month by each individual company, of the type that the market demands.

DISTRIBUTING "SMILES"

"Smiles" is the name given the series of one-reel comedies which are being offered on the state right market by the Primex Pictures Corporation.

The first two subjects of this series were screened for Dr. Hugo Resienfeld, the Managing Director of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion Theatres on Broadway, New York, with the result that he gave them a pre-release showing of a week at the Rivoli.

AT LASKYS

Under the direction of Philip E. Rosen, who directed Wallace Reid in "Across the Continent" and "The World's Champion," Betty Compson began work recently on her next starring Vehicle, as yet not officially titled, by Albert Shelby LeVino, based on the story by the late John Fleming Wilson. The following is the line-up: The role of Angela Gaskell is played by the star; John Sumner is played by John Bowers, a well known leading man, who has appeared in several Realart pictures, such as "The Cumberland Romance," etc.; Lee Marvin has been assigned to Richard Dix, formerly leading man at Morosco Theatre and well known in motion picture circles; Captain Gaskell will be portrayed by J. Farrel McDonald, and Lucita is to be played by Ethel Wales.

According to report the next Agnes Ayres star picture will be directed by Paul Powell and will be an original story by Beulah Marie Dix. The title has not yet been decided upon, but work will start about April 3rd.

"Man Unconquerable" is the title of Jack Holt's next picture scheduled to start March 27th, under the direction of Joseph Henaberry. This is an original by Hamilton Smith, and Julien Josephson has adapted the story to the screen. The supporting cast has not yet been chosen.

William deMille started this week on "Nice People." The cast selected for this picture, including Wallace Reid, Bebe Daniels, Conrad Nagel, Julia Faye, and others.

Cecil B. DeMille is preparing to start on his new production "Manslaughter," his first picture since his return from Europe.

Thomas Meighan is in Modesto, where scenes are being made for "Our Leading Citizen." Returning from location a number of scenes will be made in the studio which will complete the picture in time for Mr. Meighan to begin work with Cecil B. DeMille.

AT THE R-C STUDIOS

"The Midnight Call," latest R-C production to be completed, has undergone final revision and will be shipped East early next week. The story, an original by Emilie Johnson, who has written two Bosworth vehicles, was directed by Emory Johnson, and includes in its cast Ralph Lewis, Johnny Walker, Ella Hall, Claire McDowell and Benny Alexander.

Final scenes of "The Son of the Wolf," initial production by the Patton-Mandeville unit at the R-C Studios, were taken recently. The play is an adaptation by Edwin Warren Guyol and Alice Catlin of two Jack London books, one bearing the title retained by the film version, and the other, "The Wife of a King," both dealing with the days of the Klondike gold rush. Edith Roberts, Wheeler Oakman and Fred Kohler are seen in the leading roles. Of course, the play finds its setting among scenes of primal nature and to produce this atmosphere the company found it necessary to spend three weeks of shooting amid the Yosemite snows.

Harry Carey has decided on his first play to be produced under the R-C banner. Tentatively, it is called "The Battle."

Robert Thornby and William A. Seiter are busy preparing stories for future productions.

INCE STUDIO NOTES

A three-ring circus is to furnish the background for a motion picture feature production with the all-star cast living the life of the "big top" for several weeks during the making of the picture, according to production plans announced by Thomas H. Ince for "Someone to Love." The "Someone to Love" company, under the direction of Griffith Wray, will be with the circus for the first three weeks on the Central and Southern California tour after the circus leaves its winter quarters at Palo Alto, Calif. The principal characters will be "the elephant girl," to be portrayed by Madge Bellamy, a young violinist to be done by Cullen Landis, and a circus trick elephant to be played by "Charley," the elephant picture star. This latest Sullivan story is announced as the first of the Ince feature productions to be made during the coming months for release next fall and winter.

ARTHUR MORRISON

Arthur Beck has completed the cutting of "When the Devil Drives," the second of the series that Leah Baird Productions is making for Associated Exhiibtors release. Included in the cast of "When the Devil Drives" in support of Miss Baird, are Richard Tucker, who has a role similar to the one he portrayed in "The Old Nest;" Arline Pretty, who was last seen in the leading role of "Life," the Wm. A. Brady Production; Vernon Steele, who heretofore has appeared opposite Ethel Clayton, and Katherine Lewis, who has appeared in several of Miss Baird's latest productions. Paul Scardon directed and Charles J. Stumar was the cameraman.

HOLLYCRAFT PICTURES PREPARING

The Hollycraft Motion Picture Corporation will commence operation at its studio on Wilshire Blvd., Santa Monica, presently. Announcement of personnel, stars, casts and other details will be given out around April 1st.

"COME ON IN" COMPANY LOCATIONING

Director Edward Alexander and his company filming "Come On In," the initial five-reel photoplay of Co-operative Producers, Inc., are at Warner Hot Springs "shooting" exteriors. It is expected that two weeks more will be necessary to complete the picture.

REGENT FILM COMPANY NAME OF PURVIANCE ORGANIZATION

Papers of incorporation have been filed by the Regent Film Company which has been organized under the laws of the State of California, naming as featured player Edna Purviance, for many years leading woman for Charles Chaplin.

All of the productions of the Regent company will be filmed at the Chaplin plant on La Brea Ave., where extensive additions are being made to enable the comedian to carry on his own activities before the camera without interfering with the progress of the company which will star Miss Purviance.

Miss Purviance's first story will be an original one which is now in the writing. Sydney Chaplin looms up as the probable director of this company and the general management of the affairs has been given over to Alf Reeves who acts in the same capacity for the Charlie Chaplin Productions.

A new system of overhead lighting is being installed on the two stages. A network of steel is being put up in the shape of a track and trolley system in order to make it possible to light the stages from above without interfering in any manner with the work on the stage.

Many additions have also been made to the electrical equipment including lamps perfected by the Cooper Hewitt company.

FOX BUYS NEW FORST STORY

The latest story from the pen of Emile Forst, "Vows Made and Broken," has been secured by Fox Film Company and will serve as a future starring vehicle for Dustin Farnum.

Mr. Forst was also the author of "Occasionally Yours," recently produced by R-C Pictures, as well as "Sylvia on a Spree" for Metro, "A Social Pirate" for World, "Fools and their Money" for Metro, and "The Splendid Sin" for Fox.

BOATS TO HAVE FILMS

Through the Associated Screen News of Canada, a subsidiary of the Canadian Pacific Railway, arrangements have been made for the showing of Paramount pictures on all of the steamships operated by the Canadian Pacific.

Eventually it is planned to show Paramount features on all the passenger ships of the C. P. R. plying the Atlantic, Pacific and Great Lakes.

FRENCH AVIATRICE IN ROLAND SERIAL

Mlle. Andree Peyre, who is a licensed air pilot in both France and this country, has arrived in Los Angeles to play an important role in the Ruth Roland serial, "The Riddle of the Range," which will soon go into production.

Before she came to this country Mlle. Peyre's screen engagements included six productions that were made at the Pathe studios at Vincennes, France. The forthcoming serial will mark her debut as an actress and aviatrice combined.

Mlle. Peyre was engaged for the serial by President Paul Brunet, of Pathe, which company will release the production.

APPEARING IN PERSON

Baby Muriel Frances Dana, who has just completed her engagement with William Fox in "A Fool There Was," appeared last week personally with "White Hands," a Hobart Bosworth picture in which she has the title role.

Contemporary Criticisms

"THE SHEIK'S WIFE"
(Vitagraph)

"Chief among the outstanding qualities of 'The Sheik's Wife' is the fact that it doesn't follow along the familiar, beaten path of screen melodrama. Its atmosphere is unique, for the entire picture was filmed in Arabia, with the result that the desert scenes are outlined with wonderful fidelity to nature and artistic appeal.

"The Oriental atmosphere is admirably developed, the continuity holds together, and the action moves at a rapid gait."

—Exhibitors' Trade Review.

"The story is a very simple one and hardly capable of standing up for even a five-reel feature despite the colorful production that has been accorded it. There are numerous picturesque settings and the scenes among the ruins are especially attractive. All the desert episodes are appealing, but the interiors are confused and badly lighted usually. So many extras have been employed and there is such continual moving about, both of the principals and the extras, added to the similarity of the costumes, that the general impressions is one of chaos."

—Wid's.

"Because of its atmosphere, attention to detail, marvelous backgrounds and apparent authenticity of scenes showing the manner and customs of the Mohammedan, rather than from its story value, 'The Sheik's Wife' impresses as a film well out of the ordinary and one which should especially appeal to the better class of theatre goers.

"The picture has been produced in the actual locale of its story, Algiers, with a multitude of natives, evidently carefully rehearsed, used in numberless big scenes. There are camels, tents, mosques, ancient ruins, oceans of sand, and all of the other Oriental knick knacks in abundance.

"The picture is a scenic and an educational, as well as a drama. It takes you on a trip through Algiers, shows you all the sights and informs you as to the ways, customs, religion, and superstitions of the disciples of Allah.

"The plot is exceptional but it is typical and furnishes some excellent action scenes."

—Motion Picture News.

" 'The Sheik's Wife' was photographed in the Algerian edge of the Sahara desert. Henry-Roussell, the producer, used a French cast of principals, headed by Emmy Lynn, and utilized a large group of natives, including Arabs and Senegalese soldiers, as extra people. The effect is realistic in the extreme, as might be supposed. The scenery is striking and the director has manipulated his action in an impressive manner."

—Moving Picture World.

"IRON TO GOLD"
(Fox)

"While there are many familiar situations in 'Iron to Gold,' the author, George Owen Baxter, has introduced a sufficient number of novel and unusual incidents to offset these, and besides being a very well photographed and directed picture, contains many exceedingly well drawn characterizations."

—Exhibitors' Herald.

"A melodrama of the West that does not take itself too seriously and allows a scantier measure of heroics to Dustin Farnum than usual is offered in 'Iron to Gold.' Evidently there has been considerable effort to avoid the too-familiar in preparing this production. There is more emphasis in characterization and more comedy relief than is frequently found in such subjects and the hero has been made more of a victim than a conqueror."

—Moving Picture World.

"A story of the West containing an abundance of thrills, hold-ups and shooting in which Dustin Farnum gives a good account of himself.

"The popularity of the star and the qualities of the picture itself should make this production totally able to satisfy the demands of those who crave melodrama done in a true Western fashion."

—Exhibitors' Trade Review.

"This is about the draggiest and most tiresome western that has ever come from the Fox studios. It contains very little worth while action and the rest is made up of such weak situations and slow-moving sequences that the picture will never keep them in their seats even for the four and a half reels which it consumes.

"The story isn't a good one, to be sure, but there are places where the action could have been speeded up and the handling of the players is sometimes very poor.

"Dustin Farnum is capable of much better work than he does here and worthy of stronger material."

—Wid's.

"THE MISTRESS OF THE WORLD"
CHAPTER ONE—"THE DRAGON'S CLAW"
Paramount

"The much heralded German serial,, 'The Mistress of the World.' which is being offered in a series of four Paramount pictures, has reached the screen, and after taking into consideration its reception at the Rivoli, New York, one must frankly state that it needs heavy exploitation to attract a crowd.

"The serial, judging from the first chapter, is unadulterated melodrama with thrills assembling in rapid-fire order. But the incidents are so heaped up with so much detail that the thread of the story is hard to follow.

"One thing it has in its favor—a genuine background. Joe May, the director, has taken his principal players to China where he has succeeded in collecting real atmosphere—not only in the sets and locations, but in the vast assembly of extras, all of whom are Chinamen."

—Motion Picture News.

"The German producers, in the making of 'The Mistress of the World,' have not done anything that has not already been accomplished in this country. There have been any number of serials just as thrilling and stirring as this one. Perhaps the variety of backgrounds and unusual natural setting which are found in this will have a tendency to distinguish it for pictorial appeal, but otherwise it does not surpass native product.

"There are many splendid Chinese players in 'The Dragon Claw' episode."

—Wid's.

Editorial

dealing with the question of decency or indecency—and the trouble is due, as Mr. Elmer Rice has well said, to the fact that there can be no objective test as to what is decent or proper. These matters are purely subjective, and standards vary enormously in different individuals and in different periods of time. . . . .

"What would be perfectly proper and decent to any normal minded person is indecent and improper to the Reverend John Roche Straton and all minds of that ilk. Also what is perfectly innocuous and proper to a child of ten is salacious and deliciously filthy to a dirty-minded old man. So it is extremely difficult for any group of persons who are of one type of mind, or who have a common, set point of view toward these matters, to fix any sort of representative standard. . . . .

"If I could have my way, I should open every avenue of knowledge to every child born into the world, and should encourage him to walk freely and boldly in, at the very earliest possible moment. And I should lay particular emphasis upon knowledge regarding the relations of the male and the female to each other, as that is the avenue which is now closed to the young, thus creating in their minds an abnormal and unhealthy and demoralizing curiosity.

"I have no sympathy with this business of talking behind the hand or sending little Willie out of the room whenever anything interesting is to be sprung, because I believe there is no surer way of polluting Willie's character and mentality than by this stimulating of a vicious, resentful, unhealthy, morbid curiosity about things which he as a normal human being has a perfect right to know. . . . .

"And I also believe that in this philanthropic work the serpent was aided and abetted by the Lord Jehovah. Jehovah wanted Adam and Eve to eat of the fruit of that apple tree — otherwise the putting of that tree in the Garden was the act of an idiot, and Jehovah was no idiot! The Jehovah of the Jews, in addition to all his other admirable qualities, was possessed of an infinite amount of common sense. This is shown convincingly and conclusively on almost every page of the Old Testament Scriptures. . . . .

"I believe that every normal person really enjoys a good harmless story or a good harmless play. And any pretense to the contrary has always impressed me as a form of hypocrisy. The only requirement that I see is that the story or the play must be good enough to justify itself, and must not be salacious simply for the sake of its salaciousness—which I fear certain of the plays on Broadway at present are.

"And at this point the Managers' Association, the American Dramatists and the Actors' Equity Association are, I believe, ready to join hands with the sponsors of the Better Play movement, and I believe they are ready to join us. We have met their representatives and I for one have found them sane, reasonable and sincere. They do not want a political censorship any more than we do, and I am convinced that by putting our cards on the table and working with them in all sincerity we shall arrive at a conclusion which will be satisfactory, not to the extremist on either side, but to the great body of our decent, upstanding and self-respecting citizens."

Elwood M. Payne of the Paralta Studios has just returned from a three months' vacation in the South Seas.

News from Broadway

By HANK

(Special Correspondence to Camera!)

"Silas Marner," the famous George Eliot work of English literature has been made into a super screen play by Frank P. Donovan who wrote the scenario and directed the picture. Associated Exhibitors have started an advertising campaign on it in New York. It has the indorsements of Miss Anne Morgan, ex-Gov. Alfred E. Smith of N. Y., Henry Du Pont, Miss Elisabeth Perkins, bank presidents, college professors, Judges, Senators, Ambassadors, Editors, playwrights, authors, etc., and will have its premiere at the Capitol Theatre, it is said, early in April. George Fawcett, Marguerite Courtot, Anders Randolph, Chas. Coghlan, Edmund Breese, Craufurd Kent, Emily Chichester, Helen Howland, Bradley Barker, and others of like repute, appear in it.

The Green Room Club will hold another Revel in April at one of the Broadway theatres with all star talent.

Herbert Brenon, the director, and Alan Crossland were made members of the M. P. D. A. last Tuesday. They are sure enough coming into the lodge fast.

Let me tell you something, Westcoast folks: F. B. Warren and Walter Greene who head the American Releasing Company are the coming headlights of film "distributingdom." W. R. Hearst is releasing through their organization and we have a slight hankering that he is financially interested in it. Mr. Warren of this company is an old Hearst man. They have sixty finished productions with the Capitol showing them.

* * *

Cosmopolitan Productions will spend something like $1,000,000 on "When Knighthood was in Flower" which good old Bob Vignola is directing. It will take eight months to complete with Marion Davis as star.

* * *

Elmer Clifton is in Santa Domingo shooting a sea story with Ray McKee featured. Paul Allen and A. G. Penrod late with the Griffith "Orphans of the Storm," will photograph it.

The famous Players' Studio in Long Island is done, gone and nearly forgotten. They have started shipping lights to the Westcoast, striping the studio clean. Selznick is moving out to L. A. in April as are the Warner Brothers to do several big features. There are only three companies working in N. Y.

* * *

"Ham" Smith, well known to L. A., has promoted a bankroll and will shoot a picture next week at the old Metro, N. Y. Studio.

The latest Dick Barthlemess picture, "The Seventh Day," did not go over very well on Broadway this week. There is nothing to the story but Dick. He doesn't live up to his first starring vehicle by a wide margin.

They say Adolph Zukor financed personally the picture at his Criterion Theatre, "Loves of Pharaoh," made in Germany. It cost 40,000 American dollars to produce. Experts say that it couldn't be made here for four times that. Well, since stars in Germany get ten thousand Marks a day (about ten dollars) and stage hands $2.50 per week how can we compete with them? Why don't the labor union heads put a stop to this now? It's unfair competition and against union labor of this country.

Paul Scardon is in town at the M. P. D. R. and he has several offers to go to work. Betty Blythe, his wife, is working with Director Kenneth Webb for F. B. Warren and Greene here.

The conditions in general are very bad in New York film studios. No one outside of Harry Millarde, Herbert Brenon and Chas. Giblyn at Fox, and Henry King and Bob Leonard at Biograph are working at all. A lot are starting but God knows when. The actors have never found times so bad as now. This is a tip to those in Hollywood who are thinking of coming East. Stay where the Oranges grow. It's snowing here, and damn cold too!

Well, the M. P. D. A..—Will Hay's Supper Dance at the Hotel Astor, March 16, was a humdinger! Everyone was there that was anyone and all in soup and fish. Notables galore, mayors, senators, stars, cameramen, film magnates, exhibitor heads, producers, distributors, play wrights of note, prohibition agents, and what not. Anyone that carry's a M. P. D. A. membership card in his pocket should feel proud of the way the event was handled and credit for its big success must go to George Sargent, C. Jay Williams, Bill Haddock, Dawley, Irving, Vignola, Millarde, and a few more. It sure was a cookoo.

Griffith's "Orphans of the Storm" will go out over United Artists, it is said. It has not done the business they thought it would. Broadway is covered with billboards, still the crowd wont come at $2.00 a throw, so it will become regular release from present indications. Two dollars, New Yorkers feel, is too much money, and the day of the two-dollar picture seems passe at least for the present.

Goldwyn and First National may combine to eliminate some exchanges, it appears. Well, a few more combines and a few organizations where the producer gets what's coming to him in a financial way would not be amiss, do you think?

The "Mistress of the World" serial from Germany and sponsored by Famous Players took one grand old American flop on Broadway. It may get by in smaller houses, but that's about all. Broadway cannot see it with opera glasses as a first run attraction.

Fifteen Hundred Dollar Scenarios

Word comes from several of the larger studios and a representative scenario school that the producers have settled upon $1,500 as the top price to be paid hereafter for either original scripts or continuities. It seems to be the idea of the leading lights that the years have brought forth few photoplays worth more than such a figure and that adaptation is but a matter of technique which once learned may be accomplished as speedily as the scenarist sees fit to work. Whether or not there is justification for such a stand we do not feel to be our argument, but this turn of events does present at least one angle which is worthy of mention.

If for instance the producers were to issue an ultimatum of like nature with regard to the screen rights of published material, and it is altogether likely that such a stand will be taken if reports are to be credited, then the original writer will have little reason to feel disgruntled over slight cuts on his work. This is because the result, as we see it, would be a tendency to eliminate a great amount of published material from the "available" list, thereby opening a larger field to the photodramatists. Their recompense would thereupon be more than satisfactory.

Any such occurrence brings much controversy and if the producers as a body have settled upon this scale, there may follow much agitation. We have an idea that three-fourths of what will be said on each side will be vitally interesting.

The Motion Picture People's Church

A new campaign has been launched to achieve "The Little Church Around the Corner," about which so much has lately been planned and said in the film colony. Below is set forth the idea behind this worthy project, its history and its contemplated operation.

The "Little Church Around the Corner" is intended to serve the spiritual and social needs of the motion picture people in Southern California. Just as the well-known actors' church in New York — from whence the name is borrowed — serves the people of the speaking stage in the metropolis. But the local project is far greater than its eastern prototype, both in conception and scope, and will, when successfully established, comprise a group of buildings, harmonious and dignified in design, housing a Church, Rectory, Community Hall, Gymnasium, Club Rooms, Executive Offices and other departments which will center about the "Little Church Around the Corner."

The Church and Community Center will be an enduring and living monument to the highest ideals and loftiest aims of the motion picture profession. Its location, in the capital of the cinema world, will enable it to keep in constant touch with a majority of the picture people. It will be a shrine to which they may turn for inspiration and support in their efforts to place and preserve the cinema art upon the high plane of the elder arts; and to foster those high ideals of thought and conduct which are essential to the artistic and professional development of the screen drama.

The vision of a motion picture people's "Little Church Around the Corner" as the corner-stone of a community center for the cinema capital came first to the Rev. Neal Dodd early in 1918, when he opened an Episcopal Mission in a Hollywood store-room. His acquaintance with picture people grew rapidly, and his present church, St. Mary of the Angels, numbers so many of the profession in the congregation that it is familiarly known as "the picture people's church."

For over three years the Rev. Mr. Dodd has kept in personal touch with the studios and the people engaged in the making of motion pictures. This vision of a church and community center supported by film people is now shared by so many leaders in the profession that the time is opportune for the actual launching of the project.

The financing of the "Little Church Around the Corner" project as at present contemplated, will be accomplished by various methods, as follows:

Building Fund

(1) Donations from indiivduals and organizations in the motion picture profession.

(2) Proceeds from entertainments sponsored by Motion Picture associations and theatres, not only in Los Angeles, but all over the United States. San Francisco, where great interest has been evidenced in the project, has promised support in this direction.

Operation

Once established, the church and community center will undoubtedly receive the financial support usually accorded to a city church. But to insure a permanent and adequate income two plans have been adopted, namely:

(a) The establishment of an endowment fund to be gradually raised to a size that would insure continuous income. This plan will be put into operation as soon as the church and rectory are completed.

(b) The purchase of sufficient land for the site of the project to allow of the erection of income residence property adjoining the main buildings. This plan could be carried out as soon as sufficient funds are available and need not wait upon the completion of the main buildings. In addi-

Current Reviews

"THE CRADLE"

Grauman's

"The Cradle," Olga Printzlau's adaptation for Paramount of the Eugene Brieux play, is a sentimental subject which has been carefully handled by Paul Powell and thereby kept from dropping into the messy, heroic pitfalls which prove so fatal to the ordinary play or novel of this type. The story treats of an average matrimonial mix-up and its resultant unhappy effect upon the child. Quite a little humanness and some truly touching situations make up for a rather negligible finish, which it must be said with regret is continually clear from the opposition's very introduction. Nevertheless, there is entertainment value here in abundance and it will probably please three-fourths of any picked audience.

Hal Rosson's work at the camera is up to the Lasky standard.

Ethel Clayton as Margaret Harvey, an every-day, well-meaning, young mother, has an excellent if scarcely a star part with which to work. Her performances always indicate the real thought behind them, a study which, combined with the natural capability of their interpreter, has given us some noteworthy drama.

Margaret's doctor husband is well cared for by Charles Meredith who has the disadvantage of seeming a little young in the character to overcome. That Robert Harvey's essentially sturdy outlook is overthrown by the brilliance of his "outside affair" never entirely loses sympathy for him as his action is always true to life.

It is little Mary Jane Irving who is vital in the drama as the Harvey baby, an intelligent youngster who places an original but very nearly correct construction upon surrounding circumstances and assimilates the tragic facts of her life, sometimes with a clear, far-seeing mind as is the way with children.

Anna Lehr enacts Lola Forbes, an attractive and thoroughly convincing vamp; while Walter McGrail dispatches the "other man" efficiently.

Adele Farrington in the role of "grandmother" completes the cast as naturally as all of its parts are played.

"SCHOOL DAYS"

Kinema

Wesley Barry fans have the opportunity this week of witnessing their young favorite in Warner Brothers' celluloid version of Gus Edwards' renowned, old dramatic sketch, "School Days," or rather in an original by Director William Nigh and Walter de Leon, which is presented under the Edwards title. The sketch, of course, contained little filmable material, but its type always holds forth great possibilities. Many of these have been utilized delightfully.

Nevertheless it is a debatable question whether the somewhat illogical plot resorted to a little late in the picture improves the simple narrative any, although it undoubtedly pulls up the atcion where it grows a trifle draggy. The photography by Jack Brown and Sydney Wilcox is noticeably uneven, leaving much to be desired in places.

Nigh's direction is not assisted by the sometimes displeasing cutting; but the snappy subtitles always develop the laughs and sometimes provoke them unaided.

Wesley as the incorrigible "orphant," Speck Brown, is suitably situated in the kind of thing which he can really do. His growing sophistication, so unwelcome in "Penrod," is not perceptible in this backwoods lad and it is only after he has become familiar with New York's wealthy strata that his character takes on an exaggerated blase tinge. Then it is but an effort at burlesque.

Director Fred Caldwell and Josephine Hill of the Commonwealth Motion Picture Producers.

The remainder of the cast is well chosen but comparatively unimportant. Its several high lights are Margaret Seddon in the country school teacher, J. H. Gilmore in the stranger, and George Lessey in the deacon.

Other roles are filled by Nellie Spaulding, Arline Blackburn, Jerome Patrick, John Galsworthy, Eveline Sherman and Arnold Lucy.

"School Days" is fundamentally juvenile entertainment.

"A HOMESPUN VAMP"

Clune's

"A Homespun Vamp" is a more catchily than appropriately titled screen romance of the order that Realart has been wont to employ for the use of its ingenues. In other words, it is a simple, rural play which will never be accused of harming anyone, will please the great class of childish minds which clutter up the earth in adult bodies and will affect the rest of the populace not at all. In the case of Mary Miles Minter or Wanda Hawley "A Homespun Vamp" would be as good as any material that could be selected, but it is a bit beneath the dignity of May McAvoy and the cast supporting her.

Hector Turnbull is responsible for the original; Harvey Thew scenarized it. The work of each is greatly improved upon by Frank O'Connor's direction which manages to surround it with sincerety.

May McAvoy is perhaps the prettiest and most obviously intelligent ingenue of the season in Meg Mackenzie, an abused village girl who never permits her unsophistication to render her weak minded. The handling rather than the script makes this so. In these late performances, however, the admirable store of histrionic talent which gave us Grizel has remained untouched. It will come to light again offering more soul-satisfying interpretations, for this little actress' art is inevitable.

Darrel Foss makes a picturesque hero in Stephen Ware, a novelist who is befriended by the worshipping Meg and who in turn rescues her from her persecution. The role does not allow much scope, but it is capably handled to the best advantage by Foss.

Josephine Crowell and Lincoln Stedman are rare types for the Amazonian village blacksmith and her dense son.

Charles Ogle and Guy Oliver are allowed to exaggerate the miserliness of the characters which they play in Meg's uncles, the Craig brothers, but they continually provoke laughter with their efforts in that line which might be considered to justify it.

Helen Dunbar provides a much needed human touch to the story in Ware's understanding mother, while Kathleen Kirkham finishes the action in Beatrice Carlisle, Meg's opposition for Stephen's heart.

TURN TO THE RIGHT

Mission

Rex Ingrams Metro production, "Turn to the Right," follows "Foolish Wives," at the Mission. Those who are familiar with the Winchell Smith and Jack Hazard play from which it was adapted, have already remarked surprise at this choice of matter by the brilliant young director who came so notably to the fore with his sensational execution of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." The simplicity of the subject, however, but affords Ingram an opportunity to further prove the scope of his talent. The comedy element in the play is achieved with rare effect and the entire production has a delightful mellowness which does much to make its old fashioned heart interest acceptable.

June Mathis and Mary O'Hara scenarized the play.

Jack Mulhall and Alice Terry fit gracefully into the leading roles as Joe Bascom, the misjudged country boy, and Elsie Tillinger, the deacon's daughter. Their romance has much of poetry and never drags.

Gilly and Mugsy, those lovable crook pals of Joe, the jewel parts in the cast, are perfectly played by Harry Meyers and George Cooper, who miss nothing in giving the characters to us in their original tempers. The two control the comedy of the piece.

William Bletcher is a further short but "well rounded" laugh in Sammy Martin the jam salesman with Lydia Knott and Edward Connelly delightfully placed in the situations of Mrs. Bascom and Deacon Tillinger.

Margaret Loomis as Jessie Strong, a rural maiden, finds herself in a position made strange by its divergence from those which

Pickups By The Staff

CENSORS BUSY

The motion picture industry never knew knowledge was considered dangerous until the New York censor board eliminated a scene recently in an Urban Movie Chat showing how a bottle of water in the sun's rays can burn lace curtains. One would naturally suppose this information might help the public to avoid this catastrophe, but the censor board holds it might incite the stupid public to incendiary deeds.

NORMAND TO LEAVE IN APRIL

Mabel Normand is completing plans to leave for the east immediately following the completion of "Suzanna," which is scheduled for the latter part of April. In June, she will sail for London. Later she will visit Paris, Berlin, Rome, Naples and Madrid. In the fall Miss Normand expects to return to Hollywood to start work on another Mack Sennett-Mable Normand feature.

"SNUB" POLLARD WEDS

Harry "Snub" Pollard, Roach comedy star, and Mrs. Elizabeth Bowen of Bisbee, Arizona, were married here recently.

Contemporary Criticisms

"BOUGHT AND PAID FOR"

Paramount

"George Broadhurst's play is hardly more than a memory to the majority of younger picture patrons. It is revived only occasionally in stock. This fact will help the screen version of the play, for while the plot has been adhered to, the characters have been altered in some cases. . . .

"Mr. De Mille has, of course, dressed up the production. Once he takes his characters into a life of affluence, it would be easy to guess that it was a De Mille production even were there no announcement of the fact."

—Motion Picture News.

"So much has been said of the stage version for the very good reason that the picture version, produced for Paramount by William De Mille, keeps as close to the original as is possible in screen transcription, consequently there is no doubt but that it will at least equal the success of the stage play. The action o fthe original has been followed with remarkable fidelity and the spirit of the original has not only been retained absolutely but has in a measure been increased. . . .

"The strongest recommendation that can be made is that the picture at the start rivets the interest of the spectator and increases it as the picture progresses. It visualizes the same qualities the stage version contained, although there are times when there seems to be an unusual number of titles.

"The acting of the cast is one of the most valuable features of the production."

—Moving Picture World.

"George Broadhurst's original play has been repeated so often by stock companies all over and in the World Film picturization of several years ago, with Alice Brady as star, that its popularity is long established and the title probably familiar wherever entertainment exists. Paramount has considered it worthy of a second picturization and William De Mille has provided the production.

"The story gives the director one of his favorite themes although there are not the possibilities for spectacular effects and lavish display that usually play a prominent part in his productions. But De Mille has refrained splendidly from dressing up the story with anything that doesn't belong and the result is a photoplay that conforms pretty strictly to the original."

—Wid's.

"'Bought and Paid For,' adapted for the screen from the original play by George Broadhurst, fills every requirement as a first class production. The story is filled with choice comedy and one of the best love themes ever put on stage or screen. . . . The popularity of the play and the merits of this new screen version augurs well for the success of the picture."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"COME ON OVER"

Goldwyn

"It's as wholesome as a spring shower, as joyous as a bubbling brook and it fairly sparkles with quaint humor and Irish brogue. We have had many, many stories of the Emerald Isle, but none more fascinatingly told than this Hughes concoction, with its spitfire heroine, its stalwart, sincere hero and the many real people who surround them. There's a genuine treat in store for those who do not crave the sensaional in pictures. There are tears mixed with laughter, with the lighter scenes predominating and no especial play for sentiment."

—Exhibitors Herald.

"A pleasing mixture of humor. sentiment, Irish jigs and lovemaking is offered by this picture, which is skillfully directed, prettily photographed and presented b ya capable cast of players.

"The picture's chief charm lies in its optimistic view of life, there isn't a villain in sight at any time, even the usual film depiction of the metropolitan police as a set of strong-armed, iron-jawed clubbers is missing, for the New York cops in 'Come On Over' are a kindly hearted bunch of pavement pounders."

—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Rupert Hughes' story is chiefly character development and incident but sufficiently interesting and human to make up for any missing plot of the regulation continuity. He hasn't omitted anything pertaining to Irish customs or mannerisms either in those who have come over or those still in the 'auld' country.

"Rupert Hughes probably wrote the subtitles which certainly fit the pictures ideally. One was loudly applauded. Colleen, in a fit of temper because she thinks her sweetheart is in love with another, runs away and is arrested for sitting on a park bench without a hat. She tells the officer she thought it was a free country and the retort that won the audience was, 'Shure, ye must be a furriner to remimber the declaration of independence.'"

—Wid's.

"Rupert Hughes again demonstrates his thoroughness in whatever he undertakes by making 'Come On Over,' Colleen Moore's starring vehicle for Goldwyn, as green as any Shamrock that ever flourished in the Auld Sod. Indeed, so typically Irish is this picture that the heroine arrives in what she has been told was 'The Land of Liberty' with a box of Shamrocks, and then exhibits a very justifiable and equally Irish temper when she discovers her sweetheart has apparently lost interest in her. Moreover, the picture ends with everybody—rich men and poor men, their wives and kin—dancing an Irish jig on a hastily requisitioned door in a home of the busy rich."

—Moving Picture World.

"Rupert Hughes is the sponsor of this picture and it is typically Irish. . . . His idea is old and obvious and naive in development. In fact it builds along an exceedingly slight thread depending upon Celtic background and incident for its strength. In fact the humor is entirely gained from the captions which are picturesque in phrasing and truly 'ould sod' in character.

"'Come On Over' is really a three-reeler extended to feature length through the employment of Irish color and atmosphere. And these qualities are manifested with an old-fashioned reel, heart interest scenes between long separated relatives, and the eccentricities of the figures."

—Motion Picture News.

"SMILIN' THROUGH"

(First National)

"In converting 'Smilin' Through,' the famous stage play, which added greatly to the laurels of Jane Cowl, into a screen vehicle for Norma Talmadge, Director Sidney Franklin has done a notable piece of work.

"The Scenes of the play are laid in England, and the atmosphere, costumes and custums of British life during the two widely separated periods with which the story deals, have been preserved in a remarkable manner. The settings are most beautiful and the skillful photography misses no opportunity to bring these to the front with delightful efficiency."

—Exhibitors' Herald.

"'Smilin' Through' is a personal triumph for Norma Talmadge.

"Some persons will say, Miss Talmadge exceeds anything she has done before, but at any rate everyone will agree she at least equals it.

"Besides the charm Miss Talmadge will have upon all witnesses, it is this beauty of presentation of a story that is bound to have unusually wide appeal that assures success for the picture."

—Moving Picture World.

"Compared with the ordinary picture 'Smilin' Through' shines brilliantly. It has one of the sweetest stories ever told on the screen, splendid settings and photography—and Norma Talmadge, who surpasses herself in the dual role of Moonyeen and Kathleen.

"We have no doubt that before the picture is released its makers will shorten it in some details and make the introductory footage less confusing. These are matters that can be easily attended to.

"'Smilin' Through' is an exceptional picture. In our view it's the best Norma Talmadge ever made."

—Exhibitors' Trade Review.

"Everyone, from the exhibitor to his poorest patron, is certain to heap encomiums upon Norma Talmadge for her magnificent picture, "Smilin' Through," adapted from the stage play which is still on tour. Here is an opera—the first that the talented star has ever had and one of the finest features ever released since the fifth industry was established. It gives to Miss Talmadge opportunities to reveal her emotional qualities as they have never been revealed before.

"'Smilin' Through' will win praise everywhere. Money has not been spent upon it in vain. It tugs at the finer senses like Beethoven's Fifth Symphony."

—Motion Picture News.

"THE VERMILION PENCIL"

(R-C Pictures)

"If the story and drama had the same perfection that the production has from a technical standpoint, 'The Vermilion Pencil' would be an unqualified success. The story, however, scales the heights of the fanciful and improbable to a greater extent than is usual even in Sessue Hayakawa subjects, and provides an undue strain on the imagination for the sake of exploiting the star.

"The interiors are a revelation of art and the exteriors show scenes of the mountains and woods that are sure to win admiration."

—Moving Picture World.

"Sessue Hayakawa is back at straight Oriental characterizations and the result is an overdose of Chinese melodrama and mysticism, some delightful and exquisite photography, and a good, thrilling climax... The appeal is chiefly melodramatic—the story is one of physical action and romance, but not drama.

"'The Vermilion Pencil' has the action, atmosphere and photographic beauty, but its viceroys and mandarins may seem too unreal to the American to completely arouse him."

—Motion Picture News.

"There is a certain intriguing quality about Sessue Hayakawa's latest opus that lifts it above the average run of pictures. Perhaps it is Hayakawa's performance, or that of pretty Bessie Love. At any rate, the photography and sets will catch and hold your attention for both are very beautiful. Like his former vehicle, 'Five Days to Live,' the scene of 'The Vermilion Pencil' is laid wholly in Japan, and many of the players are native Japanese. It will be found interesting and the story culminates in a highly dramatic climax."

—Exhibitors' Herald.

"The story of 'The Vermilion Pencil,' although gruesome in detail, furnishes material for a very spectacular production. Hayakawa gives much of the necessary Oriental realism to the picture, which deals with the power of the viceroy, who, by lifting the vermillion pencil, can put to death any subject.

"Some very fine long shots have been obtained. Direction is good, but the story drags slightly until the latter half of the picture."

—Exhibitors' Trade Review.

"WILD HONEY"

(Universal)

"'Wild Honey' is by way of being a rather peculiar mixture of unusually good stuff and some very bad claptrap. But judged as a whole it should serve as fair entertainment of a theatrical, melodramatic sort for audiences that do not mind utter implausibilities and are not touched by the extra stretching of that popular member of a plot's body, the long arm of coincidence.

"Wesley Ruggles has injected some good atmosphere and has selected natural scenery with an eye to beauty and appropriateness. If he is responsible for the staging of the bursting dam scene and the following flood through the deep canyon, he deserves unstinted praise. This part of the picture comes as a much needed wallop."—Moving Picture World.

"Universal's latest feature starring Priscilla Dean is just about what you would expect it to be, or perhaps a little more so. Miss Dean is once more the heroine of many thrills that run all the way from her being forced into a disgraceful marriage and her last minute escape to the rescue, in the rescue in the final reel when a dam is blown up and the flood rushing down the valley threatens her life along with the hero's. But this last one is by all means the star thrill of the production. Slow motion photography has been used effectively to show the water slowly but surely flooding the narrow gorge and finally overtaking the lovers before they can get out of its path.

"If the piece had been written for Miss Dean it couldn't suit her better and she is always pleasing and in some of the very 'meller' bits her good acting helps to alleiate the improbabilities."—Wid's.

"Considered as a thriller, 'Wild Honey' has had few equals in this season's output. Priscilla Dean continues to enhance the reputation she started with 'The Virgin of Stamboul' as an energetic star, and Universal continues to give her stories that sweep to a climax of fierce, stupendous action.

"But as a screen story, 'Wild Honey' is not so perfect. The drama is secondary to the thrills."—Motion Picture News.

"Priscilla Dean's acknowledged abilities are given full play in this vehicle, and the result is a high-class melodrama which ought to please all types of audiences. The picture also contains two terrible pieces of realism—the wandering of the heroine in a desert, lost, dazed by mirages, and the breaking of a dam which sends a torrent of water through a narrow gorge.

"The desert and the flood are the highlights of melodramatic action, but they do not comprise the sole merits of the picture. The staging and direction and photography and lighting are very effective.

"'Wild Honey' is a picture of thrills—with love interest—and, to our notion, comes under the classification: good."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

THE PHOPHET'S PARADISE"

(Selznick)

"Neither the acting nor the plot is altogether convincing. The dark plottings of the Turkish villains are too obvious to be really intriguing, and Eugene O'Brien gives a rather casual if not actually blase interpretation of his part, without being at any point, greatly terrorized, as the seriousness of his predicament might warrant.

"Many of the scenes are conducted with pomp, and the settings show great care."

—Moving Picture World.

"O'Brien fits his role very well and it gives him a part in which he is called upon to do some strenuous acting.

"The production throughout is excellent and the atmosphere of the Orient is well preserved in sets and costumes."

—Exhibitors' Herald.

"A good example of adventure story is 'The Prophet's Paradise,' with Eugene O'Brien doing the adventuring mixed with a little romancing. It is a 'single idea' picture.

"In fiction form it would be a good, fast-moving short story rather than a novel.

"The plot might be trite if the villains were cowboy bad men, but they're not. They're all Oriental, and the mystery, the romance and the rich color of the East so enhances the story that the picture is always zestful and refreshing."

—Motion Picture News.

"THE DANGEROUS LITTLE DEMON"

(Universal)

"The latest Marie Prevost offering doesn't vary greatly from the others in which she has been presented by Universal of late, but the former bathing beauty manages to put it over satisfactorily through her own personality, beauty and ability to look and act cute for five reels and not have you get tired. Director Badger comes second in the endurance test when he succeeded in strething the story sufficiently to get it out to feature length.

"Mildred Considine's story is about the slightest and most unoriginal piece that could be imagined; but Badger has managed to dress it up with good looking sets, good photography, a suitable cast and the introduction of garden parties, ball room scenes and the like."

—Wid's.

"Picking stories for Marie Prevost is not a difficult task. . . . 'The Dangerous Little Demon' is a slight story relying entirely upon the star's personality. The idea behind it is much more convincing when there is much ado about nothing. But here the author and director have dragged in a touch of melodrama to give it a punch. And such an element is not needed. Somehow it seems padded with this form of treatment.

"There is some straining for humor but the comedy scenes are less successful than those expressing romance."

—Motion Picture News.

tion to the financial advantage accruing from the erection of income-producing property, the church would possess the additional advantage of being situated upon a main boulevard. However, it will be screened from the noise of traffic, while the harmonizing of exterior design of both church and community center buildings with the income-producing structures will add architectural dignity to the whole project.

To insure a businesslike administration of the funds collected for the project a corporation has been formed under the name of the "Picture People's Church Corporation," of which the Rev. Neal Dodd is President and Mr. Walter J. Reynolds, Treasurer.

This corporation is now launching a drive for sufficient funds to carry out the whole project.

The designing of the group of buildings has already been entrusted to Mr. Carleton Monroe Winslow, who is nationally known for his architectural work on the San Diego Exposition.

Mr. Winslow's initial plans include a large hall, capable of seating 700 persons, equipped with a stage and screen, and so designed as to permit of dances and other entertainments. A gymnasium, swimming tank, club rooms and other recreation rooms will be provided. There is also to be a dormitory building for the use of girls. These buildings will comprise the community center which will surround the church and rectory.

Remember that you do not have to be an Episcopalian to enjoy the privileges this fine set of buildings will afford, nor even a church member. If you belong to some other faith, very good, all will have a share and interest. In reality, it is to be a homing place for motion picture people, where they can feel at home and enjoy the pleasures of social intercourse in community life.

The office of the "Picture People's Church Corporation" is 1004 Hollingsworth Building, Los Angeles, California. Checks or money orders should be made out in the above name and sent direct to the office.

WE ARE CHAMPIONED

A correspondent points that not all of the press is participating in the monstrous attack upon Hollywood, which has been launched by certain syndicates. As proof he quotes a late editorial from "The Rockford (Ill.) Republic:

"Wouldn't it be rather surprising to the most bitter critics of the moving picture profession for it to be demonstrated that the slain William Desmond Taylor was above the average in kindliness and honor and that his death was occasioned because of efforts to protect a friend from sinister outside forces?

"This has not been shown beyond question, but it has been indicated more strongly than insinuations against his character. Nor have any of the young women, whose names and pictures decorated many a newspaper page, been connected in any way with the various scandals dragged into the affair by eager correspondents with keen noses for carion.

"The fact is that the tremendous public interest in picture people carried the story to extremes. Perhaps it may develop into a mere business murder, such as some great city has every day, or there may be an element of romance, not unknown in the highest and lowest of society.

"The outstanding fact seems to be that several prominent members of the picture profession have been inspected under the spot light, spy glass and X-ray, without being revealed as anything more than ordinarily foolish human beings. As has been stated before there is every reason to believe that the slayer, if of the profession, was some one who was in desperate straits rather than on the pinnacle of success.

"In fact there has been such an absence of information regarding certain persons and along certain lines that one may guess that the Los Angeles authorities have the solution in hand and are merely kicking up dust while watching the suspect.

"The worst that can be said of the famous Hollywood colony, or the Beverly Hills or Culver City colonies less often mentioned, is that they may have as large a percentage of offensive or degenerate members as any other colony, profession or occupation.

"And that is rather a mean thing to say. Before casting more stones at our entertainers it might be well to run through the newspapers and check up various other groups, including some which profess greater virtue. Laborers, capitalists, merchants, lawyers, doctors, criminals, reformers,—many men of many minds—are human beings, and human beings sometimes do the unexpected—as even Hedda Gabler proved, you may remember.

"Now that indignation, whipped by tongues of scandal, is burning more low, and fair play may have a word, it may be well to quote from Donn Piatt:

"Humanity is about the same the world over; and while the earth has its uniformity, with slight differences in mountain and plain, so its products are very nearly alike."

The Manhattan directors, Fred W. Sittenham and Clifford S. Wheeler, have just arrived from New York and leased quarters in Donovan's bungalow village. Mr. Wheeler, it is announced, will shortly produce a picture at the Robertson-Cole studios.

Writer and director appears to the public as only a name on the screen. Nation-wide publicity makes that name represent a real being in which people feel human interest she has previously essayed. The cast is filled out by Betty Allen, Ray Ripley and Eric Mayne.

"Turn to the Right" filmed retains all of its original entertainment value. Its type, lacking something of the popularity which it once enjoyed, is the picture's only point of uncertainty from the box office angle.

Gladys Brockwell will be seen as Nancy in "Oliver Twist," the latest Jackie Coogan starring picture starting production at United under the direction of Frank Lloyd.

The second production in Tom Santschi's starring engagement at Universal City, "It's the Law," has been completed under Robert North Bradbury's direction. Marcella Pershing plays the leading feminine role.

THE CAMERAMAN IN THE MIDDLE WEST

From the American Cinematographer

"Everywhere we go nowadays to see important eevnts, the moving picture cameraman is on the job, bringing the news to thousands, as the newspaper reporters have done in the past. In years just gone by, we have been furnished with our latest news by the leading weeklies such as Pathe, Kinograms, etc. The Middle West of our country, furnishing its quota of these news events along with the rest, carried this idea forward. Now today, particularly in this territory, we have overstepped this idea until we see an event in the morning and then when we attend the local picture palace, at night, we see the event moving before our eyes. Few realize what has taken place during the day, how the cameraman was on the job ,how the laboratory expert, the cameraman's co-worker, continued the good work, and finally the projectionist flashes the views in action before our eyes.

"The day Marshal Foch appeared in Battle Creek, Michigan, motion pictures were taken of the train arriving, speech making, etc., and that same night these views were shown to the anxious throngs who had seen the events of the morning, as well as those who were unable to attend. All this done in a city of 30,000 people in the Middle West where most people think that the making of movies is never heard of. Service like this might be expected with the facilities of New York or Hollywood, but in the Middle West it proves that the industry is striving forward, too. This stunt was put over by the writer, who is putting forth every effort to feature the advancement of the cinema to the masses.

"Another deal was put over in the Middle West not over a week ago. When the Capitol Theatre, Detroit, opened to over 5,000 people moving pictures were taken of the crowds in front of the theatre, also of the audience on the start of the performance. When the show ended ,this self-same audience saw themselves on the screen. This again shows what can be accomplished in this territory, the heart of the Middle West.

"This is approximately the center of our country, east and west, and is the logical place for the producer, aiding him in putting his wares before the people with greater rapidity than now, thus eliminating the process of shipping across the entire continent to the main office in New York. The scenery is here, everything from a palatial estate to a backwood scene. The climate is here, too. What if there is a little snow now and then! Cannot a love scene be put on with it snowing? Too much summer scenery is like eating mince pie all the time. Apple pie is good for a change. So the Middle West is here for the producer, and with proper backing and support, it could become the center of the motion picture industry."

NEW YORK PREMIER FOR "FORGET ME NOT"

On the completion of "Forget Me Not," the special production co-starring Gareth Hughes and Bessie Love, Louis Burston will take the picture to New York for a special preview.

The cast includes Irene Hunt, Otto Lederer, Gertrude Claire, William Machin and Myrtle Lind. W. S. Van Dyke directed, with Arthur L. Todd at the camera. Henry R. Symonds wrote the story and John B. Clymer the continuity.

Jack Perrin is playing the male leads opposite Josephine Hill in the series of western pictures which has been written by Mrs. A. B. Maescher, for direction by Fred Caldwell.

SILVER SHIELD SERVICE TO SERVE NON-THEATRICAL FIELD

Announcement has just been made of the formation of Silver Shield Service, a national motion picture producing and distributing corporation to serve the non-theatrical field. Production has already started on a series of unit programs and the creation of seventy-five distributing branches throughout the United States and Canada is already under way. Temporary executive offices have been taken in the Union League Building pending the preparation of permanent headquarters.

According to officials of the company, Silver Shield Service has been organized to satisfy a very definite demand for clean pictures on the part of churches, schools, women's clubs and other religious and civic organizations. The distributing plan is a comprehensive one. Every important city in the United States will possess a Silver Shield branch office. It is thus planned to make Silver Shield Service quickly and inexpensively accessible to every church, school and club in the country. The officers and directors include the following:

Hon. Rex B. Goodcell, formerly District Attorney and Judge, San Bernardino. and now Collector Internal Revenue, Los Angeles.

Dr. F. W. Bassett, for the last thirty-five years a practising physician in Wisconsin and Los Angeles.

Hon John W. Shenk, formerly Juvenile Judge and now Judge of the Superior Court of Los Angeles.

J. B. Monnette, organizer and promoter, Pasadena.

Louis F. Parsons, formerly member of the New York Stock Exchange and President of the Denver, Cripple Creek and Los Angeles exchange. Now an investment banker and broken in this city.

Lloyd C. Haynes, formerly invstment and commercial banker in New York and Los Angeles and more recently identified with the production of motion pictures as financier and manager.

I. A. Ewing, formerly Vice-President and General Manager of the San Francisco and West Coast Life Insurance Company.

H. Thompson Rich, formerly editor-in-chief of the Forum Magazine of New York, and later with Vitagraph, Metro, Goldwyn and Hodkinson as scenario editor and production manager.

Millard S. Binney, formerly advertising manager of the Traffic Motor Truck Corporation of St. Louis and Salos and Advertising Counselor for the Ross-Gould Advertising Agency of the same city.

H. M. Owens, formerly with World, Triangle, Paramount, Hodkinson and Associated Producers, both in this country and in the Orient.

Elmer I. Moody, Legal Counselor.

In speaking of the need for this organization, Judge oGodcell made the following statement:

"Silver Shield Service is an incorporated outgrowth of the Silver Shield League for clean pictures. The demand that exists for a distributing and producing company to serve the non-theatrical field exclusively was forcibly brought to our attention when the League recently mailed a circular announcement to ministers, educators, club women and other leaders in one hundred of the largest cities, stating that the early organization of Silver Shield Service was planned and outlining its ideals. Two facts stood out prominently in most of them: fiirst, many more churches and schools reported the ownership of propection machines than was anticipated; second, these institutions, almost without exception, complained bitterly regarding their absolute inability to secure new films and of their great difficulty in obtaining even old subjects suitable for their type of audiences. While there appears to have been some 30,000 projection machines installed in churches and approximately 44,000 in schools, more than half of these are apparently idle because of the inadequacy of fit subjects for this field.

"Silver Shield Service will produce clean, wholesome pictures with the rigid requirements of this field in mind. Each program will consist of one multi-reel feature and several reels of clean comedy, scenic, travel and educational subjects. Musical scores will be furnished when practical and every aid given to insure the very highest type of presentation. Religious and so-called "moral" pictures will be carried as library subjects, but they will not be included in the regular programs. The regular programs will be selected because of their general interest and dramatic value and they will positively be free from salacious or otherwise harmful situations. Beginning with the story and continuing through every stage of development, wholesomeness will be the actuating motive.

"We realize that others have attempted to produce clean pictures and failed because of the lack of a distributing system to make their products conveniently available to the non-theatrical exhibitors. To guard against any such happenings with our programs, we are now organizing distributing branches in every important city, each in charge of a capable exchange man. These managers will contract in advance with their exhibitors and furnish Silver Shield programs on specified dates on a first-run basis. Such a system will bring to the non-theatrical field the same efficient service that is received by theatres from professional distributors."

Amplifying the foregoing, J. B. Monnette, who had conducted an intensive territory investigation for over six months, added: "The theatrical and non-theatrical fields are absolutely separate and are not capable of amalgamation. It is unreasonable for non-theatrical exhibitors to expect new films from theatrical distributors when they will be shown in competition with the theatres which furnish the distribution or with practically his entire revenue. As a result, schools and churches can secure from theatrical distributors the few films suitable for their need only after the theatres have used them and they are so obsolete as to be no longer competitive and their physical condition is such that a satisfactory presentation is doubtful. Distribution is of as great importance as production and unless a nation-wide organization efficiently serves the non-theatrical field, both as producer and distributor, this field will be incapable of development and those who do not care for the type of pictures being shown in theatres will be forced to view them anyway or stay at home."

Millard S. Binney, who has charge of sales for the new corporation, stated that actual territory organization work had been going on for practically three moutrs and that many sections in both this country and Canada have already been contracted. Applications are on hand for branch distributing contracts in practically all of the other areas and they are being closer up as rapidly as investigation shows the applicants to be of proper type to represent Silver Shield Service.

Diamant-Berger claims that next year he will produce in Los Angeles.

Ethel Ritchie, Lily Mae Wilkinson and Tiny Sanford are supporting Roy Atwell in "Loose Nuts," a two-reel Universal comedy which Craig Hutchinson is directing.

Our Birthday

With this issue Camera! completes its fourth year. It does so, fondly realizing that its extended life has been entirely the responsibility of the profession which has always given it support for support in a truly unusual fashion. The term "extended" is used comparatively here in view of the dozen other trade publications that have been offered to the picture industry during our remembrance, only to be now non-existent. In reviewing the ill-fated careers of these contemporaries we feel that if they lacked any perfection which we may have achieved, it was a combination of the unprejudiced candor and heart in its people that has won for Camera! a place of sentiment among its followers.

Only a sympathetic, and yet a fair, constructive understanding of the problems of any class justifies a representative journal. To maintain just such an unbiased attitude has been Camera!'s policy, and its staff has consistently utilized it as a basis of all operation.

The beautiful response of you for whom we work has many times rewarded us for our effort while proving and reproving the infallibility of the idea upon which we are grounded.

Our fifth year is approached, therefore, with an honest gratification that insures many returns of a very momentous week.

Camera! will continue to be at your service for the remainder of the journey.—F. R.

Sherwood on Hollywood

Robert Sherwood gives us the following whimsical treatment in a late "Life:"

After all, Hollywood is a vastly overrated place. Although I have been observing it for as much as ten days, I have attended no orgies (and as heaven is my witness I have spared no effort in trying to locate them), I have seen no murders and I have been offered no cocaine, hasheesh or bhang. Someone told me that he had a friend who knew a man who made fairly good beer in his kitchen, but that is the only sign of lawlessness that I have observed.

"However, I have not lost hope. Before long I expect to be able to announce that I have found the man who makes the beer.

"Superficially, Hollywood has somewhat the appearance of a quiet college town. The studios take the place of the university buildings and the picture people take the place of the students. All the stores are catering to this one group and display their wares accordingly.

"Behind the town is Mount Hollywood, with a tremendous "H" engraved near its summit. This, too, carries out the collegiate atmosphere, as though the letter had been carved there to commemorate some notable football victory like "Hollywood 28—Culver City 3.

"I believe that there is something of the kind on the cliff above New Haven, Conn.

"The movie people themselves—the actors, directors, camera men, stage hands, et al—are in no way extraordinary. They do not seem to take themselves or their work very seriously. They are perfectly willing to admit that many of their pictures contain a certain element of hokum. One particularly attractive young star informed me that she is hungry for New York because she wants "the chance to see a regular show."

"They all work hard when they are on duty in the studios (and it seems to be peculiarly dull, tiresome work), but out of office hours they are for the most part casual and easy-going, and no one seems to worry very much whether school keeps or not.

"Of the various studios, Universal City is unquestionably the largest, but at the time of my visit there was little activity there and I saw nothing much except some left-over sets and properties from Von Stroheim's "Foolish Wives."

"In the Ince Studio I saw a scene of the interior of Westminster Abbey being converted into a Bowery cabaret. This studio, by the way, is the most beautiful of all, resembling from the front a stately Southern mansion, with an imposing, green-liveried Negro butler at the door. There were no mint juleps, however.

"I paid a formal call at the home of young Jackie Coogan and was treated to a recital that included poetry, riddles and impersonations. It is not difficult to understand the tremendous success that this seven-year-old child has suddenly achieved, for in spite of all the attention that has been showered on him, and all the praise, he is singularly naive and unspoiled.

"Much of this same quality was evident in the delightful personality of Harold Lloyd, who is actually as comic as he seems. I went out on location with him and watched him do a scene, laughing immeasurably at his antics.

"At the Paramount Studio I saw four companies at work, two of which were filming what appeared to be death-bed scenes. It was horribly realistic. The patients may have recovered after I left, but it seemed to me at the time that there was little hope.

"Douglas Fairbanks showed me the settings of his huge new picture—in which he is to be Robin Hood—and gave a remarkable exhibition of archery. He also

Current Reviews

"ORPHANS OF THE STORM"

Mission

Griffith gives the picture-going world another historical masterpiece in "Orphans of the Storm," his latest effort. Based upon the old melodrama, "The Two Orphans," he has widened its scope, humanized its characters and lent it a powerful amount of suspense. In comparing this super entertainment with "Passion," its foreign contemporary (since both are stories of the French Revolution), we were thrilled to observe that the producer of "The Clansman" had excelled the latter photodrama from every conceivable standpoint. His aristocrats have as much of dignity and less of pose than "Passion's" noblemen; his story has many times its drama better developed; and above all, his mobs!—they are composed of vivid, pulsating, passionate individuals with as many wild ideas as to the form vengeance shall take as their wrongs have been varied. Here is no massive human mechanism for which the German play was startling, but a terrific chapter of life.

Griffith never forgets his comedy and human interest sidelights, but neither does he make the mistake of the many who fatally break up their suspense with them. Everything is in beautiful proportion.

Exquisite photography, including much effective color work, accomplishes immeasurable attraction for the setting. The picture is probably as nearly correct from a technical point as it is possible to attain.

Of course, the predominant note in the picture is consistently the little orphans, played with all the heart tugging pathos and delicate charm possible to Lillian and Dorothy Gish under the guidance of David Griffith. Lillian in he mothering Henriette, but a child herself, who shoulders the responsibility of all helpless things in her path, is a bit of Dresden china and does some of her greatest performing, while Dorothy in a serious part for once, is truly lovely as the blind Louise.

The outstanding male positions are filled contrastingly by Joseph Schildkraut, perfect in the sympathetic Chevalier, and Monte Blue, the ugly, big-souled orator, Danton. Schildkraut is new to the screen, upon which anything may be possible for him. Blue's Danton is his most unusual interpretation.

Frank Puglia and Lucille La Verne are excellent in Pierre and his outrageous old mother, while Sidney Herbert makes Robespierre the diabolical hypocrite that we like to think him.

Creighton Hale and Porter Strong attend efficiently to the comedy element, with Frank Losee, Catherine Emmett, Morgan Wallace, Sheldon Lewis, Leslie King, Leo Kolmer, Adolphe Lestina and Kate Bruce completing the cast.

If there is one thing that detracts from the bigness of "Orphans of the Storm," it is the unnecessary and inappropriate use of subtitle propaganda assuring us that Bolshevism and anarchy are not for America. We are wondering why any contrary idea should present itself as we observe history. The whole effort is obvious and a little absurd. Otherwise the titles predigest the action more than we modernly appreciate. Perhaps these are but small points. They injure the entertainment value of the picture in no degree, which is the main consideration. Few will be disappointed in the orphans.

"IS MATRIMONY A FAILURE?"

Grauman's

A merry combination of clever farce, polite slapstick, and not a little real human interest excellently directed and perfectly played by a brilliant all-star cast makes "Is Matrimony a Failure?" quite the most sparkling Paramount comedy lately seen.

KATHLEEN CLIFFORD

The author, Walter Woods, hit upon an invaluable idea when he decided to treat so broad a theme as matrimony through the examples of five entirely different but typical wedded couples. His story is further enriched by some rarely understanding casting and James Cruze's subtle direction of the predominant farce element, one hundred per cent cutting, a superior scenario and photography.

The romantic interest of the play centers in Arthur Haviland and Margaret Saxby, lovers who despair not even in the face of the marital chaos about them. The former is interpreted with T. Roy Barnes' most perfect and hilarious pantomime, while Lila Lee leaves nothing to be desired in the heroine.

The Saxbys, Margaret's parents, form perhaps the most perfectly proportioned team of domestic "battlers" included in the script. The aggressive, talkative wife just seethes opportunities which Lillian Leighton fails in no instance to develop to their greatest value. Her naturally spirited but subdued spouse is filled equally as well by Tully Marshall, whose mere appearance evokes unrestrained mirth from the audience.

ZaSu Pitts strikes a remarkable balance between the comic and the pathetic in Mrs. Wilbur, the martyr wife, with five or six devilish young offspring whom she characteristically defends to the last ditch. Arthur Hoyt is very good as her "bitter" half.

Sylvia Ashton and Otis Harlan play the Pearsons, while Lois Wilson and Walter Hiers are seen in the Hoyts, all highly amusing positions.

Adolphe Menjou in a "legal mind," Charles Ogle and Ethel Wales end the list of players.

This type of production, well done in all respects, would raise the standard of more companies than Lasky. It is a valuable departure.

"POLLY OF THE FOLLIES"

Kinema

Just to prove that there is a rural flapper and that she is equally as deadly as the metropolitan variety, Constance Talmadge presents us with "Polly of the Follies," a John Emerson-Anita Loos story directed by Mr. Emerson.

In it a very imaginative and much-abused young resident of Bowling Green is led to the great city where she enters Florenz Ziegfeld's employ only to step quickly out of her job and into a joyous romance.

"Polly of the Follies" has been given a typical Schenck production, and may boast at least two original comedy situations which are handled with mastery and keep the audience in a continual uproar.

Connie plays little Polly Meacham with her customary fire, which is a bit more attractive than usual in this material.

Kenneth Harlan has a straight lead to his credit in Bob Jones for whom he collects much sympathy.

Billie Dove makes a good "other girl," while Horace Knight as Polly's melodramatic old uncle proves as convincingly antagonistic as possible.

Thomas Carr, Harry Fisher, Frank Lalor, George Faucett, Ina Rorke, Milkred Arden, Paul Doucet, Thesera Conover, James Gleason, Bernard Randall and John Daly Murphy portray remaining roles with attendant satisfaction.

"BE MY WIFE"

California

Max Linder's current comedy, "Be My Wife," offers a fair amount of diversion to the comedy lover, more perhaps through one or two clever gags and mechanical devices than through the possibilities for mirth which its characters afford. Being an amusing chronicle of the difficulties of an ingenious young man in winning his bride over the head of an impossible aunty, put over in slapstick fashion, and interspersed with the rather usual dream, it is forced to depend at times upon often-used material and an abundance of vase throwing activity. In any event, all is reclaimed for entertainment in the imaginary fight incident near the end which displays a remarkable degree of originality upon the part of Mr. Linder. He both wrote and directed "Be My Wife."

In the star role he is seen as himself an energetic sweetheart, bridgegroom and husband. Linder's characters vary little, yet they always beguile and have gained for him an enthusiastic following.

Alta Allen makes an attractive blonde-opposite for the French comedian and with Lincoln Stedman as Max's fat rival, forms the rest of the almost fatal triangle peculiar to comedies of this order.

DIXON ON CENSORSHIP

The following words of Thomas Dixon were published in a recent chapter of the Urban Official Movie Chat:

"Censorship is the vilest work in history. It reeks with the memories of tyranny and of blood. God has not yet made the man wise enough to be clothed with autocratic power to strangle thought."

ENTERTAINED AT WHITE HOUSE

Lillian and Dorothy Gish and David W. Griffith were guests at luncheon recently of Mrs. Warren G. Harding, the first lady of the land.

Mr. Griffith and the Gish girls went to the capital city recently to be present at the opening of "Orphans of the Storm," and while there the invitation arrived.

A pre-view of the new Owen Moore film, "Reported Missing," was given recently at the Ritz Carlton in New York.

THE RISE OF IRVING CUMMINGS

In 1910, after several years spent on the legitimate stage, Irving Cummings made what was considered in those days a drastic move by throwing in his lot with the Reliance-Majestic forces in New York City.

His stage experience, combined with his natural talents as an actor, stood him in such good stead that he soon became one of the leaders in the then small band of pioneer picture folk whose untiring efforts eventually succeeded in bringing the film industry into its own.

Several years ago Mr. Cummings felt the call of the Southland, and on his arrival here was much in demand as a leading man. His ambitions, however, were at that time crystallizing into a desire to become a producer himself, and in his subsequent work that objective was ever in mind, awaiting the chance of fulfillment.

The long awaited opportunity came to Mr. Cummings some eighteen months ago, and he started producing a series of two-reel dramas dealing with the adventurous life of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. In this series of twelve pictures the role Mr. Cummings essayed was three in one—star, director and producer, and although he was called on to divide his activities into several different channels where, in justice to himself, they should have been concentrated on one phase of the work only, the series was a big success and brought Mr. Cummings one step nearer his ultimate goal—the producing of big features.

The two-real series was followed by a five-reel feature production of the James Oliver Curwood story—"The Man from Hell's River"—in which Mr. Cummings was once again star, director and producer of a picture for which there has been keen and spirited bidding.

In his present picture, now in the making, under the working title of "Fires of Vengeance," Mr. Cummings has been able to give all his attention to producing and directing, his star being none other than Lon Chaney himself. In consequence of the star's fame and Mr. Cummings' opportunity to concentrate his own creative genius on the work in hand, great things are predicted of the picture when it shall finally be completed and released.

After Rodolph Valentino completes "Blood and Sand," his first starring photoplay, for Famous Players, and likewise a fall release he will make "Amos Judd," by John S. Mitchell.

A portrait bust in bronze of Madame Nazimova was recently completed by Renee Prahar, a Bohemian sculptor. It represents the actress in the role of Nora in Ibsen's "A Doll's House."

Miss Theresa Yates, musician and dancer from Texas, will make her debut in pictures in Douglas Fairbanks' latest photoplay, which will start production shortly at the Pickford-Fairbanks Studios on Santa Monica Boulevard.

"Prairie Jack" Edwards, a picturesque character of Casper, Wyoming, is en route to Los Angeles on horseback, bearing a petition signed by several thousand westerners asking Bill Hart to continue the making of frontier pictures. Hart has not been producing for more than a year.

Before long Philip Rosen will take his company, making "The Bonded Woman," in which Betty Compson is to star, to San Francisco for harbor scenes and some shipboard episodes.

Pending the return from the East shortly of Dorothy Dalton, who will be the featured player in "The Siren Call," an Irvin Willat production for Paramount, Mr. Willat has gone northward to look up a location where cabin sets, etc., will be constructed. Returning to the studio, he will begin work here, and then take his company to the already prepared location. Actual work will start about the tenth of this month.

April 17th is set as the starting date for George Melford's new production, "Burning Sands," by Arthur Weigall, adapted by Olga Printzlau. Milton Sills and Wanda Hawley are to be the principal players in this picture. Mr. Melford is now at Palm Springs looking up locations.

Stallings, who has been in charge of the location department for some time, is the new production executive. He will have charge of the unit starring Frank Mayo and directed by William Worthington, making "Out of the Silent North," and one comedy unit.

The historical chapter play, "In the Days of Buffalo Bill," is on its way to the screen after seven months of hard work. The mass of film will be reduced to eighteen episodes of two reels each.

RADICAL PRODUCING POLICY INSTITUTED BY NEILAN

The perfection of a producing plan which eliminates the building of artificial settings in making movies, by Marshall Neilan, well-known producer, is expected to prove a departure of a radical nature that will affect future movie producing generally.

The completion of a new type of electric generator run by two Liberty motors, a plant that is portable and can be rushed to any location on its own power, together with other new paraphernalia that facilitates photographing any interior or exterior views and embodying various camera innovations, marks the institution of Mr. Neilan's plan to abolish the artificial set in favor of the genuine article.

Experiments in connection with this plan were made by the producer recently in the picturization of "Fools First," when practically all interior scenes were photographed amidst the atmosphere of real bank, hotel, school and other interiors. The results are said to have proved such an improvement over the artificial sets and backgrounds from the standpoints of realism on the screen, saving of time and money and minimizing waste, that Mr. Neilan decided to establish the idea permanently and to a greater degree in his future productions.

With the production of "Her Man," his newest picture just started, Mr. Neilan eliminates entirely the use of artificial sets in visualizing history on the screen. As the first step, he has leased an old-fashioned hotel called Garvanza Villa at South Pasadena, which offers the desired background for most of the scenes in the play. Here all scenes in this connection will be staged. Every room in the boarding house in which the action of the story takes place will be photographed in the building itself, rather than merely photographing the exterior scenes here and building the interior settings on the studio stage, as has been the common practice.

Other scenes for "Her Man" will be staged in genuine buildings in which people actually live and on streets and other exterior locations that are real. Of course, where foreign or period plays are to be produced, the building of sets is necessary, but for the production of modern stories in surroundings that are extant the Neilan plan is expected to have material effect on future motion picture production.

DIRIGO FILMS CO. COMPLETES ORGANIZATION

It is understood that the organization of the Dirigo Films Co. of Portland, Maine, is completed. The corporation is headed by Miles B. Bank, president of the Miles B. Bank Motor Car Co., and proposes to produce stories of Maine. It is expected that one or more of the poems of Longfellow will form the basis of the early pictures.

Charles M. Seay, who directed for Pine Tree Pictures, Inc., "Jan of the Big Snows," has been chosen as manager of production.

The directors include Dr. W. M. Spear, A. S. Littlefield, John Howard Stevens, Howard Winslow, N. T. Fox, W. B. Thombs, A. B. McKeown, L. F. Corthell, Lyman B. Chipman, Henry F. Merrill and Gilbert Oakley.

Mack Sennett has added another director to his staff in Gus Meins.

F. D. Phillips and George Dromgold will be seen in roles of consequence in "Her Man," the new Marshall Neilan cinemaplay which recently went into production

FOX NEWS TO ELIMINATE AMUSEMENTS

The Fox News has decided to eliminate all pictures of sports, games and other amusements that might be considered competitors of motion pictures. This means that the twice-a-week issues of Fox News will bar pictures which might tend to keep the public out of the theatres and send them to other amusements.

John Davidson and Stuart Holmes have been cast to interpret principal roles in "Under Two Flags," starring Priscilla Dean.

John M. Stahl has completed the cutting of "One Clear Call," his latest independent unit production for Louis B. Mayer. The film is now being prepared for shipment to Chicago. "One Clear Call" has an all-star cast headed by Henry B. Walthall, Irene Rich, Milton Sills and Claire Windsor.

AL CHRISTIE GOING ABROAD

Al Christie will sail for Europe as soon as he has completed the comedy which he has just started, featuring Dorothy Devore. With Mr. Christie on this trip will be H. D. Edwards, production manager for Christie Comedies, and preceding him will be Frank R. Conklin of the Christie scenario staff, who expects to spend most of his time in France.

During Mr. Christie's absence, production will proceed as heretofore, comedies being filmed under the direction of Scott Sidney, William Beaudine and Harold Beaudine. These stories are being mapped out now by Conklin, Graham and Hall of the scenario department, and will feature Bobby Vernon, Neal Burns, Dorothy Devore and Viora Daniel.

A rural comedy featuring Bobby Vernon is the latest Christie to be completed. The leading feminine role is played by Charlotte Stevens, the beauty contest winner from Chicago, who is making her first appearance as a leading lady in this picture. The comedy was written by Robert Hall and directed by Harold Beaudine and Bobby Vernon.

With the termination of a year's contract, the motion picture producing firm of Selig-Rork has been dissolved, it was announced recently. During the past year these producers have made such productions as "The Rosary," a seven-reel special released through Associated First National; four two-reel dramas with all-star casts, and a wild animal serial, "The Jungle Goddess," which has just been completed.

Contemporary Criticisms

"ISLAND WIVES"

(Vitagraph)

"This picture is a variation of the South Sea formula and as such it doesn't offer much in the way of novelty. As a matter of frankness, it fails to carry any suspense for the steady patron who has seen the pattern used since the beginning of the multiple-reel feature. The author has peopled his story with conventional figures who are piloted through a number of scenes of arbitrary design—some of which strain credulity.

"The producers have given the story a colorful production. . . . The storm scene is highly effective, it being charged with first-rate suspense and high class in a technical way. . . . The titles are written in an impressionistic style and as far as advancing the plot is concerned they fail in the task. But the production is high class."—Motion Picture News.

"The acting of the entire cast in 'Island Wives' is excellent throughout and this serves to stem the tide when the story weakens.

"The story shifts from a beautiful tropical isle to San Francisco and then back again to the island, and in the city scenes gives Miss Griffith an opportunity to wear many beautiful gowns.

"The photography is clear and the tropical storm scenes well handled."—Exhibitors' Herald.

"It isn't a very new idea that Bob Dexter thought up for his 'Island Wives.' In fact, it comes very nearly being in the 'formula' class with some of the other familiar ones such as the eternal triangle, the officer of the Northwest Mounted, etc. But in spite of all .this, Vitagraph has succeeded in making a picture that will probably please a great many. . . . The interiors are good but the painted drops used outside the windows are a bit too obvious, especially where the ocean is 'painted.' Otherwise production values are all up to standard."—Wid's.

"There is so much that pleases the eye in 'Island Wives' that the shortcoming of what should appeal to the mind go by the board to such an extent that they are almost obliterated."—Moving Picture World.

"FAIR LADY"

(United Artists)

"There is one very bad give-away in this picture that will be detected by anyone that is at all observing. And for those who catch it, it not only discloses the ending long before it is reached but also lessens the interest in the incidents leading up to the conclusion. The mob scenes are well done and bring the action up to quite a pitch of excitement.

"'Fair Lady' is very different from anything else Rex Beach has written and not at all the sort that folks will likely think it to be, in view of his usual out-of-doors atmosphere."—Wid's.

"At the present time melodramas seem to be enjoying increased popularity. . . . It is ten, twent', thirt' stuff all dressed up smartly. . . . . This sort of melodrama has always had universal appeal.

"'Fair Lady' is a new treatment of a familiar theme, the Italian vendetta. There are plenty of thrills and the suspense is maintained throughout. It grips you. Kenneth Webb directed the picture with such technique that he has brought out all the intrinsic values of the story, and has injected atmosphere that raises the picture above the average melodrama and gives it an unusual appearance of logicalness."—Moving Picture World.

"Like all of Rex Beach's stories, 'Fair Lady,' based on his widely read novel, 'The Net,' seems constructed for picture purposes.

"It is well handled, the New Orleans atmosphere being most satisfactory, and the entire cast doing good work."—Exhibitors' Herald.

"ASHES"

(East Coast)

"Those patrons who are ever in search for life-like episodes on the screen and who delight in studies of human nature are likely to be well satisfied with "Ashes," a melodramatic adventure which carries a deal of novelty of plot, characterizations, and incident.

"In spite of the theme and situations growing out of it, there is nothing spicy or objectionable in the offering."—Motion Picture News.

"Had not the ashes remained on a man's cigar he would have been arrested for attacking a woman; as it was, he turned the tables and accused her and her male companion of blackmail. This furnishes the big scene and also the title of 'Ashes,' a State right production, distributed by East Coast Productions, Inc., and directed by G. M. Anderson.

"As is frequently the case in productions carrying two distinct stories, there is a drop in the interest at the close of the first one, when the final threads of the other are again taken up and straightened out. Too much footage has also been allowed for some of the scenes."—Moving Picture World.

"ELOPE IF YOU MUST"

(Fox)

"'Elope If You Must,' is an average screen comedy which would never have seen the light if there was not a great scarcity of good stories. . . . The story is too improbable from the start and depends upon a string of stock situations ranging from locking hotel detectives in closets to calling out the fire department and drenching everyone with water at the finish. There is too much repetition of the chase scenes and many of the subtitles are obvious attempts at humor."—Exhibitors' Herald.

"Eileen Percy engineers this comedy successfully through a stormy course of match-making and match-breaking efforts. . . . . Most of the fun lies in artful dodges, unethical interferences in the affairs of others and continual skirmishes—all with the entertaining appearance of being meaningless, but with a definite purpose, which is finally achieved."—Moving Picture World.

"A comedy that can be judged as fairly good entertainment. The story has in it enough good material to make a clever two-reeler but scarcely warrants or holds sufficient interest for long footage. Primarily it shows great possibilities but gradually loses itself in resorting to slap-stick methods to keep the thing going. The situations are too often repeated and depend chiefly on some sort of chase for excitement."—Exhibitors' Trade Review.

"This feature looks decidedly better than the majority which have come from the Fox lots starring Eileen Percy. While it boasts too much sparkle at the beginning to keep such a dizzy pace, it manages to finish with a fair burst of speed. The trouble is it starts off with a typical farce tempo and the high jinks give way to a zippy chase of the slapstick brand. There is hardly enough substance to extend through five or six reels. Condensed into a polite three-reller, it would carry a spontaneity and compactness largely absent in this edition.

"The interest slackens when incidental by-play is introduced to keep it going. It's a helter-skelter line of action which taxes the spectator because there is no single thread to keep him at attention."—Motion Picture News.

"OTHER WOMEN'S CLOTHES"

(Hodkinson)

"The original story of 'The Luxury Tax,' by Ethel Doncher, is adapted to the screen in the production of 'Other Women's Clothes.' The title is rather misleading, inasmuch as very little effort has been made to show any display of gowns as one might expect. There are numerous twists to the plot and most of them are unconvincing. The story manages to hold a fair amount of interest and occasionally some good comedy has been introduced to liven it up."—Exhibitors' Trade Review.

"The production values of this picture far surpass the story qualities. Indeed the theme of this offering has been ground through the movie mill on several occasions and even were it not burdened with improbobilities, so noticeable here, it does not carry enough substance to entertain beyond its pictorial appeal.

"The continuity is well arranged. In fact everything has been done to make this an exceptional picture, but alas, it is burdened with a weak plot—one devoid of any conspicuous highlight."—Motion Picture News.

"ROBINSON CRUSOE"

(Universal)

"What promises to be a crackerjack serial, provided the pace set in the first two episodes is maintained, is 'Robinson Crusoe,' produced by Universal. It is interesting, full of action, well produced and finely photographed. Based on Daniel Defoe's classic story of adventure, it will not only please the children but will take grown-ups back to their days of childhood.

"Director Robert F. Hill deserves commendation for the manner in which he has handled this production. It is well made and holds the interest. Particularly striking are the scenes of the storm at sea and mutiny on board ship when Crusoe finds he has set sail on a pirate ship."—Moving Picture World.

CHESTER TO SUPERVISE SCENARIOS FOR MAYO AND WALTON

George Randolph Chester, creator of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," and who is widely known as a magazine writer, has been engaged by Universal to fill an important position in the scenario department at Universal.

Chester will rank as a supervisin editor, and will have jurisdiction over the preparation of material for two producing units—those handling the pictures of Frank Mayo and Gladys Walton.

During the last three years, Mr. Chester has been editor-in-chief for Vitagraph, his last and most important work being the preparation and direction of "The Son of Wallingford," a current success.

ARROW FOREIGN DEAL

D. J. Mountain, manager of Arrow's foreign department, recently closed a contract with the Argentine Foreign Film Co., of Buenos Aires, for 36 five and six reel features.

Arrow also has closed a deal whereby it will handle the foreign rights to all of the Anchor productions. These will comprise about 26 features, a series of 12 two-real monkey comedies and a series of 26 one-reel comedies.

TO PRODUCE IN FAR EAST

The M. P. Utility Corp. will leave San Francisco presently for Japan, where scenes will be filmed for two stories written by Elena Jurado. Kenneth McGaffey, secretary of the company, will go along.

ALDER TO MAKE THREE MORE

W. F. Alder, producer of "The Fire Bride," a Wid Gunning release, recently announced plans to make three more pictures in the Orient. One will be "The Flying Fox," which Edwin Carewe will direct.

persuaded me to sit down on his trick sofa, which is electrically wired and gives one a terrific shock. We all had a hearty laugh at this.

"There have been other studios visited, including Christie's, Charles Ray's, Buster Keaton's, Rex Ingram's, Goldwyn's, Norma Talmadge's and Charlie Chaplin's, and these will be described next week. In the meantime, the committee on investigation of iniquitous Hollywood is hard at it, and if we don't find anything sensational it won't be our fault.

"And by the way, I attended a ball given by the inhabitants of this notorious community themselves. In all the vast crowd, which included everyone of any note in Hollywood, I observed only two people who were degraded enough to carry flasks.

"The other one was Mr. Arthur James, who is also in the magazine business in New York."

Current Reviews

Carolyn Rankin in Aunty and Charlie McHugh playing Mr. Madame Coralie furnish some hilarious moments, while others in the wholly clever cast are Viora Daniel and Mme. Rose Dione.

Charles Van Enger photographed "Be My Wife" pleasingly; Goldwyn distributes the picture.

C. H. Roach, secretary and treasurer of the Hal E. Roach Studios, leaves presently on a trip East. He expects to be gone for about six weeks.
